V. 8. What was begun in pride was now to be carried on by deceit; and the king's avowed attachment to the worship of God, made a religious pretence the most likely to cover Absalom's real design, and procure him his father's leave to go as he desired. And may it not be considered as a proof of the existence of real religion in any age, when men assume the appearance of it to forward selfish and wicked ends? When we hear of persons being convicted of counterfeiting the lawful coin of any country, such conviction becomes a proof that good money was current at that time.

V. 9. Go in peace—The king sends Absalom away with his blessing. It pleased God not to make known to David his son's real design; and David having no evidence for suspecting his son, he did not allow himself to form an harsh judgment from conjecture, and by this it appears, David now possessed much of that Spirit which hopeth all things. (1 Cor. xiii. 7.)

V. 10—12. Absalom made use of spies, whom he had already made parties in his design; others he misled, who went in their simplicity.

Before Christ 1023.

12 And Absalom sent for Ahithophel the Gilonite, David's counsellor, from his city, even from Giloh, while he offered sacrifices: and the conspiracy was strong; for the people increased continually with Absalom.

13 ¶ And there came a messenger to David, saying, The hearts of the men of Israel are after Absalom.

14 And David said unto all his servants that were with him at Jerusalem, Arise, and let us flee; for we shall not else escape from Absalom: make speed to depart, lest he overtake us suddenly, and ‡ bring evil upon us, and smite the city with the edge of the sword.

19 ¶ Then said the king to Ittai the Gittite, Wherefore goest thou also with us? return to thy place, and abide with the king: for thou art a stranger, and also an exile.

20 Whereas thou camest but yesterday, should I this day * make thee go up and down with us? seeing I go whither I may, return thou, and take back thy brethren: mercy and truth be with thee.

* Heb make thee wander in going.

21 And Ittai answered the king, and said, As the Lord liveth, and as my lord the king liveth, surely in what place my lord the king shall be, whether in death or life, even there also will thy servant be.

22 And David said to Ittai, Go, and pass over. And Ittai the Gittite passed over, and all his men, and all the little ones that were with him.

23 And all the country wept with a loud voice, and all the people passed over; the king also himself passed over the brook † Kidron, and all the people passed over, toward the way of the wilderness.

† Called, John 18. 1. Cedron.

24 ¶ And lo, Zadok also, and all the Levites were with him, bearing the ark of the simplicity. By offering sacrifices he gathered together a multitude; as this was an occasion which afforded equal inducements to the pious Israelites as to such as came to partake of the feast. Whilst Absalom was thus forming an head, his spies were kindling the flames of rebellion, and he does not forget to procure his cause the assistance of Ahithophel's policy.

V. 13, 14. On the king's receiving notice of the rebellion, he proposes to his servants that they should flee from Jerusalem; and it pleased God to make use of this as the way by which he obtained the victory. And in this may there not be an example to all, how they shall conduct themselves when their spiritual enemies are coming against them?—Not to stand contending with fierce and wicked spirits, or persons, but rather give place to wrath, (Rom. xii. 19.) and fly by faith to that blood, which, when looked to, quenches all the fiery darts of the wicked. (Eph. vi. 16.)

V. 15. David's servants were willing, with all submission, to obey him in this season of great distress; and by this they shewed what manner of Spirit they were of. And this example is doubtless to be followed by all that would be preserved from evil—To observe well what is required of them by the Prince of Peace; saying to Him in the spirit of their minds—Thy servants are ready to do whatever their lord and king shall appoint—Shewing their love and their true allegiance by their submission.

V. 16. To keep the house—This precaution of David's proved the means by which a part of the judgment of God against David's crime was executed.

V. 17. Far off—In a place remote from any of the public ways, leaving those clear for them who, with Absalom, were wanting to arrive at power and greatness.

V. 18. The king, surrounded by his faithful servants, went the hindmost, which, in flight, is the place of greatest danger. And thus does the Lord and Saviour of men go between such as forsake all to follow him, and every danger, allowing those that love him best to be nearest his person.

V. 19, 20. How does the disinterested generosity of David's mind appear, by his desiring Ittai to return, that he might not be a partaker of the uncertain sufferings the king might be exposed to, but to take the benefit of the protection due to strangers from him whom the people had now made king; and, by this expression, David shews his submission to whatever it might please God to permit to take place. And, in this desire of David's to save those that had come to him from sufferings, he shews himself in this to be a type of the Lord Jesus, who said, when his last sufferings were approaching—If ye seek me, let those, my friends, go their way. (John xviii. 8.) Willing to prevent them the sight of the cruel and unjust treatment he was about to meet with.

V. 21. The attachment of Ittai to David was like that which they find to the Lord, who know in whom they believe.

V. 22. As David was not desirous to have any suffer with him who did not go by choice, so neither would he send any away from him, that chose him for their friend in the time of his humiliation. And thus graciously does the friend of the human race deal with all who are willing to suffer for his name's sake; he sends them not away, but both in life and death, and for ever, it will be, That where he is, there shall his servants be also.

V. 23. The country wept—All that saw and loved the king, or heard of his distress. And all that love the Lord Jesus Christ, will often feel the deepest sorrow for the sufferings which the justice of God required him to feel on their account, the same as if there had been no other sins to be atoned for but their own. The king passed over the brook Kedron—And it was over the same brook that Jesus passed, (John xviii. 1.) when he was going to bear the punishment due to the rebellion of all that received their life and being from him.

V. 24. Abiathar—The High-priest, waited to take all with him who would go with the king. And thus it was when this city was destroyed. The Lord took all under his protection, who the covenant of God, and they set down the ark of God; and Abiathar went up, until all the people had done passing out of the city.

25 And the king said unto Zadok, Carry back the ark of God into the city: if I shall find favour in the eyes of the Lord, he will bring me again, and shew me both it, and his habitation.

26 But if he thus say, I have no delight in thee: behold, here am I, let him do to me as seemeth good unto him.

27 The king said also unto Zadok the 29 Zadok therefore and Abiathar carried the ark of God again to Jerusalem; and they tarried there.

30 ¶ And David went up by the ascent of mount Olivet, [‡] and wept as he went up, and [i] had his head covered, and he went barefoot: and all the people that was with him, [k] covered every man his head, and they went up, [l] weeping as they went up.

professed in that time of danger to call upon his name, and it was not known, as it is reported by common history, that any perished who were known to bear the name of Christ.

V. 25. David was willing that his rebellious son, and all the enemies of his person and government, should have the ark of God's presence with them; and as the ark was at this time, like God's word, to be looked to for the knowledge of his will, David, in this, shewed the mind was in him which was also in Christ Jesus, who prayed, in the moment of his sufferings, that his very murderers might have the mercies of God manifested to them.

V. 26. Let him do to me as seemeth good unto him—Not my will, but the will of God my Redeemer, be done on earth as it is done in heaven. To him that made me, and so loved me as to die to obtain mercy, grace, and future glory for me, I resign my all. All he gave without merit or desert of mine, and it is no other than my bounden duty to submit myself, and whatever his mercy has bestowed upon me, who is too wise to err, and too good in the general dispensations of his providence, to cause or suffer any thing to be done which is inconsistent with himself, or contrary to the highest possible good to all that put their trust in him; which, by thy grace, I now do in thee, my God and my Redeemer.

V. 27. Art not thou a seer—A prophet, to whom God makes known his will. Go amongst my enemies, that I may be informed of their designs, and of what appears best to thee that I should do. And as David defeated the designs of his enemies more by his wisdom than his power, he in this also is a type of the Lord of all, who by his power could, by the least motion of his will, confound all his rebellious creatures, both men and devils; but who shews, by the way in which he governs all things, that as in power, so also in wisdom, justice, goodness, he is God supreme.

V. 28, 29. David told his servants what he expected from them. And thus does God cause it to be made known to all in every station, what it is that he requires at their hands. As soon as David's desire was made known to his servants, they departed accordingly, without answering again.

V. 30. Thus bitterly did David lament the cause of this calamity being inflicted upon him; and thus humbly does he shew his submission to the chastisement from God, at the same time that he prepares to defeat the unjust designs of his enemies, in case it should be the will of God to restore him to his kingdom, after punishing him for the great offences he had committed.

V. 31. When David was informed of Ahithophel's joining the conspiracy, he then makes his request known to God, with whom all the wisdom of man is but foolishness, and who can in all cases, as he did in this, make use of it, as the very occasion of defeating its own designs, and the means of punishing such as use any natural or acquired ability to wicked purposes, instead of devoting them to the glory of God, in promoting whatever is agreeable to his nature and his will.

V. 32. David did not omit, in this season of great difficulty, to worship God. David knew God was a refuge, and a present help in time of trouble; (Psa. xlvi. 1.) and instead of allowing the ill treatment he was now receiving, to prevent his waiting upon God, we see him using private prayer for the particular assistance he stood in need of, and then on the mount publicly worshipped God. And as he was thus employed, the very person came to him, by whose means his prayer was answered in having the wisdom of Ahithophel turned into foolishness. The deceiver of mankind ever going about seeking whom he may devour, all the circumstances in which men can be in, are by him made the means of temptation; and the suggestions of satan's spirit to the mind, are much to be known by their tendency to separate men from God, and to prevent them from living in a spirit of prayer; or, as it is said, praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance. (Eph. vi. 18.) And whether it is by means of prosperous or adverse circumstances that the soul is drawn away, or kept from the Fountain of living waters, it equally answers the design of the tempter, which is to rob God of the glory, and those for whom he died in our nature, of the consolations of his holy Spirit: David's example is therefore ever to be remembered and imitated; and no difficulties, however great; or sufferings, however painful; or appearances of danger, however terrible, are to be allowed to prevent us from keeping our minds staid upon God, (Isa. xxvi. 3.) and of waiting upon him privately and publicly as David now did, and like him laying our wants in particular before him; never forgetting that direction how to pray, and the gracious promise that is made to all that do so. "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son." (John xiv. 13.)

V. 33—36. The directions given by David to Hushai, are evidently that he should deceive Absalom, and that he should do this under the assurances of friendship to him, and after professing as great an attachment to his interest as before he had shewn to David's. Nothing is more certain than that all falsehood and deceit is abhorred of God, and that in no case does he allow of evil being done, that good may come of it. (Rom. iii. 8.) But the difficulty of this passage arises from the success which it pleased God to give to these very directions of David's, and making Hushai's advice, in consequence of them, the means of turning Ahithophel's counsel into foolishness, in answer to David's prayer, and defeating Absalom's designs. The only interpretation which can make the apparent approval which God gave to David's directions, consistent with the divine nature and government, seems to be that of discovering to mankind the use which the Almighty makes of evil angels, in executing his wrath against those that will go on in rebellion against the holy laws, government, and person of God himself, as Absalom did against the person and government of David, who, besides being his natural parent, had restored him his life when he had forfeited it. And if God does make any such use of evil angels, against wicked impenitent men, which David did of Hushai against Absalom, then, by means of this passage, we are made acquainted with a truth, which ought to fill every soul with terror at the very entertainment of any wicked thought or design for a moment; knowing that satan may be allowed by God to transform himself into the resemblance of an angel of light, (2 Cor. xi. 14.) and by his suggestions lead them (that will enter upon designs contrary to their duty to God and men) to adopt such measures as shall work their ruin, that every soul of man, looking back on the causes of its own misery and final banishment from God, may only have to charge itself with being the author of its own ruin, by consenting to and wilfully obeying that which it knew, and was inwardly conscious of at the time, was contrary to the nature and will of God, as the same is made known by his works, his word, his government, and his grace to all mankind. And not only so, but that every lost soul may see itself also the sole author of its own ruin, by the very means by which its final sufferings were brought upon it, and of which they, from their hearts, as much approved and followed as Absalom did the advice of Hushai, by which his rebellion against his king and father, and the saviour of his life, was turned into his own destruction. And when it is considered what additional motives such a discovery of the nature of God's government gives to every thinking mind to regard his holy will, and to live dependant upon him, avoiding the very appearance of evil; then there is nothing inconsistent with God, in giving that success which David's directions to Hushai were attended with. And this discovery of danger, to the authors of every wicked purpose by the agency of evil spirits, represented by the use which David made of Hushai, seems to be confirmed by the execution of the Divine displeasure against Ahab king of Israel, (2 Chron. xviii.) where the LORD says, "Who shall entice Ahab, that he may go up and fall. Then there came out a spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will entice him. And the Lord said unto him, Wherewith? And he (the evil spirit) said, I will go out, and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the LORD said, Thou shalt entice him, and thou also shalt prevail: go out and do even so." So that in this place, as in the case of David and Hushai, the Almighty in effect says to all mankind, Let them that will continue in a state of enmity to me in their hearts, or in any sin in their lives, fear lest I send them strong delusion that they believe a lie, and look for their security in the very courses which shall bring upon them that death and misery which they have exposed themselves to by choosing darkness and evil, rather than that light and grace which Christ Jesus died to obtain, and which the love and faithfulness of God the Father and the Son is engaged, by their covenant with each other, to send to every soul of man that cometh into the world. And against the dictates and influence of this blessed Spirit on the conscience, men must become wilfully guilty of doing despite (Heb. x. 29.) or, like Absalom, commit rebellion, in order to forfeit for themselves their inheritance in the second Adam, and bring upon themselves those secret and unknown judgments of the Most High, which none can avoid who are found without repentance for sin, and without faith in the only Mediator between God and men.

V. 37. Hushai and Absalom came into Jerusalem—The criminal and the executioner entered the city at the same time.

CHAP. XVI.

V. 1—4. Ziba's accusation against his master was not true, but David believed it, and gave judgment accordingly. Ziba's seasonable presents and seeming affection to David in his distress, might lead him to think Ziba incapable of such a selfish and wicked design at the same moment. And in this we have an instance, how soon wise and pious men may be misled by wicked men, or wicked spirits. Men err in not knowing, or not regarding the Scriptures.

To pronounce judgment againſt the accuſed unheard, was no leſs a departure from what God required at that time than he does at this. And this example of David's being miſled, ſpeaks as loudly to the children and ſervants of God to be upon their guard againſt ſatan's devices, as the deceitful counſel to Abſalom does to wicked men of the danger to which they ſtand expoſed, till they truly turn unto God.

V. 5—8. David had expreſſed his reſignation to the will of God; and now the grace which God had given him was to be tried, (Dan. xii. 10.) which was done by Shimei's means, who, judging by appearances, concluded, from God's ſending this great calamity to David, it was the ſame thing as caſting him off for ever; and then thinking a ſeaſon of diſtreſs the fitteſt for ſhewing contempt, Shimei proceeded to take, as he thought, God's ſide againſt David. And in doing this, he only did what is common to all men uninfluenced by the grace of God. Not conſidering, or not knowing, that God chaſteneth and ſcourgeth every ſon whom he receiveth; (Heb. xii. 6.) and not thinking that there can be any greater marks of God's diſpleaſure than afflictions or diſtreſs in this life, the natural mind concludes, that God muſt be againſt thoſe that are ſeen to ſuffer, and eſpecially ſuch as may be caſt down, in ſome degree as David was, into great and ſudden difficulties; and if to theſe circumſtances the ſufferer ſhould be one of an oppoſite party, then it is only to be expected that every man in his natural ſtate will proceed, as Shimei did, from judging to condemning, and from condemning to the execution of their own ſentence; verily thinking within themſelves, that they ought to do many things againſt thoſe that many are againſt. (Acts xxvi. 9.)

V. 9. Let me, I pray thee, take off his head—The ſervant of David was of the ſame mind with the diſciple of Jeſus in the ſeaſon of his ſufferings, when, with a ſword, he cut off the ear of the high prieſt's ſervant; but this was not the ſpirit by which the king of Iſrael, or the King of Glory, were to obtain the victory over all their enemies.

V. 10. Let him curſe—It is my duty to ſubmit to it as from God, who is pleaſed to leave him to himſelf, to expreſs that bitterneſs againſt me, which my crimes againſt God have entitled me to. And as it is his ſentence I am now ſuffering, and not man's, Who ſhall attempt, by word or deed, to oppoſe this execution of his righteous judgment?

V. 11. The Lord hath bidden him—He could have had no power or reſolution to have done this, had it not been given him for the purpoſe of declaring the diſpleaſure of God againſt my ſins in the hearing of you all; and that it might be known to all men, that none are too great to be judged by God, nor none ever ſo high in his favour on this ſide the grave, to paſs uncondemned, if they give way to folly and ſin.

V. 12. David only hoped for the mercy of God by a patient humble ſubmiſſion to his will. Are any retaining, or in the way of receiving the mercy and grace of God, whoſe hearts do not ſubmit to this preparation for the anſwer of faith?

V. 13. The ſtones were thrown to ſhew that David, for his crimes, deſerved to be ſtoned to death; and they were not allowed to hurt his perſon, to ſhew that God, for the ſake of the promiſed Seed, had forgiven his ſins, and accepted him again into his favour.

V. 14. The king, and all the people, came weary—And thus in wearineſs and heavineſs do they go, whom God is viſiting for their offences, though they are in the way by which He is leading them to receive all that they have left.

V. 15. It is not ſaid of Abſalom, and all that were with him, that they felt either ſorrow or fatigue: having obtained poſſeſſion of the chief city in the kingdom, to them all things now appeared proſperous; but could they have ſeen their ſituation at that time, as we now ſee it, how unſuitable might their thoughts and temper of mind have appeared to them.—Confuſion, fear, death, as the ſentence of God, was ſoon to be inflicted on thouſands of them. And what ſentence is it which now hangs ſuſpended over all that are not born again of the Spirit unto God, and are not living by faith in the Son of his love? (Mark xvi. 16. John iii. 5.)

V. 16. God ſave the king—This was the addreſs of Huſhai to Abſalom, by which he gives him to underſtand, that he thought him entitled to all he claimed by his rebellion. It was an addreſs to the pride of the prince's heart. And in this way it is that the deceiver of men ſuggeſts to every ſoul of man, that they have a

MOreover, Ahithophel ſaid unto Abſalom, Let me now chooſe out twelve thouſand men, and I will ariſe and purſue after David this night.

2 And I will come upon him while he is weary and weak-handed, and will make him afraid: and all the people that are with him ſhall flee, and I will ſmite the king only.

3 And I will bring back all the people unto thee: the man whom thou ſeekeſt, is as if all returned: ſo all the people ſhall be in peace.

4 And the ſaying * pleaſed Abſalom well, and all the elders of Iſrael.

juſt right to all they ſet their hearts upon; and then, being perſuaded of this, they are prepared for the temptation, to uſe the means which he will alſo ſuggeſt to them in order to obtain what they vainly thought, and thus have been to believe themſelves entitled to; or if they cannot be led on to obtain the ends they have propoſed to themſelves by the uſe of unjuſt means, they are prepared for the temptation to murmur at their lot, and live diſcontented at meeting with ſo much worſe treatment under the government of God, than they have allowed themſelves to believe they deſerve. But when the deceiver would thus make us think highly of what we have a right to, ſhould not the thoughts be turned upon that which we have known of ourſelves, and then the queſtion aſked, What is it that I deſerve from Him that made me, preſerves me, and died for me?

V. 17. Abſalom—Does not vouchſafe to call David his father, but ſpeaks of him as the friend of Huſhai. And Abſalom in thus renouncing his relation to David, as before he had done his allegiance to him as king, did that which every one does who lives without God in the world—Regardleſs of his will and laws, and unconcerned about the near relation which there originally was, and which by the atonement made by JESUS, there ſtill is between God and man. And if God our Creator, King, and Redeemer, is not feared, honoured, and loved by us, have we not cauſe to believe that we have ſpiritually and in truth renounced both our allegiance and relation? To him that believeth God in Chriſt Jeſus is precious: And not to love GOD, is to be living, as Abſalom was, in a ſtate of rebellion againſt his great, holy, and Almighty command to all his rational creatures—"Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, ſoul, mind, ſtrength."

V. 18, 19. Here alſo Huſhai diſcovers the character of the father of lies, and endeavours to make Abſalom believe, that he looks upon his title to be no leſs than a divine right, meeting with the people's choice; thus intending to hide from him the ſight of his own wicked deſign to depoſe his father, and raiſe himſelf to his crown by rebellion. By this means Huſhai gains a ſecond paſſage to Abſalom's heart: He firſt making him believe that he had the beſt right to all he deſired to have, and then that there was nothing unworthy in his conduct, in the way by which he was going to obtain poſſeſſion of that which he had perſuaded him he was entitled to. And thus ſatan makes thoſe believe, that are deceived by him, that they have a right to what he has tempted them to ſet their hearts upon; and, that they may go on with greater confidence to their ruin, he endeavours to give them the higheſt opinion of themſelves, and that in their circumſtances they are juſtified in all they have done, though it may have been no leſs criminal than rebellion; and when all ſenſe of paſt crimes are hid from the mind, it is prepared either for the commiſſion of new crimes, or the continuance of old ones.

V. 20—23. Abſalom, who himſelf had begun the rebellion, now aſks counſel of thoſe that had united with him, as to the beſt way of conducting their common cauſe. The anſwer given him was deſigned to make a reconciliation with the king, his father, impoſſible, in the opinion of all the people of his party; that they might all engage in his cauſe, not with any doubt whether it was to be finally proceeded in or not. Abſalom's deſign was wicked, and wickedneſs was made the bond of union amongſt all his party. And thus did Abſalom and his adherents reſemble ſatan, and all the angels that united themſelves to him, and fell with him. They determined upon an irreconcilable rebellion againſt the King of Glory; and it is ever their deſign to lead every ſoul of man to become a party to their cauſe, by committing crimes which ſhall render their return to God impoſſible in their own eſteem. And when the grace of God enlightens the mind from darkneſs, and ſhews it both its ſin and danger, and draws it, as with cords of love, to return to its God and Saviour, this ſuggeſtion of ſatan's becomes the great difficulty—Thou haſt committed crimes, like Abſalom, which cut off all hopes of forgiveneſs. Temptations to deſpair are then poured in, in order to complete what pride, preſumption, ſelf-eſteem, and diſobedience began and continued.

CHAP. XVII.

V. 1—4. Ahithophel's advice was to purſue without delay, and to bend their force againſt the perſon of the king; that having deſtroyed him, they might by fear controul the whole kingdom. This advice pleaſed Abſalom and all the elders of Iſrael. And was it not againſt the King and Saviour of men, when he was on earth, that ſatan and his angels directed their force? and is not all this their their rage directed with all their wisdom against his name—his nature, his kingdom in the hearts of men, that their apostate power may be established over all.

V. 5—14. The spirit of the Lord had suggested to David to pray that Ahithophel's counsel might be turned into foolishness; and David worshipping God by faith in the promised Saviour, God could not deny himself, but his assistance being implored through the Son of his love, the LORD appointed to defeat the good—the wise counsel of Ahithophel; and the deceitful counsel of Hushai, addressed to the pride of Absalom's heart, produced this effect. The thoughts of going in his own person at the head of all Israel was too pleasing to the vanity of the natural mind, to allow him to listen to any advice that appeared less flattering to himself; and satan, ever ready to cast fuel on the flame of human pride, would not fail to keep before the mind of Absalom, the vain-glorious and deceitful image which Hushai had painted to his view—That all Israel must be on Absalom's side, and that by the greatness of their power he might perform all his pleasure, if it was even to draw a whole city from its place. And thus does satan and his angels, in order to devour, flatter with wild conceits of the great things which poor, frail, vain and sinful men shall be enabled to perform, leading all that will be led by them, to forget or disregard that pride in man is resisted and opposed by God himself: Whilst it exists in thought or design, it is resisted by the HOLY SPIRIT, the sole author of all that is truly wise or good in the mind of man; and when pride shews itself by vain or proud words or actions, then the providence and government of God resists it, to the end that every thing may be cast down and confounded, that exalts itself against the nature and will of the Almighty Creator, Governor, and Judge of all.

V. 15, 16. Hushai, knowing how little dependance was to be placed on any resolutions which those came to, whose designs or actions were not governed by the fear of God, lost no time in guarding David against the advice Ahithophel had given.

V. 17. En-rogel—The fullers well, to which place the wench—the young woman was sent with this secret intelligence. And by this we see that those that are faithful to the king of Israel are to be confided in, whatever age or sex they are of, so far as they are capable to execute that with which they are entrusted. We have here a discovery made to us of the nature of God's government of all human concerns by his providence, under which the smallest means and weakest instruments are often made to produce the greatest events. God, in delivering David, was pleased to employ a poor young woman to act a most important part. To her, as the instrument, David owed his life and his restoration to his kingdom. Had she been unfaithful, and betrayed the secret to Absalom, Ahithophel's counsel would doubtless have been immediately resorted to. God can defeat the designs of the wicked, and preserve them that fear him when and how he pleases; but considering the consequences which God was pleased should arise to David, his kingdom, and to all mankind, from this young woman's faithfulness, with what joy, for ages past, may her happy spirit have been looking back with gratitude to God, whose grace enabled her, and whose providence employed her to discharge a duty to those he favoured, and which should be the means of her being loved of God her Saviour, and by all the Redeemed for ever.

How ſatisfied may all be with the ſtate and ſituation which God has given them in this life, when none, however they may be conſidered by ſuch as know not God, are too little or weak to be uſed for purpoſes which ſhall for ever redound to his glory and their happineſs. And thus it is, that gladneſs is ſown to the upright in heart. (Pſal. xcvii. 11.) Every remembrance of faithfulneſs to grace given, will be much more precious than treaſures of gold to the deceived ſoul of the miſer. (1 Pet. i. 7.)

V. 20. Abſalom's ſervants immediately purſued. The ſervants of the wicked one obey their maſter's will with diligence. They be gone—They were not gone. Abſalom's unjuſt cauſe had here again an enemy in one, whoſe mind, like Huſhai's, was not now ſanctified by, nor ſubject to, the ſpirit of truth; and in this we have another inſtance of mercies ſtrange work, in over-ruling all things for the good of thoſe that hope in his mercy. As the wrath of God turns his very bleſſings into curſes to the wicked, ſo alſo his mercy brings good out of evil to them that fear him.

V. 21, 22. David had ſtill further to fly from before his enemies, and which he does without the leaſt murmur or complaint at this addition to his ſufferings, inflicted upon him by this unnatural rebellion.

V. 23. Abſalom approving of Huſhai's advice, and the elders of Iſrael concurring with the judgment of their prince, was a public declaration againſt Ahithophel's reputation; an injury which he could not reſent by going over to David, his firſt counſel to Abſalom forbidding all hopes of reconcilliation: And the fears he had of being ſoon left expoſed to David's reſentment, by the weakneſs with which he ſaw Abſalom was conducting his cauſe, would increaſe the diſtraction of his mind. Pride, vexation, and fear being now raiſed, the devourer of ſouls was furniſhed with matter for temptation; but with all the advantages Ahithophel's ſtate of mind gave ſatan to prevail upon him to deſtroy himſelf, and eſcape from the diſgrace that made him miſerable, and from the danger he feared, there was on the other hand an high degree of human prudence, and the natural love of ſelf-preſervation. But theſe were found too weak to ſtand againſt the wiles of ſatan and paſſions of the ſoul. He put his houſhold in order—He had been accuſtomed to conduct himſelf with too exact a prudence, to leave any thing belonging to this life unſettled; and when he had done all that was due to his own character, then he made himſelf an example, to the end of the world, of his being weaker and leſs patient than the moſt timorous or furious of the irrational creatures, which are, perhaps, rarely known to kill themſelves, either from paſſion or fear of being killed; and as an immortal ſoul he was at enmity with God, and thoſe that feared him, in rebellion againſt his known will, miſerable in himſelf, and taking his own party, whom he would have governed by his wicked counſel; and thus he died ſelf-deſtroyed, an emblem of that apoſtate ſpirit which fell from heaven, unable to endure his gracious preſence againſt whom he had himſelf determined to offend, beyond all poſſibility of reconciliation.

V. 24. Abſalom purſued after the king his father, leading all the rebellious Iſraelites againſt him and his ſervants. And thus do the rebellious powers of darkneſs war, with reſtleſs rage, againſt the prince of peace, and all that obey his gracious will.

V. 25, 26. Who could behold all theſe thouſands of Iſrael preparing themſelves to fight againſt parents, brethren, and their neareſt kindred, without enquiring what ſad cauſe had produced ſuch dire enmity in men to men; or why it could be, that men, who are convinced of their mortality by univerſal experience, ſhould ſo highly value the things of earth, which ſo ſoon they muſt leave for ever, as to hazard their own lives, or be willing to take thoſe of their kindred mortals in order to obtain? Who can behold ſavage beaſts living in their native woods till they die of old age, unhurt by kindred beaſts as ſavage as themſelves, and not inquire what ſad calamity has befallen the human race, to make them, with all their reaſon, more greedy of obtaining the objects of ſight and ſenſe, than beaſts of prey are of their neceſſary food?

V. 27—29. How ſeaſonable did theſe preſents come to David and his ſervants? Thus does the Parent of all good mix his mercies with the ſeverity which he is conſtrained by his love to uſe to men, that he may correct them for their wilful reſiſtance of his grace,

CHAP. XVIII.

V. 1, 2, 3. David numbered—Took an exact account of all that had joined him, and appointed the officers, giving the command of the army to Three, having equal authority, and then declares his resolution to go with them himself into the field; but the people object to this, and shew their love to their prince, by preferring his safety to every other consideration. And thus do the faithful servants of the Lord of all, ever find themselves most concerned for those things which belong to him whom their souls love, and who they delight to serve, like the faithful Israelites, at the hazard of their lives.

V. 4. What seemeth you best, I will do—How easy does David shew himself to be entreated.

V. 5. Deal gently, for my sake—With my son, tho' he is at the head of the rebellion. David had before shewn his penitence, and his entire resignation to whatever God should be pleased to appoint; but he does not allow his sufferings, his sorrows, or his difficulties to prevent him from attending to the duties of the station in which God had placed him. Called upon by a sense of duty, he calmly and resolutely does all that was required of him as king of Israel; and when prevented from hazarding his life in the field by the general voice of the people, as one already acquainted that his servants would be victorious, he shews how ready he was to moderate the punishment due to his guilty son.

V. 6. The people went out—Under the command of the king's generals, when Absalom, and all the thousands that were with him, advanced so near, as to shew they were finally determined to trust to their own strength and numbers, in opposition to the king, and hazard their All on the event of the battle. They demand no concessions to be made them by the king, and he makes no offers of peace to those that were resolved only on war.

V. 9. Absalom, unable to resist the force of his father's servants, fled, and in his flight his hair, which appears to have been an occasion of his increase of pride, was the means of his being caught up between the heaven and the earth.

V. 10—13. The use Absalom made of the few moments between his being in rebellion and his death is not told, therefore that great day which is to come, can only shew whether he will have his place assigned him by the final judgment, where that rich man lift up his eyes in torments, never to be abated, (Luke xvi. 19.) or, with him who had not done the last despite to the Spirit of God, till he hung upon the cross, and there cast himself upon the 24 And David sat betweeen the two gates: and the watchman went up to the roof over the gate unto the wall, and lift up his eyes, and looked, and behold, a man running alone.

25 And the watchman cried, and told the king. And the king said, If he be alone, there is tidings in his mouth. And he came apace, and drew near.

26 And the watchman saw another man running, the compassion of his Redeemer, who, by his side, suffered the same cruel death, and paid the price of his salvation, (Luke xxiii. 40, &c.) and that salvation neglected, (Heb. ii. 3.) Alas! what a poor compensation would Israel's crown, and the command of armed multitudes, make to an immortal spirit?

V. 14. Joab took three darts, and thrust them through the heart of Absalom—And this was that Joab that had made himself the mediator in the same Absalom's behalf, when he had forfeited his life, before, to the justice of his father. And shall man's mediator and advocate with God the Father, thus, like Joab, execute the last decrees of his own justice upon all that die in rebellion against God? Shall the compassionate Jesus himself be heard to say to the finally impenitent—Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels? (Matt. xxv. 41.)

V. 15. These young men finally executed the sentence of Joab. And thus will the angels execute the last sentence of the Almighty Judge, and cast down to endless death, those that have wilfully spent their state of trial in rebellion against the power, justice, and love of God their Maker and Redeemer. (Matt. xiii. 41, 42.)

V. 16, 17. Joab blew the trumpet—To recal all the king's army; and Joab held them back, that all that joined in the rebellion might have opportunity to escape from immediate death. And how often will it appear, that JESUS shall have held back the wrath due to the crimes of every soul of man? Who can number how often he hath offended; and who can count the mighty debt of gratitude due for that compassion, which spared so often and so long, till mercy was embraced, and the grace of God obeyed?

V. 18. Absalom, in his life-time, desirous of having his name to live in the esteem of men, reared up a pillar. Who ought not daily to ask their own breasts, Am I building—living, labouring for fame, praise, a name among dying mortals? How shall I believe to the saving of my soul if I am? (John v. 44) Absalom, forgetful of his duty to God, not living as became a descendant of faithful Abraham, instead of his name being honoured, his very person, though a king's son, was treated as that of an infamous person. GOD only honours those that fear, love, and honour him.

V. 19, 20. Joab would not have Ahimaaz be the messenger of what was done, because he knew the death of Absalom would be the occasion of sorrow to the king's compassionate mind, and not the means of advancing Ahimaaz in his favour. This shews how tender Joab was over the interests of those he loved, immediately after his severity to Absalom. And thus full of good-will is the Saviour of men to all that fear him, and hope in his mercy, at the moment he makes others examples of his displeasure.

V. 21. Bowed himself, and ran—And is it not thus that every true believer waits to receive the Almighty's will with devout submission, and then with diligent obedience to execute it?

V. 22. Ahimaaz, only intent on being the messenger of the victory of Joab, he again requests to go. And thus, when the Believer's will is lost in the will of God, the duty they are called to discharge to him, be it painful or pleasant to those to whom they are sent, it is alike to them, so as they do but prove their love to him who first loved them.

V. 23. Ahimaaz over-ran Cushi—They that are most conscious of their gracious Master's love, are most speedy in doing his pleasure.

V. 24—26. Between the two gates—The inner and the outer gate, that none might pass without his notice; and to the king the watchman reported what he saw. And is not that soul blessed, who, like the watchman on the tower, allows not a thought to approach, running, and the watchman called unto the porter, and said, Behold, another man running alone. And the king said, He also bringeth tidings.

approach, without reporting what it appears to be to its Heavenly King, who is the strict observer of every heart, and who will acquaint the cautious mind with the character of the spirits he has commanded all his children and servants to try. (1 John iv. 1.)

V. 27. A good man—A believer in the God of my salvation, and one that loves and honours his prince, and would never fly from danger; he therefore brings good tidings.

V. 28. Blessed be the Lord—Praise to God was the introduction to his message to the king.

V. 29. I knew not—Ahimaaz, you did know. Joab told you (v. 20.) the death of Absalom was his reason for not making you the messenger of the victory. Now you perceived what Joab knew before would be unwelcome news to the king; and with this you found how hard a task it is, even to a mind softened with charity, to make known painful or unwelcome truths to those that are loved and honoured.

V. 31, 32. Cushi does not begin with praise, but he ascribes the victory to God, the giver of it; and he, less fearful of delivering an unwelcome message, escaped the crime which Ahimaaz had committed. But Cushi was sent of Joab, and Ahimaaz was himself desirous of being sent.

V. 33. Who can conceive the deep distress of David's mind on this occasion? The circumstances under which his son died, were such as could not fail to be most affecting to a parent now thoroughly awakened to a sense of eternal things. But what must Infinite Love feel for the fall of angels and of men, and for those he died to restore, but who die in rebellion against him?

CHAP. XIX.

V. 1—4. And who can refrain from mourning, with David, over those that are slain in battle, that considers all such fierce contests come from men's lusts and passions, (James iv. 1.) which war against the present and endless peace of the soul, and are, in their very nature, opposed to that Divine charity of spirit in which men only are what God requires them to be, under the dreadful penalty of being after death excluded from his presence. And though men may die as much strangers and enemies to God in their own houses as in a field of battle, yet who, that does but use their reflection so much as to consider that the love of God, and, for his sake, the love of all our fellow-creatures, is the end of all religion, and the final requisite for future blessedness, (1 Cor. xiii. 8.) who can think, without a mixture of horror and of sorrow, of immortal souls rushing into the eternal world from the very act of destroying those whom God hath commanded us to love as ourselves. David had for the cause of his sorrow, besides natural affection and the ordinary danger to the endless peace of the slain, the additional fear arising from the highly criminal motives which engaged his son in the war, and ended in his death.

vent him from injuring himſelf, by giving way to the paſſionate ſorrow he felt for his ſon's death, and by neglecting his immediate duty to his friend and to himſelf. And, is not the example of his faithfulneſs to be imitated by all in whoſe power it is, by any means, to inform others of the danger they, like David, may be expoſing themſelves to, by giving way to any paſſion of the mind, and going on in the neglect of any duty, or the commiſſion of any crime, which, if continued in, muſt be fatal to their everlaſting intereſts? Conſidering all with whom we are now nearly connected, and whoſe lives are intimately known to us; and if we have ſufficient grounds to believe, as Joab did in the caſe of David, that the courſe they are taking may ſoon end in their ruin, what anſwer ſhall we make for ourſelves to the Judge of all, when we ſhall be tried by that part of his declared will—Thou ſhalt in anywiſe rebuke thy neighbour, and not ſuffer ſin upon him, (Lev. xix. 17.) if we will not humbly and affectionately admoniſh them of their danger?

V. 8. The king roſe—Convinced that the advice of Joab was juſt and ſeaſonable.

V. 9, 10. The king—David ſaved us, and delivered us; and Abſalom, whom we anointed king in his ſtead, is dead; and all the people were at ſtrife among themſelves who ſhould be firſt to bring the king back, now the rebellion was cruſhed, which they themſelves had countenanced and ſupported. Who can read ſuch diſcoveries of the folly, the ſhameleſs impudence, the treachery, and wickedneſs of the mind of man, when left to itſelf, without the grace of God, and not inquire whether we ourſelves have not cauſe to believe that theſe men's hearts were like the hearts of all men in their natural ſtate. (Jer. xvii. 9.) And if we cannot make out our right to a nature of our own of greater dignity and worth, how ſhall we eſcape the miſery and reproach due to ſouls like theſe, if we neglect to inquire if God has not provided any remedy for a malady, which ſhocks us when we ſee it, ſhewn in its native horrid colours, in the conduct of our fellow-creatures?

V. 11, 12. This meſſage to the elders of Judah, is to ſhew the king's willingneſs to be reconciled to them, who, againſt the greateſt motives to the contrary, had been the foremoſt in ſupporting the rebellion. And thus does the Father of Mercies ſhew his willingneſs to be reconciled to the moſt guilty of mankind who will but receive him. (John i. 12.)

V. 13, 14. Amaſa—Abſalom's late general. This was an offer of mercy to him by name, leſt he ſhould think himſelf excluded by the king from all poſſibility of pardon, being now the firſt perſon who had been in the rebellion. And mercy being offered to the greateſt criminal then living, he, by the report of his reconciliation to the king, bowed the hearts of all the men of Judah to ſubmit themſelves to a prince ſo gracious and ready to forgive, and to receive to his favour thoſe that had moſt offended him. And thus does God, by means of the king of Iſrael, ſhew how by force he conquers all the powers of darkneſs and rebellious men; but, at the time he does ſo, being himſelf the Parent and Redeemer of men, he, without reſentment againſt any who yet remain in a ſtate of trial, offers pardon and grace to all who will receive him as their king and Saviour.

V. 15. So the king returned—As God, by his grace, does to every heart of man that meets the offers of his mercy and his love. (Rev. iii. 20.)

V. 16, 17. Shimei, the curſing Benjamite, and Ziba, the ſelf-intereſted ſervant of the ſon of Jonathan, join the multitude to meet the king; Shimei from fear of puniſhment, Ziba from hope of gain.

V. 18—23. Shimei confeſſed his ſin, and the king ſware unto him, Thou ſhalt not die. And thus God, willing more abundantly to ſhew mercy to men, hath confirmed it by an oath, that whoſoever will fly for refuge from the wrath which is revealed from heaven againſt all unrighteouſneſs in men, and lay hold of the hope ſet before us in the promiſed Seed, the Meſſiah of the Jews, the only Mediator between God and man—Jesus, he ſhall ſave his people from the juſt condemnation due to their ſins, and they ſhall not die but live—live, to praiſe the mercy and grace of the God of their ſalvation. 38 And

V. 24—30. Mephibosheth—Had the marks of being a sincere mourner for the sufferings of the king, and he makes no attempt to justify himself, till called upon by the king to do so; and, after saying he was unjustly accused, he entirely submits his cause to the king, acknowledging that his bounty had already left him nothing to ask; and when the king proved him, by giving Ziba half of what he had, instead of Mephibosheth complaining that the king had wronged him, he shews he was willing to part with all he had, his kind benefactor being now returned in peace. The conduct of Mephibosheth is the language of a soul whose portion the Lord is, and who desires to possess nothing but the gracious presence of God its Saviour, whilst, on the other hand, Ziba's conduct is that of one who would have gone away grieved, if the king had not granted him some increase to his wealth. And thus are they many times indulged with the desires of their hearts in perishable possessions, who will not look for their portion and exceeding great reward in the Fountain of real blessedness.

V. 31—40. The behaviour of Barzillai to the king, is expressive of the spirit of one willing to assist the cause of his Lord with his property, and to do his utmost to shew respect to his person, without looking for any other return than a place in his favour. And by David's desiring to have Barzillai with him at his court, and then of shewing favour to Chimham, as being that which was most acceptable to Barzillai, we are given to understand the gracious dealings of the Lord, who is ever intent on doing whatever is most acceptable to all that confess his name, and shew respect to his service.

CHAP. XX.

V. 1, 2. From the 41st verse of the last chapter to this place, we have a short account of the contest between the men of Israel and Judah; which concludes with the turning away of every man of Israel from David, because they could not have the merit of receiving him to his kingdom, according to their own pleasure, which, from their numbers, they thought they had a right to. And this is an example of the spirit of those, who after having been in rebellion against the Lord by wicked works, and have, by the grace of God, desires of reconciliation given them, instead of submitting to the Heavenly King on his own terms, they will not have him to reign over them, if they are not to receive him agreeable to their own wishes; they therefore turn away from HIM, whom God hath sent to give everlasting life to all that receive him. (John i. 12. and xvii. 3.) And the prince of the power of the air, ever reigning where the Spirit of God does not, satan never wants a Sheba among the children of disobedience, as a visible head of rebellion and opposition to the living God. And Judah's cleaving unto their king, because, as they said verse 42, The king is near of kin to us, is no less a representation of all true believers, who are joined unto the Lord in his own Spirit; and they go with him from Jordan even to Jerusalem—They pass with him from a country—a state of war, into Canaan the country of peace; and sanctified by his grace, by whose mercy they were freely justified, they cleave—are faithful to the end; and then, with the captain of their salvation, they return to Jerusalem above, to reign with their king and Saviour for ever.

V. 3. Till their death—These were taken away from the presence of the king, for not having been faithful to their Lord at the hazard of their lives.

V. 4—10. Amasa died—He tarried—The king's business required haste, but he stayed beyond the time fixed by the king, and in doing so he lost his life. Whatsoever thy Lord gives thee in charge, execute his will without delay, lest death finds thee tarrying

V. 16—22. The wiſe woman cried to Joab, as the Spirit maketh interceſſion in the ſoul to Jeſus; and, with Joab, the Lord anſwers his own Spirit's cry, That he will not deſtroy, if his rebellious ſubjects will relinquiſh their head, and ſubmit themſelves to the Lord's anointed. The people of Iſrael did ſo, and then Joab returned to Jeruſalem, having caſt down Sheba, who had exalted himſelf, and deſired to reign as a king equal with David.

V. 23—26. After David had ſubdued his enemies, he ſettled all things for governing his people in peace; giving to different men, according to their ſeveral abilities, a ſhare in the adminiſtration, as the Governor of the church and of the world does to all his providence places in every ſtation wherein to ſpend their life of trial.

C H A P. XXI.

V. 1—9. Joſhua and the princes of Iſrael had taken a ſolemn oath, that the Gibeonites ſhould enjoy peace and ſafety amongſt the Iſraelites, on the terms of their agreement. In violation of this contract, Saul fought—was deſirous of finding a pretence to deſtroy the Gibeonites in his zeal to the children of Iſrael, to ſhew how much he was devoted to the public ſervice, by allowing none of another nation to mix amongſt them, and partake in any degree of their general mercies. This wrong oppreſſion being public, and no ſorrow having been expreſſed for it on the part of the Iſraelites, nor any ſatisfaction made to the ſurviving Gibeonites; God, the righteous Judge of all the earth, never unmindful of the conduct of his creatures to each other, ſent a famine to puniſh his people, that he might ſhew himſelf the friend of the helpleſs, and the enemy of all wickedneſs, whether it was committed by the king and people of Egypt, or of Iſrael. thought any thing more than what might arise from natural causes; but David considering the calamity, it seems to have occurred to him, that the gracious Father and Governor of the world does not needlessly grieve or afflict the children of men, he was led to inquire of the Lord the cause of this calamity; and he, who is more ready to hear than we are to pray, immediately answered, That it was the ill-treatment shewn to the Gibeonites, a people weaker than they. And David knowing when God was offended, that without repentance, a confession of and forsaking of sin, that they had no grounds to hope for the mercy of God, he does not wait to confer with flesh and blood, but immediately asks the people, who had been so unjustly and cruelly treated, What, in their esteem, would be a sufficient compensation for the wrong they had suffered. David complies with what they demanded, and seven men of the family of Saul were made public examples of God's displeasure against those that oppress such as are in their power. And David made this sacrifice, that the injured Gibeonites might bless—pray for the people of Israel, that God would turn away his wrath. David preserved Mephibosheth, for his father Jonathan's sake, from suffering in the number required to be given up. Thus does God shew the greatness of his love for them that fear him, by extending his care to their children, and exempting them from suffering when he visits others for their sins, and the wickedness of their fathers. God has given to men every possible motive to live by his laws both as individuals and communities, by multiplying his mercies to those that fear to offend him, and by sparing none that do wickedly, till true repentance and forsaking the evil takes place, and such reparation is made as the nature of the case admits of. And nothing being more plainly made known, than the laws by which God judges the earth, (Ps. vii. 11. and lviii. 11.) was it not that all men are in their natural state without God in the world, and deceived by their own hearts in judging of the most certain truths, it would be a matter of wonder how it could possibly be, that any man, or any number of men, could ever, for an hour together, act upon the persuasion that, as individuals to other individuals, or as one nation to another, they might do that which was unjust or unmerciful, and as the consequence of doing so, that they for themselves, or their offspring after them, would reap present or future peace, happiness, or real prosperity; and this under the government of a BEING, every where present to observe the very spirit of the whole conduct of all his rational creatures, and to judge them according to his own nature of justice, mercy, and truth. By the infidelity and ignorance which is discovered by whatever is untrue, unjust, unmerciful, or wicked, as well as by the infamy of such conduct, wherever it appears, all men are taught the necessity of looking for the communication of that grace of God, without which no degree of mere human knowledge can truly shew us, that all true policy and wisdom is laid in the fear of God; and that for men to propose to themselves safety, peace, and happiness, from any designs or measures, let the present advantages or necessity of them appear as they will, is no other than to propose to themselves success in a conduct, which proceeds on principles that are directly contrary to all right reason, experience, and the very nature of things. Surely the works of God, the judgments of God, his word, and every other discovery of his just, holy, and gracious nature and will, are to shew to all men, that such as expect that which is good to themselves from that which in its nature is morally evil, give the same proof of their want of acquaintance with God, and the laws by which he hath declared he governs the earth, and will finally judge all men, as they would do of their ignorance and presumption who should assure themselves of their safety, their success, or their happiness, on an expectation that to make way for them to obtain the objects of their ambition, their pleasure, their gain, or self-will, the elements should no longer have the properties, and produce the effects which by all experience they are found to do. And that he who, with Saul, is guilty of oppression, like Sheba, rebels against just laws, or commits any other crime, as the way to obtain some real benefit to himself, or those he means to serve, he acts no less against the nature and will of God and that which is truly for his own good, than he does against the nature of things and his own safety, who proceeds on the presumption that the fire will not burn, or that a man may at his pleasure walk upon the surface of the sea. Sooner or later God visits every man, every nation, for sin. On true repentance and faith in his mercy, through the Son of his love, God will pardon all; but this example of his punishing his chosen people, in the reign of David his chosen king, for past offences, is one of many proofs which God hath given to mankind, that he does not, as man may do from motives of policy or fear, wink at or overlook sin in any, and let it pass as if it had not been. God punished the sin of angels, he punished sin in Adam, he punishes it wherever it is committed and the spirit of it continued in; and God hath declared he will punish unpardoned sin in the impenitent for ever. Well then may every one say continually in his heart, "Let me have grace whereby I may serve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear, for God is a consuming fire." (Heb. xii. 29.)

And their example in praying, and Rizpah's in watching to prevent any evil or unclean thing from reſting on the offering of a broken and a contrite heart, muſt be imitated by all, who would have grace deſcend from God, as rain from heaven, and bear witneſs that, for the ſake of that perfect and ſufficient ſacrifice made by God the Son, they are pardoned and accepted.

the author of all that is evil. In this song of praise, addressed by king David to the God of his salvation, he represents himself as lost and sunk into the very sorrows of hell, and prevented—unexpectedly surprised with the snares—the terrors of death; and, with this heartfelt distress and the danger of his situation, there is an evident acknowledgment runs through the Psalm, of his own incapacity to obtain peace to his mind, or deliverance from his danger. In this equally helpless miserable state, he represents God as his rock—God, his Mediator and Redeemer, as the sole foundation on which he obtained rest, and on whom he only depended.

To him he called, and by him he was delivered from his misery, and saved from all he feared; laden, covered, and surrounded as he had been with guilt, shame, and danger. And then, with the goodness and mercy, he gives a description of the power and greatness of God, which it may well be allowed none could give, who were not inspired by His own Spirit to declare His majesty; and then he shews that it was by this power, influenced by unmerited goodness, that he was delivered and enabled to overcome. And then, with an heart overflowing with good-will to men, from the Spirit by which he wrote, and that the miserable and distressed, in all ages, might have the benefit of his great and uncommon experience of the nature of God's dealings with men, he says of this glorious Jehovah—The afflicted people thou wilt save; and that he is a buckler—a protector, by his almighty power and every where present providence, of all them that trust in him—Their light, wisdom, power, strength. He arms them with salvation, through the blood of the Lamb, as with a shield; and that all real greatness in men consists in resembling the gentleness—the meekness, patience, and tender compassion of God, from whose Spirit that gentleness is communicated. And that this God will deal with men, both as they desire and as they deserve. If their desire is after integrity in themselves, and to shew mercy to others, God will charge himself with seeing justice done them, and will shew them mercy; and that to them, whose souls breathe with pure desire after fellowship with the Father and the Son, the Holy Spirit will shew itself pure, by cleansing the very thoughts of the heart, and, in consequence of doing so, make the way—the outward conduct perfect, blameless in his sight, and enlarging the steps, by calling to duties which shall redound to his glory, by truly serving the human race against all difficulties and opposition. But that, on the other hand, the work of this mighty God is to bring down the haughty, and to conquer and overcome all the enemies of his peaceful kingdom.

CHAP. XXIII.

V. 1. The last words—Among the last things he spake by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. Raised up—From private life to the throne of Israel, by the favour of God. Anointed of God—Though despised by his brethren, persecuted by his king, and betrayed by many of the people. The sweet Psalmist—He whose words and music were so full of piety, wisdom, and harmony, that they were as delightful to all that heard them as honey, or whatever is most acceptable to the taste.

V. 2. The Spirit of the LORD spake by me—And therefore all I have written is to be read, with a view to discover what is contained therein, worthy of God to communicate to all mankind.

V. 3. The God of Israel—The almighty God, creator of heaven and earth, the preserver and governor of all things, but more immediately the God of Israel—of the church he hath redeemed with his blood. The Rock of Israel—The foundation of all mercy and forgiveness from God to men, and the Rock from which proceeds, as from a fountain opened, every good and perfect gift—whatever is wise, pure, holy, lovely, just and good. This God said—This Rock spake to me—By his Spirit, and under its immediate influence, I declared his will, saying, He—That king, governor, judge, magistrate, parent, or master, that ruleth over men—By the greatest or with the least degree of authority, must be just—equal, impartial, hating covetousness, ruling—exercising their whole authority in the fear of God—ever keeping it in mind, that they themselves are always under the notice of the supreme and final Judge of all, and to whom all must account for their administration, and the use made of the power given them over their fellow-creatures, whether in private or in public stations.

V. 4. He—A just man, governing in the fear of God, shall be as the light of the morning—Most welcome to all that behold it. Without clouds—Without any thing to prevent its sweet influence from shining equally upon all, without respect of persons. As the tender grass—Pleasant, and full of nourishment. This is a further description of what God requires of all, his providence vests with power over others. And the two verses taken together shew what he that rules must be in himself, and that he must be without clouds—those spots of evil, self-interested and flattering advisers, which would prevent the uniform general influence of justice, benevolence and usefulness, spreading itself as far as their authority extended, whether only within a private family or a city, or the utmost bounds of the widest empire.

V. 5. Whatever David's sorrow was for his sins, and the offence he had given to God, and whatever he felt for the afflictions with which God had visited him, the present state of his family, and his fears for their future welfare, yet this he was assured of, that God, for the sake of his beloved Son, was gracious to his unrighteousness, and that he had pardoned his transgressions, and would not so remember them as to punish them; but that, on the contrary, he was now accepted of God through the Beloved, and that this was all his salvation, all that he rested his soul upon for

V. 1, 2. The Lord moved David—Withdrew his grace, and for a ſeaſon left him to himſelf, that, by means of his conduct, he might puniſh his people for their ſins, and ſhew them, that inſtead of their being juſt or good in themſelves, independant of the Spirit of God, that David, with all his knowledge and experience of the neceſſity of living in a conſtant ſtate of humble reliance on God, was no ſooner left to himſelf than pride ſprung up, and he began to exalt himſelf, and ſhew the ſpirit of the fallen angels, and to make known his own greatneſs, by numbering the people over whom God had made him king.

V. 3, 4. Joab and the other captains ſeem to have perceived that David's directions proceeded from a ſecret truſt in the number of his people, and therefore oppoſed it; but the king not acknowledging that he was now leſs dependant on God than ever he was, and the action not being ſuch as was evidently wicked, the captains were convinced it was their duty to obey the king, and they went accordingly.

V. 10—14. David's heart ſmote him—On receiving the meſſage from the prophet. But, by the king's being willing to hear the word of the Lord, and to know the worſt of himſelf, he had the choice given him of the calamity by which his departure in heart from God ſhould be puniſhed. And thus, when the truths of God's word are applied to the heart, by the convictions of the Holy Spirit, the example of David is to be followed; and, with unfeigned unfeigned confession of sin, all that would escape the severest judgment of God, must be willing to fall into his hands alone.

V. 15. God gave the command, and seventy thousand of his feeble rebellious creatures sickened, fainted, and died.

V. 16. The angel appeared, that the people might be convinced that this was the judgment of God, and that all the world might know that afflictions do not come out of the ground, but that when men suffer, it is either to punish for sin, to guard against folly, or to try, exercise, and increase the submission of such as fear him. And it was also known that the affliction not only came by the command of God, but that it was at his command that it was taken away; that all who knew and heard thereof might both fear his wrath who afflicts, and gratefully praise him, when he in mercy is pleased to take and keep away deserved punishments.

V. 17. Let thine hand be against me—That the people may be saved from wrath yet to come. And thus did Jesus say, when all mankind were exposed to the wrath of God, Let thine hand be against me—Let me suffer that they may be saved. And is it nothing to you, all ye that pass his sorrow and sufferings slightly by? (Lam. i. 12.)

V. 18. The prophet who came at God's command to tell of judgment, now comes to desire David to rear an altar—That the incense of prayer might ascend to God through the typical sacrifice. And thus we see God gave a spirit of supplication to those that knew him last, when his judgments were ready to be turned away.

V. 19. David went up—Immediately embraced the call to ask, that they might receive. And have not all need to be taught of God both for what and how to pray?

V. 20—25. The plague was stayed—When the offerings were made. And is the plague of God's wrath, against every soul that hath sinned, stayed before the great sacrifice, made by God the Son, is offered upon the altar of that faith, which looks for all through him; regarding, like David, no expence to obtain remission of sin, and of the punishment due to it?

I. KINGS.

THESE two books of the Kings contain the hiſtory of the church and common wealth of the Jews, from the end of David's reign unto the Babyloniſh captivity, which was the ſpace of four hundred and thirty-eight years, whereof Solomon reigned forty over all the twelve tribes; but, after his death, as a judgment for his idolatry, they were divided into two kingdoms; the kingdoms of Judah and Iſrael. Judah continued under the government of David's poſterity three hundred and ſeventy-two years; in which nineteen kings of the ſame ſtock ſucceeded each other, of which ſome were very good, others idolaters. And here ſoundneſs of doctrine, and purity of worſhip, was much better maintained than among the ten tribes; religion being ſeveral times reformed by the godly kings, who were aſſiſted and encouraged therein by ſeveral prophets. The kingdom of Iſrael continued but two hundred and thirty-ſeven years; in which time there were twenty kings of ten ſeveral ſtocks; of all which there was not one good one, that kingdom being idolatrous from firſt to laſt; yet they were not utterly diſowned and rejected by God, but he called them to repentance by ſeveral prophets whom he raiſed up among them, and had many faithful ſervants among them, and ſhewed mercy to them. Concerning both theſe kingdoms it is obſervable, that when they kept cloſe to God, he bleſſed and proſpered them; when they turned aſide, they ſmarted for it: By which inſtances we are taught this leſſon, That righteouſneſs exalts a nation, but ſin is a reproach to (and the ruin of) any people. (Prov. xiv. 34.) And in reading this, as well as every other part of the Scriptures, we are conſtantly to be looking for ſuch diſcoveries of the mind and will of God, as we ourſelves are concerned in; giving that interpretation to every part thereof, which makes it moſt worthy of GOD to relate, or to be the immediate author of; theſe hiſtorical books of the Old Teſtament being, with all the reſt of Scripture, given by God himſelf to men, under the immediate inſpiration of his Holy Spirit. (2 Tim. iii. 15, 16.)

The Firſt Book of Kings contains twenty-two chapters.

CHAP. I. Abiſhag cheriſheth David in his extreme age. Adonijah, David's darling, uſurpeth the kingdom. By the counſel of Nathan, Bathſheba moveth the king, and Nathan ſecondeth her. David reneweth his oath to Bathſheba. Solomon, by David's appointment, being anointed king by Zadok and Nathan, the people triumph. Jonathan bringeth the news, Adonijah's gueſts flee. Adonijah fleeing to the horns of the altar, upon his good behaviour is diſmiſſed by Solomon.—CHAP. II. David having given a charge to Solomon, dieth. Solomon ſucceedeth. Adonijah moving Bathſheba to ſue unto Solomon for Abiſhag, is put to death. Abiathar, having his life given him, is deprived of the prieſthood. Joab fleeing to the horns of the altar, is there ſlain. Benaiah is put in Joab's room, and Zadok in Abiathar's. Shimei confined to Jeruſalem, by going thence to Gath, is put to death.—CHAP. III. Solomon marrieth Pharaoh's daughter. High places being in uſe, Solomon ſacrificeth at Gibeon. Solomon, in the choice which God gave him, preferring wiſdom, obtaineth wiſdom, riches, and honour. Solomon's judgment between the two harlots maketh him renowned.—CHAP. IV. Solomon's princes: His twelve officers for proviſion. The peace and largeneſs of his kingdom, his daily proviſion: His ſtables: His wiſdom.—CHAP. V. Hiram, ſending to congratulate Solomon, is certified of his purpoſe to build the temple, and deſired to furniſh him with timber. Hiram bleſſing God for Solomon, and requeſting food for his family, furniſheth him with trees. The number of Solomon's workmen and labourers.—CHAP. VI. The building of Solomon's temple. The chambers thereof. God's promiſe to it. The carving and adorning of it. The cherubims. The doors. The court. The time of building of it.—CHAP. VII. The building of Solomon's houſe, of the houſe of Lebanon, of the porch of pillars, of the porch of judgment, of the houſe for Pharaoh's daughter. Hiram's work of the two pillars, of the molten ſea, of the ten baſes, of the ten lavers, and all the veſſels.—CHAP. VIII. The feaſt of the dedication of the temple. Solomon's bleſſing; Solomon's prayer; his ſacrifice of peace-offerings.—CHAP. IX. God's covenant in a viſion with Solomon. The mutual preſents of Solomon and Hiram. In Solomon's works the Gentiles were his bondmen, the Iſraelites honourable ſervants. Pharaoh's daughter removeth to her houſe. Solomon's yearly ſolemn ſacrifices: His navy fetcheth gold from Ophir.—CHAP. X. The Queen of Sheba admireth the wiſdom of Solomon: Solomon's gold: His targets. The throne of ivory: His veſſels: His preſents: His chariots and horſemen: His tribute.—CHAP. XI. Solomon's wives and concubines. In his old age they draw him to idolatry, God threateneth him. Solomon's adverſaries were Hadad, who was entertained in Egypt; Rezon, who reigned in Damaſcus; and Jeroboam, to whom Ahijah propheſieth. Solomon's acts, reign, and death: Rehoboam ſucceeded him.—CHAP. XII. The Iſraelites aſſembled at Shechem to crown Rehoboam. By Jeroboam they make a ſuit to reduce the taxes. Rehoboam refuſing the old men's council, by the advice of the young men, anſwereth them roughly. Ten tribes revolting kill Adoram, and make Rehoboam to flee. Rehoboam raiſing an army, is forbidden by Shemaiah. Jeroboam ſtrengtheneth himſelf by fenced cities, and by the idolatry of the two calves.—CHAP. XIII. Jeroboam's hand, that offered violence to him that propheſied againſt his altar at Beth-el, withereth; and, at the prayer of the prophet, is reſtored. The prophet refuſing the king's entertainment, departeth from Beth-el. An old prophet ſeducing him, bringeth him back. He is reproved by God, ſlain by a lion, buried by the old prophet, who confirmeth his prophecy. Jeroboam's obſtinacy.—CHAP. XIV. Abijah being ſick, Jeroboam ſendeth his wife diſguiſed with preſents to the prophet Ahijah at Shiloh. Ahijah forewarned by God, denounceth God's judgment. Ahijah dieth and is buried. Nadab ſucceedeth Jeroboam. Rehoboam's wicked reign. Shiſhok ſpoileth Jeruſalem. Abijam ſucceedeth Rehoboam.—CHAP. XV. Abijam's wicked reign: Aſa ſucceedeth him. Aſa's good reign. The war between Baaſha and him cauſeth him to make a league with Benhadad. Jehoſhophat ſucceedeth Aſa. Nadab's wicked reign. Baaſha conſpiring againſt him, executing Ahijah's prophecy. Nadab's acts and death. Baaſha's wicked reign.—CHAP. XVI. Jehu's prophecy againſt Baaſha. Elah ſucceedeth him: Zimri conſpiring againſt Elah, ſucceedeth him. Zimri executeth Jehu's prophecy. Omri made king by the ſoldiers, forceth Zimri deſperately to burn himſelf. The kingdom being divided, Omri prevaileth againſt Tibni. Omri buildeth Samaria: His wicked reign. Ahab ſucceedeth him. Ahab's moſt wicked reign. Joſhua's curſe upon Hiel, the builder of Jericho.—CHAP. XVII. Elijah having propheſied againſt Ahab, is ſent to cheriſh where the ravens feed him: He is ſent to the widow of Zarephath: He raiſeth the widow's ſon. The woman believeth him.—CHAP. XVIII. In the extremity of famine Elijah ſent to Ahab, meeteth good Obadiah. Obadiah bringeth Ahab to Elijah. Elijah reproving Ahab, by fire from heaven convinceth Baal's prophets Elijah by prayer obtaining rain, followeth Ahab to Jezreel. —CHAP. XIX. Elijah threatened by Jezebel, fleeth to Beerſheba. In the wilderneſs, being weary of his life, he is comforted by an angel. At Horeb God appeareth unto him, ſending him to anoint Hazael, Jehu, and Eliſha. Eliſha taketh leave of his friends, followeth Elijah.—CHAP. XX. Benhadad not content with Ahab's homage, beſiegeth Samaria. By the direction of a prophet the Syrians are ſlain as the prophet informed Ahab. The Syrians truſting in the vallies, come againſt him in Aphek. By God's judgment, the Syrians are ſmitten again. The Syrians ſubmitting themſelves, Ahab ſendeth Ben-hadad away with a covenant. The prophet, under the parable of a priſoner, making Ahab to judge himſelf, denounceth God's judgment againſt him. —CHAP. XXI. Ahab being denied Naboth's vineyard, is grieved. Jezebel writing letters againſt Naboth, he is condemned of blaſphemy. Ahab taketh poſſeſſion of the vineyard. Elijah denounceth judgments againſt Ahab and Jezebel. Wicked Ahab repenting, God deferreth the judgment.—CHAP. XXII. Ahab ſeduced by falſe prophets, according to the word of Micaiah, is ſlain at Ramoth-gilead; the dogs lick up his blood; and Ahaziah ſucceedeth him. Jehoſhaphat's good reign: his acts. Jehoram ſucceedeth him. Ahaziah's evil reign.

CHAP. I.

V. 1—4. How can one be warm alone? (Eccle. iv. 11.) How ſhall thoſe that ſeparate themſelves from all religious fellowſhip, continue the divine life in their ſouls? As in the natural life ſo it is in the ſpiritual; the Father of mercies to unite the human race together in bands of mutual good-will and pure affection, it has pleaſed him to make the aid of his feeble creatures to one another neceſſary to the welfare and happineſs of all; and it always being a part of the divine deſign to hide pride from man, neither in things temporal nor ſpiritual has he left it in the power of the head—the greateſt, to ſay to the foot—the leaſt—I have no need of thee. Without peaſants, princes would want even what their neceſſities demand; and in religion, fathers in Chriſt may find the fellowſhip even of babes, the neceſſary means of keeping the flame of heavenly charity alive in their breaſts to God and to all mankind.

V. 5—10. Adonijah exalted himſelf, ſaying, I will be king—This is the language of ſelf-exaltation—I will do ſo and ſo. And this is that ſpirit in men which God reſiſteth; wherever therefore it diſcovers itſelf, wrong counſels and meaſures are always to be looked for as its invariable followers. When pride is cheriſhed in the heart, by a compliance with the ſuggeſtions of ſelf-exaltation and ſelf will, ſuitable humiliation, or diſgrace and ruin, muſt take place. And this ſpirit ſhews itſelf in all, as it did in Adonijah. Firſt, by ſaying, I will be great, I will have that I ſet my heart upon; and then by purſuing the end, without ever aſking God's leave or bleſſing, againſt whoſe pleaſure the united powers of earth and hell cannot accompliſh a ſingle purpoſe, or accompliſhing it, would but ſecure to themſelves an increaſe of miſery. All pride in man diſowns the government of God, and is oppoſed to it.

V. 11—53. Nathan, the prophet of the Lord, immediately appears to be againſt Adonijah who had exalted himſelf, and on the ſide of Solomon, who, though the king had ſolemnly declared him his ſucceſſor, in obedience to the will of God, he had ſhewn no impatience

V. 5, 6. The ways of God muſt be vindicated to men; and he who ſheddeth man's blood as a murderer, God requires that by man muſt his blood be ſhed; not out of reſentment, but under the due adminiſtration of juſtice; to the end that all may know God will vindicate his own honour, and that he who commits a crime againſt his fellow-creature, does by that act deſpiſe his Creator. And though Joab hath been ſpared, as an example of the patience and long-ſuffering of God, yet he muſt be judged for his offence, to ſhew God is no reſpector of perſons; and that notwithſtanding the high ſtations to which he may advance men, or the honourable uſe he may make of them, yet no human greatneſs includes in it the liberty to do wrong, without drawing after it the ſure conſequence of God's diſpleaſure.

V. 7. And by thy kindneſs to the ſons of Barzillai—Who ſhewed kindneſs to me in the time of diſtreſs, let it alſo appear that as a man ſows ſo ſhall he reap; and that under the gracious government of God, no action proceeding from a principle of love to God, and for his ſake to men, ſhall ever be unnoticed or finally left without the kindneſs of the Heavenly King ſhewn to it, in due proportion to the ſoul's obedience to his grace, that ſuggeſted every thought of charity, and firſt offered, and then gave, the power to bring the ſame to its full effect.

V. 8, 9. In the day God ſhewed me ſo much mercy, I was bound to ſhew mercy to all who had made themſelves guilty againſt me, and I forgave Shimei; but the great end of thy government being to make known the nature of God's dealings with men, it will become thy duty to reſtrain the ſpirit of the daring and preſumptuous, and if he ſhould ſhew a diſregard to thy authority, then let him be made an example to all men, that God will treat thoſe as murderers who hate their fellow-creatures in their hearts, (1 John iii. 15.) though they may not proceed to thoſe bitter expreſſions of that hatred which Shimei ſhewed to me, in the day I went to Mahanaim.

V. 10, 11. If they that are deſiring to raiſe themſelves to greatneſs, as the way to happineſs, would but look at the labours, difficulties, and dangers of a life like David's, who was made great by the will of God, they might adore the wiſdom and goodneſs of God, in ever having given to mankind this plain direction—Be content with ſuch things as you have. (Heb. xiii. 5.) And might learn by the dear-bought experience which God hath cauſed to be written to ſave mankind from ſuffering, that it is their happineſs, becauſe it is their duty, contentedly to abide where the providence of God hath placed them; only ſtriving to make their calling and election ſure, and ſo humbly waiting till the hour of their appointed change ſhall come, to tranſlate them from the kingdom of God's dear Son on earth, to his kingdom of glory in heaven.

V. 12. Solomon's kingdom was eſtabliſhed—Becauſe the heir of God's promiſe, and the type of God the Son, whoſe kingdom, againſt all the oppoſition of the rebellious powers of darkneſs, ſhould be eſtabliſhed on earth, till all the children of men, who would accept of mercy and grace, ſhall be ſaved with an everlaſting ſalvation.

This deſire being unlawful in itſelf, it was a breach of the condition on which Solomon gave Adonijah his life, after his attempt to ſeize upon the crown in his father's life-time. Thus is it made again and again to appear, that men's final ruin proceeds from themſelves, out of their own hearts, from whence all evil proceeds. (Mark vii. 21.) And that when they have been forgiven of God, they again exalt themſelves againſt him, and, by means of their own deſires, bring upon themſelves the judgments God hath declared againſt the crimes which they wilfully committed, or were bent upon committing.

V. 26—34. the judgments of God recorded in the Scriptures, intended with the frequent puniſhments inflicted on many of the abandoned and the wicked, to teach mankind the danger of conſenting to any evil temper or deſire. Though a man may, like Joab, command thouſands by a word or a look, the day will come when a king, like Solomon, will ariſe to judge him, in whoſe hands he ſhall be nothing more than an helpleſs victim.

V. 36, 37. They who, like Shimei, have been pardoned great offences, are required to live under great reſtraints, that they may ſhew they are under a conſtant ſenſe of the danger to which their former ſins had expoſed them; and at the ſame time that they are monuments of the mercy that forgave them, they may be living witneſſes to others, that they know not what they do, who offend againſt the King of all the earth.

V. 38. When Shimei had his life given him on the condition of the reſtraint he was laid under, he thought it good—that the ſentence was merciful, and that, inſtead of the conditions being hard, on which mercy was to be continued to him to the end of his life, they were ſuch as greatly increaſed his obligation to the king, as they not only allowed him, but required him to live near the perſon of his prince, and to enjoy all the ſecurity and happineſs of thoſe ſubjects that ſurrounded the very throne of Iſrael.

V. 39, 40. Shimei allowed the injury from his ſervants, to make him diſregard the conditions on which he was to hold his pardon from his ſovereign: He departed from Jeruſalem. And thus do thoſe who have had mercy ſhewn them by God their Saviour, on condition, or rather with the privilege of living near his perſon, and partaking of all the benefits of his gracious government, too, too often forget the kind reſtraint, and on ſome occaſion of ſelf-love, go beyond the bounds ſet for their obedience to his will who had freely forgiven them.

V. 41. It was told Solomon—That Shimei had gone away, and by doing ſo, had ſhewn that he either thought the king would not know, or would think little of his diſobedience: And that he was come back, appearing as if he had never departed. When in heart the ſinner does but depart from God, it is known to him how ſlightly he eſteems the mercy that hath been ſhewn him, and that all his love and gracious favour is not worthy of a ſtrict regard.

V. 42. Did I not—When I forgave thee thy preſumptuous ſin againſt thy king and my father, require thee not to depart from Jeruſalem, and didſt not thou allow that this was not only reaſonable, but that it was good?

V. 43. Why?—To all which Shimei appears to have been ſpeechleſs; as he was, (Matth. xxii. 12.) who, by another way of expreſſing his ſelf-will, ſhewed how little he regarded what he knew of the will of the king. From themſelves were condemned.

V. 44—46. Thou knoweſt thine heart—Thou art conſcious of thy guilt. And thus will it be ſaid to the impenitent—thou alſo didſt know when mercy was ſhewn thee, that the moſt ſecret departure from God would make thee guilty of breaking his command, and of violating that which thou thyſelf thought juſt and good, and which thou didſt confirm by thy own ſolemn reſolutions. This ſentence pronounced againſt Shimei, is but an image, of that great and dreadful judgment which will at the laſt take place, on all whoſe hearts are found at enmity with God, unreconciled to his will, and who would, and did, diſregard it againſt their own knowledge of what was juſt and right, and their own moſt ſolemn obligations not to rebel againſt thoſe conditions which were required of them by God, who ſhewed them mercy, till mercy was deſpiſed, and offered them grace, till it would be no more received. After this the kingdom of Solomon was eſtabliſhed—His father had committed all judgment to him, and which he had now executed on both their enemies. And as David committed to Solomon the judging thoſe that had broken the laws, like Joab, and daringly offended againſt his perſon, like Shimei; ſo hath the FATHER committed all judgment to the SON, and when that judgment-day ſhall be over, then the kingdom of God will be eſtabliſhed in righteouſneſs and peace; and the ſpirits of the Redeemed will know no interruption of their bleſſedneſs from ſatan, and all that obey him, but God will be all in all for ever.

CHAP. III.

V. 1. Solomon made affinity—Kindred—alliance by marriage—entered into the nearest relation with the daughter of the king of that country, which so eminently set itself in opposition to God, his servant Moses, and the people of the Lord. And such an affinity did the Redeemer of men graciously enter into with all mankind, though they were, to the last degree, at enmity with God. Solomon brought Pharaoh's daughter into the city of David—And this he did as soon as he had defeated the designs of Adonijah on the crown of his Father, and which none but Solomon was to possess. And when God the Son had overcome the prince of the rebellious angels, who aspired to be equal to the Most High, (Isa. xiv. 13, 14.) and had deceived Eve, the mother of mankind, to sin against God, then did the Saviour of the world, like Solomon bringing up the daughter of rebellious Egypt, give himself to the promise of the Father as a lamb to be slain, to bring back to Jerusalem above, every soul of the fallen race who would or should accept of the offered mercy and grace, and enter into affinity with the King of Glory, and be joined in one Spirit with the Lord.

V. 2. Only—This is an exception to Solomon's perfect obedience. And thus are all the types and forerunners of Jesus distinguished from himself. None but himself perfectly fulfilled the whole law of God; that it might appear to all, that no other wisdom, power, or sufficiency but that which is of God, his purchase and his gift, can enable any child of fallen Adam to do the will of God on earth as it is done in heaven. And this omission in Solomon, to restrain the people from going up to their high places, is doubtless recorded to shew, that nothing that is omitted or done contrary to what is required by God, passes unnoticed by him; and that an obedience to his will in many things, will not be accepted in excuse for the careless neglect or wilful breach of any command of God's. (James ii. 10.) Surely all but Jesus himself, that ever appeared in the human nature, have need of repentance; and the deepest repentance can only be made acceptable to God, by the blood of his well-beloved Son.

V. 3. Solomon loved—Truly loved the Lord, and with this exception only, of burning incense in high places, he obeyed him. This exception being twice repeated in the course of a few words, and as God can never make any of those vain repetitions which he forbids his creatures to use, this repeated charge against Solomon is, without doubt, recorded, that all who are passed from death unto life, and love God and all mankind, may strictly examine themselves, whether they are not offering the incense of compliance with something human, instead of that which is divine, and especially of thinking more highly of themselves—of some gift or excellence, as being their own, than they ought to think. And it is never to be forgotten that Solomon, with all his wisdom, was at length, from this small departure, drawn away into gross idolatry.

V. 4. To Gibeon—Where the altar of the Lord was. (1 Chron. xvi. 39.)

V. 5. After sacrificing upon the altar of the Lord, the Lord appeared to Solomon. And it is after offering up by faith the great sacrifice, that God manifests himself to all. And to all that are reconciled unto God through the blood of atonement, God saith, Ye shall ask what you will, and it shall be done unto you. (John xiv. 7.) Solomon knew, though it was in his sleep, that it was God that spake to him. And thus it appears, that the immortal mind which God breathed into man, does not sleep with the earthly body, but is ever awake, and when animated with the love of God, sleeping or waking knows his voice.

V. 6. Walked in truth—Lived in the true worship of God—by faith in the promised Seed and Saviour, without which faith nothing is pleasing to God. (Heb. xi. 6.)

V. 7. I am but a little child—And with all the advantages I have had in being brought up in the court of Israel, under the immediate care of David my father, I find that of myself I know nothing. (1 Cor. iv. 4.)

V. 8. In the midst—The duties of the station, in which thy providence hath been pleased to place me, are such as of myself I cannot perform.

V. 9. Give—For I have a right to nothing, but as the free gift of thy unmerited bounty.

V. 10. The speech pleased the Lord—Not the mere words of it, but the spirit from which they proceeded in Solomon's mind; which was that true humility to which God giveth his grace. (1 Pet. v. 5.)

V. 11. This thing—Wisdom—the spirit of truth.

16 ¶ Then came there two women that were harlots, unto the king, and stood before him.

17 And the one woman said, O my lord, I and this woman dwell in one house, and I was delivered of a child, with her in the house.

18 And it came to pass the third day after that I was delivered, that this woman was delivered also: and we were together; there was no stranger with us in the house, save we two in the house.

V. 12, 13. I have—Not only granted thee thy request, but I have also added all things to it, which shall be for my glory and thy greatest good; that, by thee, it may be made appear to all mankind, as by an eminent example, that they who first seek the kingdom of God within them, and his righteousness, all other things shall be added unto them. (Matth. vi. 33.)

V. 14. The caution contained in this verse is doubtless to shew that the greatest degree of wisdom, the highest station, the most glorious and prosperous circumstances that ever concurred in the same person, do not carry with them the liberty to depart for a moment from that humble dependance, in which only any man can walk with God, and continue to receive the communications of his Holy Spirit.

V. 15. Immediately on receiving the blessings God had bestowed, and the assurances he had given, Solomon went and stood before the ark of the covenant—To acknowledge that, through the only Mediator between God and man, he received all these mercies. He then offered burnt-offerings—As one who still expected pardon, present and everlasting salvation for the alone sake of the great sacrifice then made by promise, and now by the sufferings and death of Christ Jesus the Lord. And peace-offerings—To praise God for his mercies through him. Solomon then made a feast—That he and all his servants might solemnly rejoice together, under a deep sense of the unmerited goodness of God.

V. 16—28. When God had established Solomon in the throne of his father David, and had given him, with the knowledge of his great salvation, the wisdom of his station, then God made the cause of two poor women the occasion of shewing the humility, the patience, and the wisdom of Solomon, together with his regard to justice, and the liberty he gave to the least of his subjects to speak in his presence, though they came without any other evidence than their own. And the directions he gave, when he had fully heard them, made all Israel fear him; convinced that it was the wisdom of God by which he was enabled to understand what were the feelings of a mother's mind for her tender offspring, better than the mother either of the living or of the dead child; and that a king who could bring the truth to light beyond all doubt, in a matter where he had no assistance from human evidence, would be also enabled to detect and punish the guilty; and on this account all the people feared him. They that were conscious of guilt, feared detection; and they that were not, feared to offend. And thus does the Judge of all the earth make himself known to men, shewing them that his wisdom can bring the most hidden things to light, and can make every one even from themselves discover their own deceit and sin. And this His Holy word discovers to all mankind, to the end that every one may, by true repentance, come unto him for mercy, before they are brought before him to give account of the deeds done in the body. And they that would escape the wrath to come, that is revealed from God to men, are bound, by all they owe to God and to themselves, to search the Scriptures, which, as a sword, will pierce between the very joints and marrow; and, by the ever attending influence of his grace, will shew the soul itself; and then will direct every one that obeys his grace to the author and finisher of their faith; (Heb. xii. 2.) and who, in the great day, will say to all who have claimed him as their Saviour, and submitted to him as their king—Come, ye blessed. The conscious joy of which may be, in some slight degree, conceived, from what she felt, whose claim of the living child was justified by the judgment of Solomon, as the shame and confusion which must have covered the other, who daringly appeared before the king to establish her unjust and wicked pretensions, may lead us to understand something of what they must feel, who shall appear before God to justify themselves, in direct opposition to his declared will, sealed with numberless miracles and proofs of its divine authority, plainly saying—All have sinned, and that in God's sight none can justify themselves, and that besides Jesus, the Mediator between God and man, there is no other Saviour from the wrath to come. lomon's time, the antient prophecies were fulfilled. And by the riches, power, and happiness of Solomon's kingdom, the greatness and blessedness of the kingdom of God's dear Son is discovered to us, as far as visible things can represent such as are spiritual.

V. 29. God gave—This is repeated, that it then might and still may be remembered, that God is the only giver of every good gift. Largeness of heart—A soul as just, liberal, generous, and compassionate as he was wise.

V. 30, 31. The countries and persons most famed for their wisdom, had not the wisdom of Solomon. And thus was he a type of the Saviour of men, who knew what was in man—in all men; and who is himself the immediate fountain of all spiritual wisdom, as the sun in the natural world is the means of communicating light to the earth and heavens.

V. 32. Proverbs—Brief sentences of truth, justice, goodness, and usefulness; not only the effects of the wisest man's study, but containing the wisdom of God, who, by declaring himself the Giver of Solomon's wisdom, hath caused it to be known, as well as by saying, That all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, that he, by his spirit, spake through the lips of his servant Solomon, and by his hand gave mankind those apples of gold in pictures of silver. His songs were a thousand and five—Several of which are given in the Canticles.

V. 33. He spake of trees—All which discourses are lost; God, in mercy to mankind, having, by his providence, only preserved that which was wanted to make men wise unto present and everlasting salvation. But though God did not preserve those writings of Solomon's for the use of men, it has been equally the work of his spirit and of his providence, to discover such qualities in the productions of the earth and sea, as might at once delight and bless mankind, by leading them to adore HIM that gave to different substances those qualities, and by such unlooked-for ways made known their effects.

V. 34. The fame of Solomon spread throughout the earth, and in that age knowledge was in such esteem, that from every nation persons were sent by public authority, to become acquainted with the discoveries which God had made to Solomon, that they might report the fame to their own country, for the benefit of all. And what gratitude is due to God for having preserved the Scriptures, and for causing them to be so spread amongst mankind, as they are in this, and many other countries; and as it is his will they should be throughout the whole world, that all men may become acquainted with those manifestations of heavenly wisdom, which were thought so worthy of notice in the ages when that knowledge first appeared! And when it is considered how much these discoveries are calculated to make mankind happy in themselves, as well as the means of contributing to the happiness of others, to neglect searching the sacred records of Divine truth and goodness, is to shew how much we are wanting in gratitude to God, who is most pleased when his creatures make the use of his mercies for which they are designed, and also how much we are wanting to ourselves, by not making it our constant and chief object of pursuit, to cultivate an acquaintance with the principles of that knowledge which is given to us by God, to lead us from one degree of nearness to himself to another, till this life of trial shall end in a life of glory, in his immediate presence for ever.

(2 Cor. vi. 16.)

V. 4, 5. Neither adversary, nor evil occurrent—No satanick spirit ruling, nor any worldly nor fleshly desire prevailing, but rest from war within, that the spirit of peace may carry on the work of peace, and raise the temple of the heart, in newness of life, to the glory of its living Head.

And do not all in every nation adore the ſacred name by which they call upon God, when they know by the ſpirit he hath given them, that he hath provided a Mediator, an Advocate, a Redeemer to perform all the divine will, and do that for men, which none can do for themſelves?

V. 8—10. Hiram firſt ſhewed his willingneſs to fall in with Solomon's deſign, and then, by what he did, he proved the reality of his deſire to enter into the moſt friendly alliance with Solomon. And they, whoſe hearts are opened to the calls of the Prince of Peace, they firſt ſhew their willingneſs to fall in with his gracious deſign, and then they prove the reality of that willingneſs not in word only, but in truth and in deed.

V. 11. In return, Solomon gave Hiram wheat and pure oil, year by year—And thus does Jeſus to all who accept the offers of his love, and ſhew they do ſo by loving him again, and prove this by keeping his commandments; he feeds them continually as with wheat and oil—with that inward bread, ſent from himſelf by the Holy Ghoſt the comforter.

V. 12. They two made a league—Solomon was Iſrael's peaceful king, the huſband of the daughter of Egypt, the ally of the king of Tyre, and the friend of all mankind. As an head for wiſdom, juſtice, and goodneſs, he united the world together for their common welfare. And Solomon in this, with all his ſplendour, was but the type of the meek, the humble, and the holy Jeſus, who came in the form of a ſervant; that being on a level with the leaſt of his creatures, he might ſhew to all, that all might come unto him; and then after proving, by his ſufferings and death, the greatneſs of his love, in the ſight of hundreds, he aſcended with the manhood, back to that glory which he had before the world began, there to appear in the preſence of God for the whole human race, and there for ever to unite together in one bond of Divine love, all that would or will come at his call, and accept of mercy, grace, and communion with the Father through him.

V. 13. Raiſed a levy—Of officers and men for every part of the work. And thus does the Head of his church on earth ſend out from himſelf, both angels and men to work together with himſelf in preparing thoſe living ſtones, and pillars of his ſpiritual temple, which ſhall ſtand for ever.

V. 14. Solomon ſent out his ſervants by courſes, and the Great Maſter-builder ſends out his labourers in their courſes. None need envy another, or fly to the work with an impatient zeal, for all he ſends will have their courſe and place, and a greater certainty of his notice of their humble, patient, faithful diſcharge of the duties of the ſtation to which he hath appointed them, than the workmen of the wiſeſt earthly prince.

V. 15, 16. The officers were to wait on thoſe that bare the burdens, and did the work; doubtleſs to direct them where to dig the ſtones, and fell the trees; and then, as the weight of the work required, to call others to their aſſiſtance. And angels being made, of God our Saviour, miniſtering ſpirits to all the heirs of ſalvation, doubtleſs they, as officers, have a more than ordinary charge over all that bear the burdens, and do the work of finding and preparing every member of God's ſpiritual temple. Would not Solomon ſmile upon ſuch of his officers who did moſt diligently attend upon the workmen, to give ſeaſonable aid where aid was required? and are not the angels of God animated by the ſmiles of the King Eternal, in diſcharging the duties of their ſeveral ſtations, firſt in pointing out the work to which all the labourers are ſent, and then in procuring aſſiſtance to every faithful ſervant of their gracious LORD, that feeble knees may not be bent to the ground by the weight of the burden, nor honeſt hands hang down diſcouraged by difficulties too great to be overcome? Surely the heavenly attendants, as well as Solomon's officers, know to whom to call as the means of relief, and when to lead to the refreſhing ſhade or ſtreams, and where to find ſhelter from every ſtorm. And thus attended, and befriended, ſhall any grow weak or faint in their minds in the ſpiritual toil; nay, ſhall they not rather remember ber that they are not labouring in the service of a prince, who himself never laid an ax to the root of a tree, nor stood in the pit to dig, but of one who has felt himself the weight of every one's load, the difficulty of every one's station, and not as a distant prince, but as a living head, still feeling the slightest painful touch of pain which every member feels, numbering the hairs, and counting the tears of all that live in him, and do but lift a cup of water to forward the end of his glorious toil, in bringing all into that blessedness there is in himself?

V. 17. The king commanded, and afforded sufficient aid; and by that aid they brought to him great stones—costly—hewed to lay the foundation. At the command of the Lord of Hosts there appeared prophets, apostles, martyrs, ministers, and such as were willing to lay down their lives for his sake, and with these were laid, as with costly stones, the first courses of that spiritual building, which, as on Mount Zion, hath its sole foundation on the Rock of ages —in the God-man, Christ Jesus.

V. 18. Solomon's builders, and Hiram's builders—Jews and Gentiles joined to build the temple of the Lord.

C H A P. VI.

V. 1. In the fourth year—After Solomon entered upon the government of Israel, he laid the foundation of the Temple; in the month Zif, which answers in part to our April; and near the same season it was, and in the fourth year from the time the Lord Jesus entered upon his public ministry, that he, by the offering which he then made of himself, laid the foundation of all spiritual building, other than which no man can lay; and it may here be observed, that Solomon's temple only continued in all its splendour about 34 years, when Shishak king of Egypt carried away its treasures; and this was the same space of time which Jesus was on earth in that temple of his body, which he said he would raise up in three days after the Jews should have destroyed it. (John ii. 19, 21.)

V. 2. The House—The most holy place where the Lord manifested himself. The proportions of this part of the building seem to be considered as the most graceful and harmonious. And the true church of God, the heart of every real believer, where God delights to dwell and to make known his infinite goodness and compassion, is, like this building, at harmony in itself; and is formed for a continual increase of gracefulness in the sight of God and men.

V. 3. The porch—The entrance, the way that led to the holy place was formed, and the proportions of this were also harmonious. And thus is the entrance, the way that leads to God, of the nature with the place where he manifests himself: It is all harmonious; pleasantness and peace belong alone to his temple, to the minds of those that are truly set out to seek him, and to whom he is making himself known.

V. 4. Narrow lights—Without, which would give the building a gloomy appearance to those who only beheld it from without: But by the windows growing wider and wider from the first admission of the light, it had on the inside a very different appearance; and those who were within had not only as much light as they wanted, but were in a place harmonious and pleasant. To those that view the church of God from without, the living temples—poor, humble, despised followers of a crucified Lord, have often a gloomy appearance; but when they themselves give an account of the temple within, they do not only imagine that they see the light, but they know that the influence of the Sun of Righteousness rests upon them, and by that influence they are blessed; and most of all in knowing that they do not possess that blessedness by nature's feeble tenure, but on his faithfulness who made the temple for himself, and that neither life nor death, nor things present, nor things to come, can separate them from his gracious presence who dwells within. (Rom. viii. 35.)

V. 5. Against the wall he built chambers—Some to contain consecrated things; some for places of refreshment, and secret and devout exercises of prayer, meditation, reading, and praise; and some for rest. And has not God formed the temple of the mind with various capacities for spiritual blessedness, and his grace, like the sun, the earth visiting, enlightning, and warming the whole?

V. 6. The beams were not fastened in the walls—That any of them that decayed might be taken out and replaced, and no injury done to the building. And thus in God's spiritual church, though every member rests upon the same foundation, yet if any one decays—ceases to answer the gracious design of the Great Masterbuilder, without any injury to the rest of the building it is replaced by another; and hence the Lord saith to all—Let no one take thy crown; take heed to thyself; be thou faithful unto death, that thou mayest have a place in that building, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, and go no more out for ever.

Before Christ 1014.

7 And [g] the house when it was in building, was built of stone, made ready before it was brought thither: so that there was neither hammer, nor ax, nor any tool of iron heard in the house, while it was in building.

11 ¶ And the word of the Lord came to Solomon, saying,

12 Concerning this house which thou art in building, [i] if thou wilt walk in my statutes, and execute my judgments, and keep all my commandments to walk in them: then will I perform my word with thee, [k] which I spake unto David thy father.

V. 7. Every stone in the house was made ready for its place, before it was brought to the building; nor was the noise of any instrument heard in framing the whole together. And every soul is fitted for that building, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, before it is brought thither, and the sound of no instrument is there heard, the name of the Great Master-builder being that alone which is heard in his glorious temple, every living stone thereof being his workmanship.

V. 8. Middle chamber—The middle story. The right side—The south-side. Winding stairs—Turning from the ground to the middle story, and still turning from that to the third. These turning stairs in the temple of God, by which all that dwelt therein were to ascend, may be a figure to shew us that the course by which men are to ascend to their Redeemer's dwelling-place in endless glory, is not by going straight forward under the guidance of meer human wisdom and worldly prudence, by which, whilst men are in their natural state, they can lay down their designs, and what they will do for years to come, and even for their children after them, "Whereas they know not what shall be on the morrow" (James iv. 14.); but that the way that leadeth unto life eternal, which the Lord of all says is found comparatively but by few, resembles the manner of ascending in the temple—Every step the whole man must turn agreeable to the design and workmanship of the Divine builder. First turning from all sin under the convincing grace of God; and by real conversion of heart from under the power of satan unto God; and then ascending as from the middle chambers to those that are above, to continue turning from step to step, from grace to grace, under the guidance of God's holy spirit inwardly, and by the openings and leadings of his gracious providence outwardly, with an increasing child-like submission to the will of their Heavenly Father in all things, till they arrive at one of those happy dwellings in this life—A lot among those that are sanctified by faith in that Mediator who will draw all men after him, who will but set their feet upon the foundation which he hath laid in himself, and advance—walk as upon the steps of the temple, after the example which he, as a perfect man, hath given unto all men. (Acts xxvi. 18. John xiii. 15.)

V. 9. Finished it—And whoever may fall short of a dwelling-place in buildings eternal in the heavens, by neglecting that present salvation which is made known to men, (Heb. ii. 3.) the glorious design of the everlasting Father was finished and fulfilled by his eternal Son, and by him the price was paid for the sins of the world; and whosoever will accept of purchased and freely-offered mercy and grace, may come unto him and have life: And they who frustrate the grace of God, (Gal. ii. 21.) and shall be finally shut out, they themselves will be only chargeable with their own ruin—They will behold the work, on God's part, to have been to them all that it ought to have been—full of love, perfect compassion, goodness, in design and deed finished and complete from the foundation; and that to themselves alone belongs all the guilt and misery consequent upon turning away from, and despising both the builder and the temple—God and themselves, whose temple he intended them to be.

V. 10. Against all the house—There was no void place. And as in God's material, so in his spiritual works all things are full of him, and full of goodness to men; his great and gracious design comprehends the whole filling up, and using every part for purposes worthy of himself; and surely, however human thought may neglect or be unable to comprehend, in all his works of creation, providence and grace, as in the temple, he builds against all the house, he both designs and uses every part for ends and in ways worthy of himself.

V. 12. If thou—Who art employed in thus promoting my spiritual worship, walk in my statutes—live in the spirit of them thyself; and execute my judgments—Use all thy wisdom, diligence, and influence to give effect to my will; then will I perform with thee all that I have promised.

V. 13. I will be their God, and they shall be my people. I will dwell in them, and will not take my Holy Spirit from them.

V. 14. So—Thus obeying the Almighty Giver of his wisdom, and of every capacity to will and to do, Solomon both built—Begun, carried on, and finished the work which God gave him to do. And in this Solomon was his Saviour's type, who, as man, performed the whole will of God, both according to the spirit and to the letter of his word, and then finished the work for which he came amongst men. (John xix. 30.)

And thus is the heart wherein God manifeſts himſelf by his Spirit, prepared by himſelf for his own dwelling-place, according to his gracious covenant.

V. 20. The oracle and the altar placed therein were overlaid with pure gold—That this place might be regarded above all the reſt. On this altar was to be offered incenſe—The type of prayer and praiſe aſcending up to God, and this within the place where God himſelf appeared. (Heb. xiii. 15. 1 Pet. ii. 5.)

V. 21. Chains of gold—Repreſenting the ſtrength of thoſe motives by which the believing mind is bound to the God of its ſalvation—By that love which is ſtronger than death.

V. 22. The whole houſe—All the holy place. Until he had finiſhed all the houſe—And thus does the Spirit of God, as with pure gold, overlay—communicate to thoſe that love him, the mind that was in himſelf. (Phil. ii. 5.)

V. 23—29. Cherubims—To ſhew that the Moſt High not only makes the heart of the humble his dwelling-place, but that all ſuch are attended by the angels of his preſence which are in ſubjection to the gracious Mediator between God and men, (Heb. ii. 8.) and wait to do his pleaſure, in forwarding the deſigns of his redeeming love, and miniſtering to the relief and ſupport of the heirs of ſalvation. And theſe cherubims were made of the olive-tree—From which were taken the emblems of peace (Gen. viii. 11.) from God to men through the Mediator. And this tree producing the ſweeteſt oil, and being ever green, all the ideas of conſtancy, uſefulneſs, and kindneſs, are conveyed to us by theſe angelic figures. Their wings extended from ſide to ſide, and touched each other, by which we may underſtand the extent of that protection which is afforded to all who put their truſt in the Lord of all. And the walls were carved with cherubims, to ſhew that all that dwell in love to God, are ſurrounded night and day by thoſe angel bands which attend through life, and wait to convey the departing ſpirits of all the redeemed, to the preſence of God.

V. 30. All was of gold where the angels were; and the pure gold of his grace muſt be beneath the very feet of thoſe that would claim kindred with the heavenly hoſts, and be attended by them wherever they are.

V. 32. Palm-trees——Were accounted ſymbols of victory. Branches of the palm-tree were carried before conquerors. And they whoſe bodies become living temples of the Holy Ghoſt, they bear their palms, and are more than conquerors through him that loved them.

V. 34. The leaves of the door were folding—That with the greater eaſe they might be opened. they are in the mind renewed by his ſpirit, and ſhut to all beſides. But how is it, whilſt the heart, inſtead of being the temple of the Holy Ghoſt, is in its natural ſtate like a cage of unclean birds, opening freely to all that is evil, and ſhut to God and all that is good? They that would have the great Goſpel-promiſe of the Father and the Son fulfilled to them—"We will come unto him and make our abode with him," (John xiv. 23.) they muſt with ſober minds watch theſe folding doors of their hearts, and uſe the ſhield of faith in the Giver of all grace, againſt every evil ſuggeſtion from ſatan and the world without, and againſt all that would ſpring up, and proceed out of the heart into the life. And perhaps no figure can better repreſent to us the operations of the will, than theſe folding doors. However clearly the judgment may be convinced of what is right and wrong, unleſs the will obeys the grace which offers the power to reſiſt all evil, and only to conſent to that which is good, an increaſe of knowledge will be but an increaſe of ſorrow, and of keener condemnation. To attend therefore to all that aſks the conſent of the will for admittance into the heart, or for leave to proceed out of it through any of the ſenſes or deſires, is the great ſpiritual charge which is committed to every ſoul to keep by Him to whom we are accountable, and accountable for all things chiefly as they affect the ſtate of the heart, on which God repreſents himſelf as ever looking. (1 Sam. xvi. 7.) And if the doors of the heart be not kept as in his ſight, it is in vain that holineſs unto the Lord be written upon the door-poſts—upon the meer outſide profeſſion of that which is right.

V. 38. Seven years—Seven is accounted a perfect number; ſo that the temple was finiſhed in that time, which is conſidered as a complete period. And this temple being a figure of the Lord's appearance among men in the temple of a mortal body, the great work of his incarnation was completed, according to the perfection of his own wiſdom when the fulneſs of time came. And in his due time every member of the temple of his ſpiritual body will alſo be completed, and the glorious end anſwered for which he laid down his life.

C H A P. VII.

V. 1—12. This building Solomon prepared for himſelf. And as the Lord had the temple built to repreſent his body, ſo hath every ſoul a body prepared for itſelf, and in which, after the reſurrection, it ſhall dwell as in an everlaſting habitation. V. 14. Wiſdom—Which God gave him for the work. (Exod. xxxi. 3.)

V. 15—22. One of theſe pillars was called Jachin—ſtability, to endure hardſhip; the other Boaz—ſtrength to overcome oppoſition. Apoſtles are called pillars. (Gal. ii. 9.) And whoever becomes a ſervant of God, to promote his deſigns among men, will have occaſion for the ſupport of theſe two pillars built upon the true foundation.—By their ſtability in heavenly wiſdom to endure all things, and by the ſtrength of the holy ſpirit to ſet their hands to the plough, and not look back till they have finiſhed the work which God ſhall give them to do. Satan, the god of this world, hath alſo his ſtability; and the ſubjects of his ſpiritual kingdom reſt in their own ſelf-confident reſolutions to endure every difficulty; and upon the ſtrength of worldly influence—property, and the aid of men of power to overcome oppoſition. Thoſe pillars were adorned with lily-work.—The lilies, ſaith our Lord, toil not. (Mat. vi. 28, 29.) This was an emblem that the true ſervants of the Lord were to be without fear that hath torment, they being the ſervants of a gracious maſter, whoſe hand is never ſo ſhortned that it cannot ſave, and without all diſtreſſing carefulneſs, being his ſervants in whom all fulneſs dwells.

V. 23. A molten ſea—Which was to hold water for the prieſts to waſh their hands and feet in, when they entered upon the ſervice of the temple. In the living temple of the Lord's body there is alſo a full fountain, as a ſea opened for ſin and for uncleanneſs, and in which all may be waſhed as with pure water. (Tit. iii. 5.) And they that are not waſhed by him, have no part with him. (John xiii. 8.)

V. 24. There were ten knops in two rows—On this molten ſea; and there were ten commands of God in two tables—That the waſhing ſignified, might appear to be according to that word which converts the ſoul. (Eph. v. 26. Pſa. xix. 7.)

V. 25. There were twelve oxen to ſupport the molten ſea, and they looked to the four quarters of the world. And there were twelve Apoſtles of the Lamb to publiſh the everlaſting Goſpel to all the ends of the earth, and by the word to make known the purifying influence of that grace, by which men are cleanſed from the nature of ſin. And the ox being deemed clean by the law, and in his nature ſtrong and patient, they had in them a further repreſentation of the faithful public ſervants of the Saviour of men.

V. 26. The brim was wrought with flowers of lilies—To repreſent at once the ſpotleſs purity of that ſpiritual water which flows from the Rock of ages, and the eaſe with which it deſcends from him to all who would, by faith in a Redeemer's blood, waſh and be clean.

V. 27. The ſea was to waſh the worſhippers, the lavers the ſacrifice. There was but one ſea, but there were ten lavers. There is but ONE fountain wherein all worſhippers are to waſh; but the ſacrifice had ten lavers to be waſhed in; and the great ſacrifice had to fulfil the holy law of God ſummed up in the ten commandments. And as the ſins of men were laid upon the ſacrifice, the imputed guilt was to be waſhed away; and though the Great Sacrifice had no ſins of his own, yet it muſt needs be, that he ſhould paſs through ſufferings, and be obedient unto death, that the puniſhment due to the ſins of men might be done away.

V. 27—29. Theſe baſes—were the foundation of the lavers, as well as of the altar, and the adorable perfections of God are the foundation upon which all things ſtand. Upon theſe baſes were lions, oxen, and cherubims—Repreſenting the courage, and laborious patience of all that have the mind that was in Jeſus; and that these are always attended and assisted by the angels of his presence.

V. 30—37. The bases were placed on wheels, that they might be moved from one part of the temple to another. The gracious purposes of God are ever in motion; the Keeper of Israel neither slumbereth nor sleepeth; all the blessings purchased by his death are ready to be applied; and now, as when he was upon earth, he is going about by his spirit, his providence, his word, messengers, and by all his works and means to do his needy creatures good.

V. 38, 39. The ten lavers were divided as the ten commandments were in the two tables of the law: they were on the right, and on the left, probably to shew the necessity which all are under, of being surrounded with the sanctifying influences of the holy spirit, that all their duties to God and man may be acceptable in his sight, by the washing of regeneration.

V. 46. The king cast them in the clay—And the King of Glory formed all the sons of men out of the dust of the earth; and, as the potter with the clay, had both right and power to form them for such uses, and to place them in such stations as pleased him.

V. 47. Exceeding many—And so are those vessels of salvation, who are to be placed in the temple of the Lord in glory for ever. And though he knows all their names who made them, died for them, and prepared them for himself, yet, like the vessels of the temple, they are exceeding many, multitudes which no creature can number; neither is their weight—their worth found out—Their love and devotion to his holy service are only known to Him, whose favour is all their salvation and all their desire.

V. 49. The candlesticks are ten, which number signifies multitude. And those greater and lesser lights, which God hath sent among men in different ages and nations, may be compared to numberless lights to a dark and benighted world.

C H A P. VIII.

This chapter contains the account of the dedication of the temple. A tranſaction not to be equalled for its greatneſs and glory; repreſenting the dedication of God the Son, and the church he purchaſed with his blood to his Father.

V. 1. The elders, the heads of tribes, and the chief fathers were firſt called unto the king. And will not thoſe that have been the chief in the Iſrael of God in all ages, for humble devotion to his will, be the firſt called at the final conſecration of all the redeemed, to God and the Lamb for ever?

V. 2. All the men of Iſrael aſſembled themſelves unto the king—The largeneſs of heart which God had given him was known unto all; and Solomon, in aſſembling the elders, heads, and fathers of Iſrael, included all the people. Whoſoever would come might come. There was no interdict—no exception to any tribe, family, or ſingle perſon. In the month Ethnaim—Anſwering to part of the months of September and October. The harveſt was over, ſo that none were under a neceſſity of leaving any temporal bleſſing to waſte or periſh in the field, by their attending at this great dedication. God requires all men firſt to ſeek his kingdom of righteouſneſs, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt; and ſuch is his wiſdom and goodneſs, that in doing this, he, who is the governor of all things in heaven and earth, inſtead of depriving us of any thing truly for our good, hath charged himſelf with adding to us all we require; nay, even of giving us our heart's deſire, when we delight ourſelves in him. (Pſa. xxxvii. 4.)

V. 3—9. The ark of the covenant, containing the two tables of ſtone, on which were written the ten commandments, or the ſubſtance of the laws of God to men, was now brought into the moſt holy place of the temple. Till this was done, the temple, glorious as it was, only reſembled a lifeleſs body; but the ark of the covenant, having in it the very mind of God, being in the temple, then the building was complete, and the temple became God's dwelling-place, according to his promiſe of taking up his abode with his people. The cherubims ſpread their wings over the ark. And wherever God's mind or ſpirit is preſent in the mind of man, the gracious attributes of God are ſpread over that ſoul, that it may be protected and bleſſed by his Almighty power and goodneſs.

V. 10, 11. The temple being completed by placing in it the ark, and the ſacrifices being offered, the cloud—the evident token of God's immediate preſence filled the houſe. And as without blood-ſhedding—the blood of the Great Sacrifice, there is no remiſſion of ſins, every one muſt therefore firſt have an eye to this ſacrifice made by the God-man for the ſins of the world, before they are humbly to claim God's gracious promiſes of pouring out his 12 ¶ [k] Then spake Solomon, The Lord said that he would dwell [l] in the thick darkness.

13 [m] I have surely built thee an house to dwell in, a settled place for thee to abide in for ever.

14 And the king turned his face about, and blessed all the congregation of Israel: (and all the congregation of Israel stood)

15 And he said, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, which spake with his mouth unto David my father, and hath with his hand fulfilled it, saying,

16 [n] Since the day that I brought forth my people Israel out of Egypt, I chose no city out of all the tribes of Israel to build an house, that [o] my name might be therein; but I chose [p] David to be over my people Israel.

17 And [q] it was in the heart of David my father, to build an house for the name of the Lord God of Israel.

18 [r] And the Lord said unto David my father, Whereas it was in thine heart to build an house unto my name, thou didst well that it was in thine heart:

19 Nevertheless, thou shalt not build the house, but thy son that shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house unto my name.

20 And the Lord hath performed his word that he spake, and I am risen up in the room of David my father, and sit on the throne of Israel, as the Lord promised, and have built an house for the name of the Lord God of Israel.

21 And I have set there a place for the ark, wherein is [s] the covenant of the Lord, which he made with our fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egypt.

22 ¶ And Solomon stood before [t] the altar of the Lord, in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven:

23 And he said, Lord God of Israel, [u] there is no God like thee, in heaven above, or on earth beneath, [x] who keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants, that walk before thee with all their heart:

24 Who hast kept with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him: thou spakest also with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day.

25 Therefore now, Lord God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him, saying, [y] ‖ There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit on the throne of Israel; * so that thy children take heed to their way, that they walk before me as thou hast walked before me:

26 And now, O God of Israel, let thy word, I pray thee, be verified, which thou spakest unto thy servant David my father.

27 But [z] will God indeed dwell on the earth? behold, the heaven, and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee, how much less this house that I have builded?

28 Yet have thou respect unto the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O Lord my God, to hearken unto the cry and to the prayer, which thy servant prayeth before thee to day:

his spirit upon them, and blessing them with a conscious sense of his favour and presence with them. Though God had promised to put his name in the house which should be built, yet he did not manifest himself in it till after the sacrifices were offered; all which sacrifices were but types of the great sacrifice made by the Lord Jesus Christ. And if it be asked, why souls sincerely seeking the knowledge of the true God, and Jesus Christ, whom he hath sent by the holy spirit, do not obtain that knowledge according to the sacred promise? (John xiv. 21.) It may be answered, it is because such souls do not lay the right foundation—they do not proceed in their desires of knowing God, according to the order of his revealed will. But when they see themselves fallen sinful creatures, cut off from the favour of God by their actual transgressions, and then that their sins can only be atoned for, and blotted out by the blood of the Lamb, slain from the foundation of the world, and when they only regard this all-meritorious sacrifice, as the sole cause of their pardon and forgiveness with God, then surely his ways are equal, and he that hath not withheld his own Son, will with him freely communicate himself by his spirit, and be as consciously present in the soul that only looks for salvation by the Mediator's death, as he was evidently present in the temple after they had offered their sacrifice.

V. 12—21. Solomon perceiving that God did fill the place, whilst he beheld the cloud, he mentions the promise God had given thus to appear in mercy to his people; and that he had built this house by faith in this promise. And they who build their hopes on the promises of God, for the sake of the Son of his love, will, with Solomon, have the end of their faith answered to them. With this proof of God's presence, Solomon began to bless the congregation, by relating to them, that this was no other than that which God had mercifully given them to expect, that they might be blessed or happy in knowing that they were now accepted of God, whose mercy and faithfulness to them, according to his word, was now made evident to them all.

V. 22—66. To read over any part of the word of God as one would ordinary writings, is to do ourselves an injury in the next degree to that of neglecting to read the Scriptures: They are to be read as if we saw them coming immediately from the hand of God, whose Spirit dictated them: And the more we consider ourselves directly spoken to by the word of God, and as eye-witnesses and concerned in all that is represented in the Scriptures, the more likely are we to be benefited by them. And if in this manner we view this part of the Sacred History, we shall find in it matter of equal admiration and useful instruction. Were we to imagine ourselves within the most glorious house that was ever built, and that house filled with the evident presence of the Lord nature, the whole work is ascribed to God. (v. 38, 58.) In this prayer, Solomon is the type of the Great Intercessor at the throne of glory (Heb. vii. 25.) in behalf of all the fallen race of Adam; and by directing all to spread forth their hands towards that house—the temple, and the type of the LORD's body, all are pointed to the person of the Redeemer, as the only medium through which pardon, and every blessing of grace and providence, is received from God by all who will accept of them. And God himself, being manifestly present in the temple, confirmed the words of Solomon; as if it had been said immediately from heaven—God now appears to make it known to all the inhabitants of the earth, that he will save and bless all, who, by his grace, worship him through the promised Seed and Saviour of men—who look only for mercy through him, and for grace to incline the heart to whatever is good, and to deliver it from the plague of its inbred evil; and that under all the circumstances in which men can suffer, and under all the wants, which dependant creatures have, whatsoever is asked by faith—in confidence of God's goodness for the sake of his Son, who appeared on earth in the temple of a mortal body, God will give it, or by withholding prepare the believing soul for the receipt of greater blessings. All the people seeing the evidence of God's faithfulness to his word, went to their tents joyful and glad of heart; as all cannot fail to be, to whom God manifests himself by his spirit, as he did to them by his immediate appearance amongst them, which produced this heartfelt joy and gladness.

AND [a] it came to pass when Solomon had finished the building of the house of the Lord, and the king's house, and [b] all Solomon's desire which he was pleased to do,

2 That the Lord appeared to Solomon the second time, [c] as he had appeared unto him at Gibeon.

3 And the Lord said unto him, I have heard thy prayer and thy supplication that thou hast made before me: I have hallowed this house which thou hast built, [d] to put my name there for ever, [e] and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.

4 And if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, in integrity of heart, and in uprightness, to do according to all that I have commanded thee, and wilt keep my statutes and my judgments:

5 Then I will establish the throne of thy kingdom upon Israel for ever, [i] as I promised to David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man upon the throne of Israel.

6 [g] But if you shall at all turn from following me, you or your children, and will not keep my commandments and my statutes, which I have set before you, but go and serve other gods, and worship them:

7 Then will I cut off Israel out of the land which I have given them; and this house which I have hallowed [h] for my name, will I cast out of my sight, [i] and Israel shall be a proverb, and a by-word among all people:

8 And [k] at this house, which is high, every one that passeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss; and they shall say, [l] Why hath the Lord done thus unto this land, and to this house?

9 And they shall answer, Because they forsook the Lord their God, who brought forth their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and have taken hold upon other gods, and have worshipped them, and served them: therefore hath the Lord brought upon them all this evil.

V. 2. The Lord appeared—In answer to Solomon's prayer; and this appearance was in the same manner in which the Lord had appeared to him before.

V. 3. I have hallowed this house for ever—It being the type of my appearing on earth among men, in a mortal body like their own. And there perpetually—continually shall mine eyes—my watchful care be; and mine heart—my tender regard. Not merely with this building, but with him of whom it is the representation, and with whom God the Father is ever well pleased.

V. 4, 5. And if thou—And all that call upon my name, walk before me—Live by faith, as in my sight, not holding the truth in unrighteousness, but with uprightness and integrity of heart obeying the influence of my grace, and living as in my sight, then will I fulfil all that I have promised to men, for the sake of their Mediator.

V. 6—9. But if you shall at all turn from the God of your salvation; then such is the nature which God hath given to men, and such is the unchangeable nature of his dealings with them, that though he is loving unto all men for their Redeemer's sake, yet, when they wilfully reject his offered grace; when they know his will, but wilfully depart from it in heart and in life, God cannot, consistent with the nature he hath given to men, bestow his blessings upon them against their wills; but their wilful disobedience will turn their very mercies into curses, and, when the cause of their sufferings shall be asked, They shall answer, Because they forsook the Lord their Redeemer, to whose laws and government they would not submit themselves, after all that they had seen and known of his power and willingness to do them good, and to bless them beyond their highest expectations.

V. 10—14. Hiram was not satisfied with the places which Solomon gave him in the land of Canaan. The human mind ever proposing great things to itself in this world, till it is truly humbled by the grace of God, and convinced that it only deserves his wrath, it will not be satisfied with the part which he sees best to appoint for it; and thus are many, with Hiram, offended, and lose the future blessings which God intends to bestow, by not thankfully accepting whatever he is pleased to send.

V. 15. The reason of the levy—Both of men and money, to forward the king's designs. And the subjects of the Heavenly King must shew their desire, that his will should be done on earth, by giving up both their persons and their property to forward his service.

is such an abuse of that desire of knowledge which the soul possesses for the best purpose, as will from itself, and out of its own mouth, condemn it for the wilful, long-continued neglect of that knowledge which only could make it wise unto present and everlasting salvation.

V. 14—29. This description of the wisdom, power, and riches of Solomon's kingdom, is doubtless to convey to us right notions of his kingdom who was greater than Solomon; that when we allow ourselves time to reflect on the prosperous, safe, and happy situation in which the subjects of Solomon lived, we may be led to look for that real substantial prosperity, safety, and happiness which they possess, who are the spiritual subjects of the Saviour of men, and who are living on earth as those that are to reign with him for ever. And whoever are truly desirous of doing this, may see, in the life of the Lord Jesus, in what spirit and manner they are required to live as subjects and heirs of his glorious kingdom. In his life, as man, is shewn us how God himself did live in our nature on earth. They that walk in his steps shall follow him to glory. Had human power, greatness, and riches been of the nature of spiritual blessedness, Jesus would doubtless have appeared more glorious on earth than his servant Solomon. The general mistake of the people of Israel was, that the promised Messiah would appear great in worldly glory among men. But, when he came, he shewed that his thoughts were not as men's thoughts; that his kingdom was in the inward power over sin, in thought, word, and deed; and for its greatness, that of an heavenly mind, which looked upon all the things of this life as of little moment to an immortal soul; and its riches consisted not of gold, but in possessing the gracious presence of God.

CHAP. XI.

V. 1—8. Solomon, after having been made a type of the promised Messiah, resists the grace of God, and turns from him; and being left to himself, with all the wisdom he possessed, and all the experience God had given him of his goodness, he becomes an eminent example of the folly and impiety of the human mind. Instead of keeping near to God in a spirit of humble dependance, and looking for those holy joys which only proceed from him, he openly and publicly ceases to be the faithful servant of that God whose goodness had made him great, and impiously worships idols, in compliance with the weak companions of his sensuality.

V. 9. The Lord was angry with him—And the following history shews the greatness of that anger. And in this, God gave to mankind to understand, that though all the blessings of his grace and providence were bestowed, for the sake of the Redeemer, upon the same person, if that person resisted his grace, departed from the Lord, and by wicked works disobeyed him, that the love of God would then be turned into anger. And as a greater proof how dreadfully a soul may fall from the favour of God into wickedness and misery, it is observed, that Solomon turned from the Lord that had appeared to him twice. By God's first appearing in mercy to the soul, is to be understood when he pardons all its sins; and the next is, when he sanctifies the powers of the soul, and gives the whole mind that holiness without which none can see him. And by its being said that the Lord had appeared twice to Solomon, we may understand that he had been sanctified by faith in God his Saviour.

V. 10—13. The Lord, in pronouncing this sentence against Solomon, shews, that he had offended against the clear knowledge which God, from himself, had given him of his holy will. And will it not be thus with all that are finally disobedient to the heavenly calling? Will not God charge them with offending against the knowledge which he gave them immediately from himself, of what he required of them?

V. 14—25. When Solomon lived by faith in God, and walked in his ways, his kingdom was then in peace; but when he turned from God, and gave way to the worshipping of idols and to the love of sensuality, then the Divine protection withdrew itself; and this was no sooner done than adversaries rose up against Solomon and the peace of his kingdom. And thus it is with all—When a man's this, he sought to kill Jeroboam, as Saul had sought to kill David; and Solomon, no less than Saul, set himself to defeat the effect of the known determination of God.

V. 41—43. In this place no mention is made of any degree of that humiliation and submission to the will of God, which David his father shewed; nor is there here any thing said of his repenting or reforming, or the least expression of godly sorrow for the public dishonour which he had offered to God, and his true religion, by offering divine honours to dumb idols, and by turning in his heart from the love of God to the love of creatures, contrary to the great command written no less in the word of God, than on all his works, and in right reason—That the Creator and Giver of all should be loved by all his rational creatures with their whole hearts. God's anger followed by the denunciation of his judgments against Solomon; and Solomon's avowed opposition to the known will of God, concludes the account which is given of him. His name is not recorded with that of his father David's in the account given of the faithful. (Heb. xi. 32.) What were the transactions which took place between the soul of this once great man and that gracious God that died for it, before it left the body, is among the secret things which belong unto God. But it is that blessed Lord, infinite in compassion as he is, who hath placed, between the finally impenitent and himself, a gulf which none can ever pass, (Luke xvi. 26.) from the misery and anguish which they have chosen, by the wilful evil which they would commit against their knowledge of the will of God, and the free offers of his grace to enable all to perform whatever he hath commanded.

CHAP. XII.

V. 1—5. By this, we see Solomon had laid heavy burdens upon his people; and the wrong he did them by requiring immoderate supplies, is now made use of as the means by which the judgement of God against his idolatry was executed.

V. 6—14. The advice of the old men to the son of Solomon was, that he should consider himself as the servant of the public; the advice of the young men was, that he should answer them as his slaves, whom he had a right to tax at his pleasure, and then to punish them as he thought fit, if they rebelled against his government.

and being ſo, Rehoboam's anſwer produced from himſelf the puniſhment of his own pride, and with that the ſentence which God had declared againſt his father's diſobedience.

V. 16—20. The people ſeeing that the king did not regard their requeſt of relief in the taxes, did not wait to make any further repreſentations to him, but at once renounce his authority, and ſhew that they were partakers of the ſame ſpirit with their prince. And as ſoon as he ſent to execute the determination which he had come to in the pride of his heart, it met with the fury of their reſentment, which ſhewed itſelf by ſtoning the receiver of the revenue to death.

V. 21—24. Rehoboam and the heads of the tribe of Judah, and thoſe of Benjamin that ſubmitted to him, obeyed the meſſage of the prophet, when they underſtood that this was no other than the judgment of God; and by this it appears that the fear of God was amongſt them. When he forbad them to fight againſt their brethren, they returned according to his word.

V. 25—33. Jeroboam was determined to ſecure his own greatneſs; and as the means of doing ſo, he makes uſe of the power which God had given him to eſtabliſh a form of worſhip, which ſhould, as he thought, be ſubſervient to his intereſt. Solomon's example had prepared the people's minds for idolatry, and Jeroboam eſtabliſhed it. And what is obſerved in the conduct of ſo many of the kings and people of Iſrael in their diſpoſition to idol-worſhip, is no other than a diſcovery of the nature of the human mind, which, being ſenſual, is ever fond of objects of ſight and ſenſe; and when human authority gives the ſanction of bowing down to meer externals, be they forms or images, all men are as much in danger as the people of Iſrael were, in being led away with the torrent of the general example, though the word of God is ever declaring to all—That He is a ſpirit, and is only to be worſhipped in ſpirit and in truth—with fear—by faith—in love producing active obedience; and devout and humble reſignation, and ſubmiſſion to his holy will.

V. 1—10. By this paſſage we ſee that ſuch as give themſelves up to the ſervice of God, may be ſent on meſſages, and have duties given them to diſcharge, which ſhall expoſe them to equal contempt and danger; but they that have the word of God for their warrant in what they do, have only to fear that they do not offend God in the ſpirit and manner in which they perform his ſervice. against his own falshood. The crime of the other was, in allowing himself, on meer human testimony, to be prevailed with to act contrary to the directions which he had received on the Divine authority—He was disobedient to the word of the Lord. And this was the sin unto death. And who shall number the lives that are lost by being consciously disobedient to the declared will of God, as it is made known in the Scriptures? He that would not disobey God at the desire of the king, was prevailed on to do it by a man of known religious character, who gave himself in this instance to the service of the father of lies, for some motive which he had, but not revealed, for wishing to have one at his house whom God had been pleased to own in so remarkable a manner.

V. 33, 34. After this—After all that Jeroboam had seen and heard of the goodness and severity of God, he returned not from his evil way. When men cease to be affected either with the love or wrath of God, then their danger is that which, in this instance, is set before all men—That of their being destroyed from off the face of the earth.

This caution proceeded: First, From the pride of his heart, which made him loath to confess his folly in worshipping idols, and to give glory to the God whom he had forsaken. Secondly, From suspicion, lest the Prophet should give her no answer. Thirdly, From policy, lest his people should, by his example, be drawn to forsake their idol-worship, and to return to the God of Judah, whom they had forsaken.

He had not spent his life in looking about him in this mortal world, and in taking pleasure in beholding the things which perish in the using; he had made his sight with all his other senses, as they are in mercy intended to be used, to serve and be subject to the mind within. And how great will their rejoicing be, who shall before death put out the mortal sight for ever, make use of it for the great end for which it was given—to take in information to the soul of that God, whom to know is peace, and blessedness, and life eternal?

eternal? (Job xxii. 21. John xvii. 3.) How pleaſing then will be the remembrance of all thoſe ſeaſons, in which, by the grace of God, the ſoul denied itſelf the pleaſure of looking about on the things that periſh, for the ſake of gaining time to make further diſcoveries of the nature and the will of their great Creator and Redeemer?

V. 6. Why feigneſt thou thyſelf—By which diſcovery he both reproves their folly, who thought to conceal themſelves or their deſigns from God; and withal gives her aſſurance of the truth and certainty of that meſſage which he was to deliver.

V. 9. Above all that were before thee—Above all the former kings of my people, as Saul, and Solomon, and Rehoboam. Thou haſt made thee other gods, and molten images—Not as if the Iſraelites eſteemed the calves made of their own gold to be gods indeed, which it is incredible, but only pledges of God's preſence and worſhipping through them, but becauſe God rejected their whole worſhip: however they called or accounted it, he reckoned it a manifeſt defection from him, and a betaking of themſelves to other gods, or devils, as they are called, (2 Chron. xi. 15.) whom alone they ſerved and worſhipped therein, whatſoever pretences they had to the contrary. To provoke me to anger—Whereby thou didſt provoke me. For otherwiſe this was not Jeroboam's deſign in it, but only to eſtabliſh himſelf in the throne. Thou caſt me behind thy back—Deſpiſed and forſaken me, my commands and my worſhip, as we do things which we caſt behind our backs.

V. 10. I will bring evil upon him that is ſhut up and left—Thoſe who had eſcaped the fury of their enemies being ſhut up in caves or caſtles; or, becauſe they were left, over-looked, or ſpared. But now they ſhall be all ſearched out, and brought to deſtruction.

V. 11. Both in the city and in the country they ſhall die unburied.

V. 12. The child ſhall die—And by this, judge of the truth of the reſt of my prophecy. Thus in confuſion and ſorrow are they ſent away from God, who would by wicked works turn away from him, whilſt the willing offers of his mercy and grace waited upon them. What is it that God hath not done to prevent men from deſtroying themſelves by ſin!

V. 13. All Iſrael ſhall mourn for him—And for the ſad calamities which ſhould follow, whereof his death was a certain preſage. He only of Jeroboam ſhall come to the grave—Shall have the honour of burial, denied to the reſt. Some good thing—Some degree of faith in God his Redeemer—ſome pious inclinations and intentions of taking away the calves, or of permitting or obliging his people to go up to Jeruſalem to worſhip, if God gave him life and authority to do it, and of truſting God with his kingdom in that caſe. In the houſe of Jeroboam—Which is added for his greater commendation; he was good in the midſt of temptation and wicked examples. They that open their hearts to the influence of the Holy Spirit will be good, if, like Lot, they live ſurrounded with the wicked; and they that reſiſt the grace by which men alone can be ſaved, they will continue ſinful in their nature, and more or leſs ſo in their conduct, were they ſurrounded by none but thoſe that lived continually in the fear and love of God.

boam's wicked command. No authority is to be obeyed, in oppoſition to the declared will of God. They that will ſave their lives by ſubmitting to commit ſin, will loſe their lives. As a reed is ſhaken in the water—So ſhall the kingdom and people of Iſrael be toſſed to and fro by foreign invaſions and civil wars; by oppoſite kings and factions, and by the diſſentions of the people. The river—Euphrates, often ſo called by way of eminency. They have made their groves—For the worſhip of their idols, God having before condemned the making and worſhipping of the calves, by which they pretended to worſhip the true God; he now takes notice that they were not contented with the calves, but were many of them fallen into the worſhip of the heatheniſh Baals, which they commonly exerciſed in groves.

V, 16. The ſins of Jeroboam, who made Iſrael to ſin—By his authority requiring and compelling them to do it. This is mentioned as a great aggravation of his wickedneſs, that he was not content with his own ſin, but was the chief cauſe of drawing others into ſin, and of corrupting and undoing the whole kingdom: Therefore God, upon all occaſions, mentions him with this brand of infamy.

V. 19. They are written in the book of the chronicles—By which you are not to underſtand that canonical book of the Chronicles, for that was written long after this book; but a book of civil records, the annals, wherein all remarkable paſſages were recorded by the king's command from day to day; out of which the ſacred penman, by the direction of God's ſpirit, took out thoſe paſſages which his wiſdom ſaw was ſufficient to make known to mankind what was his holy will, under all the circumſtances of this life of trial.—In looking back on this paſſage we may obſerve, firſt, how fatally the human mind, after being fully acquainted with the will of God, and poſſeſſing grace to do it, may fall into intire ignorance of the nature of God, and into the greateſt impiety and wickedneſs.—By the promiſes of God to Jeroboam, it appears he had been adopted into the divine favour through faith in the promiſed Saviour; and the charge againſt him, when he had been reproved by the prophet is, that he returned not from the evil he had choſen, back to God, from whoſe worſhip and ſervice he had departed. But wilfully continuing in his ſin, he became ſo dark as to imagine he could obtain the information he wanted from the prophet, and which none but God could enable him to give, under the cover of the diſguiſe which he required his wife to put on. —The ſecond conſideration in this paſſage is the nature of the ſin, which is to be underſtood by worſhipping the golden calves. The motive which led to the making of the calves, was the fear Jeroboam had of his not being able to retain the people under his government, if they went up to Jeruſalem to worſhip. By this it appears he had firſt forgot God—he did not believe in him who both could and would have performed his promiſe of continuing the kingdom to him, had he not wilfully, and againſt the free offers of his grace, broke the conditions; and not believing in the power and faithfulneſs of God, ſelf-love, the fear of man—fear of loſing that honour which he deſired to retain, ſoon took place in him. From this principle of ſelf-love he makes the golden calves, as the means of ſecuring himſelf againſt any change in the minds of the people; or, in other words, ſecuring himſelf in the poſſeſſion of that worldly object which his heart was ſet upon. So that this worſhip of the golden calves, was no other than that uſe which is made or deſired to be made of gold, by every man that is not living to God but to himſelf, in the love of one or many worldly objects on which he hath ſet his heart. Gold being the ſign of them all, he offers it the devotion of his ſoul; it is in his heart the root of all evil—becauſe his dependance is placed upon it as the means of ſecuring to him an happineſs independant of God.—The third inquiry is the nature of Iſrael's ſin in making their groves; or doing that which the worſhippers of Baal did. And what is this but that which every man does who thinks by means of gold—of his property, he has a foundation for happineſs in his own poſſeſſion; and his delight is either in the meer property itſelf, or in the gratifications which he procures or promiſes himſelf by its means. The judgments of God pronounced by the prophet on account of theſe ſins, are here underſtood to be (beſides what actually took place in the caſe of the king and people of Iſrael) a plain repreſentation of that wrath, which in other parts of the ſacred writings is ſo clearly revealed againſt every ſoul of man that forgets God; and ſinks into that ſelf-love which would have an happineſs independant of him; and, in conſequence of this deſire lives for gold—for property, that it may live in the poſſeſſion of ſuch honours or pleaſures as for the preſent, or in proſpect, affords the fallen ſoul the moſt ſatisfaction or delight. So that whenever we read in the continuation of the Sacred Hiſtory of the golden calves or groves, or the crime of Jeroboam who made Iſrael to ſin, the application to every one's own heart is—Am I a lover of myſelf and not of God—Do I fear man or the loſs of any rank, employment, or honour that cometh of men—Am I a lover of the world, of gold—of property or ſenſual pleaſure by any name? And if, by God's holy ſpirit convincing my conſcience, I am obliged to anſwer, This is my caſe, my ſtate; then I am no leſs chargeable with ſpiritual, than the Iſraelites were with actual idolatry. And whenever we ſee the execution of the ſentence pronounced in this paſſage againſt the people of Iſrael, we have before us a plain diſcovery of that ſentence which will be inflicted on all that are found at laſt poſſeſſed of the ſpirit of idolatry, and not of the mind which was in Jeſus; which God, for his ſake, hath ſo freely promiſed to give to all that truly aſk him. (Luke xi. 13.)

V. 20. He ſlept with his fathers—He died a natural death. And by his diſtruſt of that gracious God and Redeemer, whoſe goodneſs had made him great, and the ſins into which he fell in conſequence of that diſtruſt, inſtead of having his name recorded with the divine approbation among God's faithful ſervants; to ſhew the danger of thoſe unrenewed deſires of the ſoul, of which his actions made him an eminent example, his name hath been made a name of reproach and infamy amongſt mankind, by the infinitely compaſſionate God that made him and died for him, and who, with an earthly crown, merited for him, and offered to him, a crown of righteouſneſs.

3 And he walked in all the sins of his father, which he had done before him: and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as the heart of David his father.

4 Nevertheless,

V. 21. Rehoboam was forty and one years old—Therefore he was born a year before Solomon was king. His age and opportunities of knowing the will of God, according to which he was required to have governed, is doubtless to be considered as an aggravation of his crimes, and a vindication of the ways of God to him; for the opportunities of knowing his will are noticed by the Judge of all, however they may be slighted by men. To whom much is given, of the same much is required.

V. 23. They also built them high places—They followed the example of the Israelites, although they had the temple in their kingdom, and liberty of worshipping God in his own way, and the counsels, sermons, and examples of the priests and Levites, to teach and establish them, and the dreadful example of Israel's horrid apostacy, to caution and terrify them. What evidence of the greatness and depth of the original corruption of man's nature, which is thus ready to break forth into all sorts of wickedness.

V. 24. They went to the utmost lengths of wickedness. And this will all do, who, with Judah, go up to their high places of pride, and groves of sensual pleasure. The God whom they have rejected, giving them up to their own hearts lusts, they work all manner of abominable wickedness with greediness.

V. 25. In the fifth year of king Rehoboam—Soon after his and his people's apostacy, which was not till his fourth year. Shishak king of Egypt came up—Either from ambition, and a desire to enlarge his empire; or, from a covetous desire of possessing these great treasures which David and Solomon had left: and, above all, by God's providence, disposing his heart to this expedition for Rehoboam's punishment.

V. 26. He took away the treasures—It is implied, that first he took the city.

V. 27. They that forsake God, their gold—their valuable spiritual possessions, are turned into that which is of little value.

V. 29. In the book—Such a book of Chronicles as that mentioned above, ver. 19.

V. 30. There was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam—Not a general war, going against each other with their whole force; this was forbid, as all contention is forbid amongst the spiritual Israel and Judah in all ages. But they did each other lesser injuries, and carried on hostilities in a more restrained manner, which was no less forbid; and by this it appears, that the general mind of both parties had little of His spirit, who laid down his life for his murderers, and who commands all to love not only their known friends, but their avowed enemies.

V. 31. His mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess—This is repeated as a thing observable.

CHAP. XV.

V. 3. Not as David—Whose heart having yielded to the grace of repentance, and with godly sorrow having turned from all his sins, and according to God's revealed will having humbly sought mercy from him for the sake of the promised Saviour of mankind; God, with the pardon of all his offences, blotted them out, they are not mentioned against him with reproach: and this is but a part of the blessedness which they have, whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered—they to whom the Lord will not impute sin; (Rom. iv. 7, 8.) the same having been atoned for to his justice, by that gracious Redeemer in whom they believe.

V. 5. Save only—This and the like phraſes are not to be underſtood as excluſive of every ſinful action, but only of a ſinful courſe, or of an habitual and continued apoſtacy from God.

V. 6. There was war—Though God was pleaſed to ſhew ſo much reſpect to David, as for his ſake to continue the ſucceſſion to the kingdom in his poſterity, yet he thought fit to manifeſt his diſpleaſure againſt David's ſucceſſors for their ſins, and to mix their honour and happineſs with wars, the conſtant expreſſion of God's diſpleaſure.

V. 7. In the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah—In their annals; whence they were long after this time tranſlated into the ſacred books.

V. 9. In the twentieth year—Towards the end of the year.

V. 10. His mother's name—His grandmother's, who is called his mother, as David is called Abijam's father.

V. 11. Aſa did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord—He believed in him, and in conſequence of doing ſo he began to govern according to God's law.

V. 12. He took away—All of them he could find out; but ſome eſcaped his obſervation and cenſure, as appears from chap. xxii. 46. None but God being able to diſcover all ſecret wickedneſs, and to puniſh the impenitent authors of it with baniſhment from his kingdom of glory; where there will be none that are unholy; all that enter therein being firſt waſhed, and made white in the blood of the Lamb.—But without there will be dogs—all that remain covered with the defilement of their inward corruption, and with the ſhame of their actual guilt.

V. 13. Her he removed—He took from her either the name and authority of Queen Regent, which ſhe, having been Rehoboam's wife, and Abijam's mother, took to herſelf during Aſa's minority, and abuſed to the patronage of idolatry. She had made an idol—Heb. a terror, or horror, an horrible idol. Aſa deſtroyed it by the brook Kidron—That, when it was burnt to powder, it might be thrown into the water.

V. 14. But the high places were not removed—He took away the altars of the ſtrange gods, and the high places where they were worſhipped; but as for thoſe high places where the true God was worſhipped, he did not take them away, which ought to have been done. In this faithful hiſtory the ſmalleſt defect is obſerved, that all who will read it may know, that the God with whom all men have to do, ſearcheth the very heart and reins; and if there is but one high place—any thing that exalts itſelf in thought or deſire againſt God, or any thing contrary to humble love, God knows it altogether; and though it may be as much to the mind as an hand or an eye to the body, it muſt be parted with before the ſoul can enter into life eternal. By this inſtance of Aſa, we ſee how thoſe that are the faithful followers of God in an eminent degree, may forſake their own mercies, and by retaining one favourite deſire, or allowing one ſelf-pleaſing thought to remain, may, for years, deprive themſelves of the full conſolation which God, for Chriſt's ſake, offers to all, and which they have, even with all the ſufferings of mortality, in whom the Holy Spirit is allowed to have free courſe to run, and to be glorified in their entire ſanctification. (1 Theſſ. iv. 3. 1 Cor. iii. 16. John xiv. 23.) Aſa his heart was perfect—He had that faith which worketh by love and produces obedience, and which in him was entire, and without any other exception than that of omitting to remove the high places, that the one true God and the Redeemer of Iſrael might be worſhipped only in the temple at Jeruſalem, where he had promiſed to manifeſt himſelf, as he hath promiſed to do to all who, in the temple of their heart, worſhip him in ſpirit and in truth.

V. 15. Which his father had dedicated—Abijam, when he was in diſtreſs, and going to fight with Jeroboam, (2 Chron. 13.) though afterwards he did not perform his vows, nor bring in what he had devoted.

V. 16. All their days—So long as they two lived and reigned together.

V. 17. Ramah—He choſe this place, becauſe it was in the way from his kingdom to Jeruſalem, and, as ſome add, in or near the ſtraits of the mountains, where they could eaſily diſcover and hinder der all passengers that way. The object of this war seems to have been to prevent his subjects or strangers from going over to the king of Judah's dominions. And how many wars have there been between the spiritual Israel and Judah, from the same motive of preventing an increase of numbers to an opposite party? The human mind, from its natural love of property and desire of making a great shew in its own sight, and in the sight of others, hath not done a little to prevent their increase who did not follow with them; and that, as the effects have proved, in the same spirit the apostles were in, when they asked their compassionate Lord, If they should call for fire from heaven to consume those that had shewn themselves contrary to him.

V. 18. Asa sent them to Ben-hadad—Wherein he committed three great faults, amongst many others. First, He alienated things consecrated to God, without necessity. Secondly, He did this out of distrust of that God whose power and goodness he had lately experienced. Thirdly, He did this for an ill intent, to hire him to the breach of his league and covenant with Baasha, and to take away part of that land, which by right, and the special gift of God, belonged to the Israelites. A great distinction is made in the Scriptures between using means in dependance on the aid and blessing of God, and that of using the same or any other means, having the trust in the means and not in God. As no soul of man can be safe or happy at death, but in committing itself and all its interests and concerns into the hands of God; so no action of human life, great or small, is what God requires it should be, which is not consistent with this final trust in him. And hence it is that whatsoever is not of faith is sin—Whatsoever does not spring from a trust and confidence in God, is no less contrary to his will, than it is to the very nature of all real and certain happiness in the mind of man.

V. 19. There is a league—After the division of the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, Ben-hadad was in league with both of them; he thought it his wisdom and interest to leave them to themselves to undo one another by their intestine wars, and so to prepare the way to his conquest of both; whereas his invading of either of them might have made up the breach, and forced them to unite against their common enemy. And therefore, as soon as he was free from this fear, and one of them needed and earnestly desired his help against the other, he gladly embraced the opportunity. That he may depart from me—That being called to defend himself, he may be forced to depart from my territories.

V. 20. Ben-hadad smote—The northern parts of Baasha's kingdom, which were nearest to his own kingdom of Damascus, and most remote from those parts where Baasha was now employed, which were in the most southern parts of his dominions.

V. 21. Baasha dwelt in Tirzah—There he abode to defend his own kingdoms, and durst not return to oppose Asa, lest the Syrian King should make a second and worse invasion. So for the present Asa met with success, as on the other hand men sometimes meet with disappointment as to the things of this life when their actions proceed from right principles; and from hence arises a reason for that command of not judging from appearance; human events not carrying with them evidence of the real causes from which they arise, either in the public affairs of a nation, or the concerns of a family, or of any individual. Good men suffer, bad men prosper; wrong actions are successful, and right ones meet with disappointment in this life; but whatever uncertainty there may be in men's judgments on the characters of their fellow-creatures, from the apparent evils that befal them, or the prosperity that seems to attend them, this is more certain than the duration of the earth and visible heavens—That blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord.

V. 22. Asa took away the stones and timber—He only got that which was of little value, by the success of his alliance with a stranger to the God of Israel.

V. 23. Nevertheless he was diseased in his feet—God in mercy afflicted him in his person, that he might lead him to look to himself for relief, who alone can heal all the maladies of both the body and mind; but Asa did not seek relief from the Lord on this occasion any more than the former. In the public danger he sought for safety from human strength, and in his personal suffering he sought for relief from the physician's skill; not in either case, as all are required, first asking wisdom and direction of God, and then to ask his blessing on the means to be used in obedience to his will.

C H A P. XVI.

V. 1. The Lord came to Jehu—A prophet. The ſon of Hanani—Who alſo was a prophet.

V. 2. I exalted thee out of the duſt—Of which the higheſt-born ſons of men are made, and to which, in common with the loweſt of mankind, they muſt return. How is Baaſha's exaltation to the kingdom aſcribed to God, when he got it by treachery? The act of Baaſha, in killing his maſter, was an act of Divine Juſtice. And if Baaſha had done this in obedience to God's command, and with a ſingle deſign to execute God's vengeance threatened againſt him, it had been no more a ſin, than Jehu's act in killing Jehoram, upon the ſame account. But that Baaſha did this, meerly to gratify his own pride, or covetouſneſs, or malice; this was not from God, but from himſelf, and therefore is charged upon him as murder.

V. 6. Baaſha—Committed the ſame crimes which Nahab had been guilty of, whoſe executioner he was; ſo that he was in that ſtate of hardened and daring wickedneſs which they are guilty of, who break the ſame laws for which they have ſeen others ſuffer for breaking.

V. 7. By Jehu came the word of the Lord againſt Baaſha, and againſt his houſe—Jehu did what God commanded him, though it was at the hazard of his life.

V. 8. Two years—One compleat, and part of the other, which is frequently reckoned for a year.

Before Christ 930. of Asa king of Judah, and reigned in his stead.

11 ¶ And it came to pass when he began to reign, as soon as he sat on his throne, that he slew all the house of Baasha: he left him [k] not one that pisseth against a wall, † neither of his kinsfolks, nor of his friends.

12 Thus did Zimri destroy all the house of Baasha, according to the word of the Lord, which he spake against Baasha, ‡ [l] by Jehu the prophet;

13 For all the sins of Baasha, and the sins of Elah his son, by which they sinned, and by which they made Israel to sin, in provoking the Lord God of Israel to anger [m] with their vanities.

14 Now the rest of the acts of Elah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

929. 15 ¶ In the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah, did Zimri reign seven days in Tirzah: and the people were encamped [n] against Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines.

16 And the people that were encamped heard say, Zimri hath conspired, and also hath slain the king: wherefore all Israel made Omri the captain of the host, king over Israel that day in the camp.

17 And Omri went up from Gibbethon, and all Israel with him, and they besieged Tirzah. Before Christ 929.

18 And it came to pass when Zimri saw that the city was taken, that he went into the palace of the king's house, and burnt the king's house over him with fire, and died; 929.

19 For his sins which he sinned in doing evil in the sight of the Lord, in walking in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin which he did to make Israel sin.

20 Now the rest of the acts of Zimri, and his treason that he wrought, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

22 But the people that followed Omri, prevailed against the people that followed Tibni the son of Ginath: so Tibni died, and Omri reigned.

23 ¶ In the thirty and one year of Asa king of Judah, began Omri to reign over Israel twelve years: six years reigned he in Tirzah.

24 And he bought the hill Samaria of Shemer, for two talents of silver, and built on the hill, and called the name of the city which

V. 9, 10.—As he was drinking himself drunk, Zimri went in and smote him, and killed him—And what is the security which any drunkard has that death shall not smite him, whilst he is in the careless or wilful commission of a crime which, no less than any other crime which men can commit, excludes the soul that dies without repentance from the kingdom of God? (Gal. v. 19, &c.) Surely it must be the favourite work of those wicked spirits which rebelled against God in heaven, and who blaspheme his holy name for ever, to tempt those men to trifle with omnipotence, and trample his sacred laws under their feet in those countries where his will is best known.

V. 11. He left not one of his kinsfolks, nor of his friends—His confidents and familiar acquaintance, such as were most likely to hinder his settlement in the throne, and to avenge their friends quarrel. And by this we are doubtless to understand the sin, and, in consequence of it, the danger there is to all, who choose for their friends, such as are the known enemies to God by wicked works.

V. 12. Thus did Zimri against Baasha—Thus fulfilling God's threatening; but either without knowing them, or meerly for his own ends.

V. 13. Provoking the Lord with their vanities—Their idols, often called vanities, because they are but imaginary deities, and meer nothings, having nothing of God in them, and nothing of power to do either good or hurt.

V. 18. Zimri burnt the king's house over him, and died—Zimri burnt it upon himself; that neither himself nor the royal palace and treasures might come into the hands of his adversary.

V. 19. For his sins—This befel him for his sins.

V. 21. Israel divided into two parts—Fell into a civil war: yet neither this, nor any other of God's dreadful judgments could bring them to repentance; which is an evidence of their impiety, and how ripe they were for ruin. Half followed Tibni, to make him king—Disdaining that the soldiers should usurp such a power over the whole kingdom. And half followed Omri—Because they approved the person, though not the manner of his election. The whole family of Israel were now divided, and again subdivided. The blessings of union only belong to them that fear the Lord, whose spirit of love is the only real bond of union amongst mankind.

V. 22. Omri prevailed—By the appointment and judgment of God, giving up the Israelites to him who was much the worst; ver. 25, 26. Tibni died—A violent death, in the battle.

V. 23. Twelve years—He reigned four years in a state of war with Tibni, and eight years peaceably. God, by his providence, tried, by means of afflictions and blessings, to produce in him that godly sorrow which leads to repentance; but it appears that both, with all the offers of his convincing and converting grace, were offered in vain.

V. 24. He bought and built—But he neither confessed nor forsook his sins, nor sought to the Almighty Being, that made him, and died for him for mercy. What hath all he bought and built, afforded his immortal spirit for all the ages since he lived in a mortal body? And what will it avail him in that day, when he shall be called upon to give an account of himself unto God, to say, He had the title of a king and conquered men, bought an hill and built a city upon this earth, which in that day will be no more for ever? Nay, could he say he had gained the whole world whilst he lived, what would it profit him, if, incumbered by the cares of it, he neglected that salvation which cost the life of the Son of God in our nature to obtain for all who would but regard or accept of it?

V. 1. Elijah—Who is here brought in without any mention of his father or mother; a man raiſed by God, as a witneſs for himſelf, in this degenerate time. The judgment he pronounced, that there ſhould be no rain for the ſpace of three years, was in anſwer to his own earneſt prayer to God. (James v. 17.) The diſhonour done to God by the public idolatry and wickedneſs grieved his pious ſoul; and the Spirit of the Lord raiſed this cry in his mind for judgment upon the land, that both king and people might learn righteouſneſs, and eſcape the eternal wrath to come. The prophet had doubtleſs received the anſwer of his prayer before he delivered his meſſage, which he therefore delivers with as much authority, as if God had intruſted him with the very keys of heaven. The indignation which this would produce in the mind of Ahab may eaſily be imagined, when it is remembered, that he was a man who had long acted as having no ſuperior either in earth or heaven.

V. 3. Get thee hence—Thy meſſage being delivered; and leave Ahab, and his family, and ſubjects, to learn from experience, that there is ONE greater than they, who can, by the leaſt motion of his will, change the whole courſe of nature, and puniſh the impiety and wickedneſs of the preſumptuous ſons of men, by ways which they can no more reſiſt nor eſcape, than they can change the courſe of nature.

V. 4. I have commanded—I have appointed; or, I shall command The ravens to feed thee—To shew my care and power in providing for thee, by those creatures which are noted for their greediness; that by this strange experiment thou mayest be taught to trust God in those many and great difficulties to which thou wilt be exposed. And that, by this instance, all that fear and love me may know, that when they hazard their lives, their characters, their interests, or whatever is dear to them, in faithful obedience to my will, that all things in heaven and in earth are under my command, and that it is but a small thing with me to preserve from all danger, to support in all extremities, and to bless beyond whatever human reason can conceive.

V. 5, 6. The prophet went and did according to God's word, and then he experienced the faithfulness of his promise. What shall deprive that man of peace, who, by the Holy Spirit, can call Jesus Lord, and say, This God is my God for ever and ever?

V. 7. The brook dried up—God so ordering it, for the punishment of those Israelites who lived near it, and who had hitherto been refreshed by it; and for the trial and exercise of Elijah's faith, and to teach him to depend upon God alone, not on any creature for his support: and thus it will one day be with all; every stream of human and earthly support and comfort will dry up, and yield no more relief to the fears and sorrows of the soul, than the clay at the bottom of the brook could to the prophet's thirst. But sooner shall all nature decay, than one of God's promises fail them that put their trust in him, agreeable to his holy will.

V. 9. Get thee to Zarephath—A city between Tyrus and Sidon, called Sarepta. (Luke iv. 26.) To Zidon—Which was inhabited by Gentiles. And God's providing for his prophet, first, by an unclean bird, and then by a Gentile, whom the Jews esteemed unclean, was a presage of the calling of the Gentiles, and a lesson to teach all that believed in the living God, that none were rejected by him, but such as would not have him reign over them; but, against all his threatenings and promises, would go on to fill up the measure of their iniquities.

V. 10. That all-wise Being, who knew where to send him to find relief, knew also when to send him to meet with the person who was to be the means of giving it to him. But though the care of God's providence governing all outward things was over the prophet, yet he had still occasion for his Spirit to suggest to him which was the person that was to sustain him. And the more men are favoured by the care of God over them in their lives, the more are they called upon to live in the Spirit, that they may be kept in the ways of his goodness, and be enabled to see and understand all his gracious dealings.

V. 11. Bring me, I pray thee, a morsel of bread—He at whose prayer the fruitful clouds ceased to water the earth, is himself so dependant a creature as to be reduced to the necessity of begging a little bread of a poor person; and this we see him doing without hearing from him one complaint that his lot was hard, or that he was labouring under difficulties which implied any want of goodness in God. They that know themselves, as this humble man did, know that bread and water is more than they deserve; and they who are now living by faith, as Elijah then was, and, through the Mediator, have God for their portion, they know no wants, they have no complaints, and though not possessed of a morsel of bread, they abound—Abound in what? the worldly mind may ask. They abound in hope of soon being in that endless glory which by faith they see, and with that compassionate God and Saviour whom now they love with all the powers of their minds.

V. 12. She said—By which she discovers, that though she was a Gentile, yet she owned the God of Israel as the true God. Two sticks—A few sticks, that number being often used indefinitely for any small number. That we may eat it, and die—For having no more provision, we must needs perish with hunger. For though the famine was only in the land of Israel, yet the effects of it were in Tyre and Sidon, which were fed by the corn of that land. (See Acts xii. 20.) Or the same famine might be in those parts also, the chief cause of the famine; the worship of Baal being common to both places.

V. 13. Elijah said—As God, by his spirit in his servants words, saith to all—Fear not. For no want his fulness knows whose servant I am. He can supply all they need; and he only requires to be trusted, and he will support or send relief. Make me a little cake first——For in this God calls upon thee to put thy trust in him, and I ask thee by this trial—Canst thou believe? If thou canst, thou shalt see the power and goodness of God to thee.

V. 14. Thus saith the Lord—Jehovah, the Almighty God—the Redeemer of Israel—the Saviour of all that look to him through the Son of his love. He saith, The meal shall not waste, neither the oil fail—However little the righteous may have, and however helpless, destitute, and distressed they may be, a never-ending supply shall be given, both to the mortal and immortal wants and desires of all that look unto him.

V. 15. She

CHAP.

V. 15. She went, and did according to the saying of Elijah—Giving glory to the God of Israel, by believing his prophet. She, and he, and her house did eat many days—A long time, above two years: a full year before the following event about her son happened, and the rest of the time of the famine after it.

V. 16. The meal wasted not—God still creating new, as fast as the old was spent. He that causeth the earth to yield its yearly increase, and who feeds the springs that flow from the everlasting hills, caused the meal not to be made less by using, but, as by the daily manna, to send a constant supply fit for immediate use.

V. 17. There was no breath left in him—No life; he died.

V. 18. What have I to do with thee—Wherein have I injured thee? Or, Why didst thou come to sojourn in my house, if this be the fruit of it? They are words of a troubled mind, savouring of some rashness and impatience. Art thou come unto me—Didst thou come for this end, that thou mightest severely observe my sins, and by thy prayers bring down God's just judgment upon me, for them, as thou hast for the like cause brought down this famine upon the nation. This is the bitterness of affliction, the thoughts of our bringing it upon ourselves by our folly, impiety, or vice. But in this case the sorrowful mind is not to remain looking back upon the real or supposed cause of its sufferings, whether from its own conduct, or that of others; but to turn from themselves and their sins and sufferings, and look unto him who is ever waiting to be gracious, and to make all things work together for the good of them that hope in his mercy.

V. 19. Give me thy son—Into mine arms. And he took him into a loft—A private place, where he might more freely and fully pour out his soul to God.

V. 20. A prayer full of powerful arguments. Thou art the Lord that canst revive the child: And my God; and therefore wiltst not, do not deny me. She is a widow, add not affliction to the afflicted; deprive her not of the great support and staff of her age. She hath given me kind entertainment: Let her not fare the worse for her kindness to a prophet, whereby wicked men will take occasion to reproach both her and religion.

V. 21. He stretched himself three times, and cried unto the Lord—First, he stretched himself, then he prayed, and that for three times successively. I pray thee let this child's soul come into him again—By which it is evident, That the soul was gone out of his body, and therefore doth subsist without it after death. This was a great request; but Elias was encouraged to make it; partly, by his zeal for God's honour, which he thought was concerned in it, and would be eclipsed by it: Partly, by the experience which he had of his prevailing power with God in prayer: And partly, by a divine impulse moving him to desire it.

V. 24. By this I know—Now I am assured of that concerning which I began upon this sad occasion to doubt. The word of the Lord in thy mouth, is truth—That the God whom thou professest is the true God; and the doctrine and religion which thou teachest is the only true religion. In the dwelling of this poor widow there was nothing wanted which was necessary to life and godliness; and with the supply of all their natural wants, they were favoured with constant manifestations of the power and goodness of God; and the trial which he was pleased to send them, was made the means of preparing them for an increase of happiness in the grateful lasting joy which both the parent and the prophet would have, when God was pleased to restore her son to life. And along with these mercies, all that dwelt under this roof were favoured with the light of heavenly wisdom, and the affectionate directions of the man of God as to the things which made for their everlasting peace; and these again were sealed and attested with miracles, which none but God could perform; and the whole spake the same language of love and good-will to them all. And though the mother of this family was poor, or rather humble enough to go herself to gather the sticks for her fire, and the prophet had but a loft (ver. 19.) to abide in, yet one cannot help considering this house as the very gate of heaven, and all that dwelt in it as partaking of much of the joys of the blessed life to come. And as we have in this house a lively representation of the nature of God's gracious dealings with those that believe in him; so may we see, by the divine displeasure against Ahab, Jezebel, and all that were like-minded with them, what are the increasing miseries of such as regard not God. In this broad or narrow way all the inhabitants of the earth are living: And though we may dwell in a palace with Ahab, if with him we are not living to God, we are in the way which is at once present misery, and leads to that which is eternal. And the use to be made of all these opposite examples is to apply them to ourselves, and by that light which God, for the sake of his Son, giveth to every man, judge our own selves, to the

CHAP. XVIII.

V. 1. Go shew thyself unto Ahab—To acquaint him with the cause of the judgment which had been inflicted, and to advise him to remove it, and upon that condition to promise him rain. And I will send rain upon the earth—Thus God takes care to maintain the honour and authority of his prophet, and in judgment remembers mercy to Israel for the sake of the promised Seed.

V. 2. Elijah went to Ahab—Wherein he shews a strong faith, and resolute obedience, and invincible courage, that he durst, at God's command, run into the mouth of this raging lion; which was a degree of martyrdom.

V. 3. Obadiah feared the Lord greatly—Had a constant serious fear of omitting to do, or of doing any thing to offend God; carefully considering what the Lord his God required of him in the station in which his providence had placed him. And Ahab, wicked as he was, seeing that this his servant had a regard to a good conscience in all he did, and that he acted as one who believed himself accountable to a Being infinitely just, he placed the highest confidence in him. So by this it appears that Ahab in his judgment approved of godly principles; but his pride, his interest, and his pleasures, were allowed the superior influence on his will, and the good he knew and approved of, that he would not allow himself to comply with, because in doing so he acknowledged a power above him, and this his spirit would not submit to. And of this mind is every soul of man in whom satan reigns, and which is to be known by sinful desires and tempers, and by the commission of sin. He that committeth sin is of the devil; (1 John iii. 8.) whose spirit may be cast out of the soul by the power of God, but will never willingly submit itself to him. Satan's spirit will reign where God is resisted.

V. 4. Obadiah took an hundred prophets and fed them—With the hazard of his own life, and against the king's command; as wisely considering, that no command of an earthly prince could overrule the command of the supreme Lord, the King of kings, or discharge him from those acts of piety to God, and charity to men, which God's law indispensably required.

V. 5. Go unto all brooks—About which grass was most probably to be found in that great drought.

V. 6. Ahab went one way by himself—Not daring to trust any other, Obadiah excepted, lest, being bribed by such as had grass for their own use, they should not give him a true account.

V. 7. Obadiah fell on his face—By this profound reverence, shewing his great respect and love to him.

V. 8. Go tell thy lord—Ahab: whom, though a very wicked man, he owns for Obadiah's lord and king; thereby instructing him, that he did well in owning him as such; and that the wickedness of kings doth not exempt their subjects from obedience to their lawful commands.

V. 9. What have I sinned—Wherein have I so offended God, and thee, that thou shouldest inflict this punishment upon me, and expose me to certain ruin by this means?

V. 10. There is no kingdom—Near to his own, where he could in reason think that Elijah had hid himself. He took an oath that they found thee not—Not that he could force other kingdoms to take an oath, but that by his persuasions he prevailed with the chief persons in several kingdoms for his satisfaction to swear that they did not know of Elijah's being among them.

V. 12. The spirit of the Lord—The Holy Ghost, to whom the inspiration and conduct of the prophets is ascribed in the Scripture. (Isa. xlviii 16, and lxi. 1. Matth. iv. 1. Act. xvi. 6, 7. and viii. 39.) Ahab will slay me—Because I did not seize upon thee, and bring thee to him to receive punishment. I thy servant fear the Lord from my youth—He speaks these words that he might move the prophet not to put him upon that hazardous action. Thus unwilling are they that even fear the Lord to obey his word, though they have it from a known prophet of God, when, by their obedience, they think themselves in danger of offending great men beyond forgiveness.

V. 15. The

V. 15. The Lord of hoſts—The Lord of all creatures. He mentions this title as his ſhield, under the protection whereof he did, and durſt venture to come into Ahab's preſence; knowing that, at the Almighty's pleaſure, the lips that would pronounce his ſentence might be for ever cloſed; and the hands that would lay hold of him wither, and, in a moment, become motionleſs.

V. 17. Art thou he that troubleth Iſrael—Have I at laſt met with thee, O thou great diſturber of my kingdom, the author of this famine, and of all our diſquiets and calamities?

V. 18. I have not troubled Iſrael, but thou and thy father's houſe—Theſe calamities are to be imputed to thine and thy father's wickedneſs, which God puniſheth by this means. He anſwered him thus boldly, becauſe he ſpoke and acted in God's name, and for his honour and ſervice.

V. 19. Now ſend—Meſſengers, that this controverſy between thee and me may be decided, the true cauſe of theſe heavy judgments diſcovered and removed, that ſo this plague may be removed. Gather to me all Iſrael—By their deputies, or heads, and repreſentatives, that they may be witneſſes. Unto mount Carmel—Not far from the center of his kingdom, to which all the tribes might conveniently reſort. And the prophets of Baal—Which were diſperſed in all the parts of the kingdom. And the prophets of the groves—Which attended upon thoſe idols which were worſhipped in the groves, which were near the royal city, and much valued and frequented by the king and the queen.

V. 20. So Ahab ſent—He complied with Elijah's propoſal, becauſe it was ſo reaſonable; he could not refuſe it with honour, nor without the diſcontent of all his people, this being propoſed in order to their deliverance from this terrible famine and becauſe the urgency of the preſent diſtreſs made him willing to try all means to remove it; and principally, becauſe God inclined his heart to it.

V. 21. How long halt ye—Why are ye ſo unſettled in your opinions and practices, and doubting whether it is better to worſhip God or Baal? If the Lord be God—Whom you pretended to worſhip in the calves. Follow him—Worſhip him, and him only, and that in ſuch place and manner as he hath commanded you, and not by any images. If Baal—If Baal can prove himſelf to be the true God, then follow him. The people anſwered him not a word—Being convinced of the reaſonableneſs of this, and taught by experience, that God had ſent this judgment, and that Baal could not remove it, which had ſtaggered them in their opinion, yet not daring to diſown Baal, for fear of the diſpleaſure of the king, then preſent.

V. 22. Then ſaid Elijah, I only remain—Am here publicly to own and plead the cauſe of God; he oppoſeth himſelf to Baal's 450 Prophets. As for the other prophets of the Lord, many of them were ſlain by Ahab or Jezebel, others baniſhed, or hid in caves.

V. 23. Give us two bullocks—He attempts the deciſion of this controverſy by a miracle, to which all that had common ſenſe muſt needs ſubmit.

V. 24. The God that anſwereth by fire—That ſhall conſume the ſacrifice by fire ſent from heaven; which the people knew the true God uſed to do.

V. 25. Chooſe you one bullock, and dreſs it firſt—If Elijah had firſt offered, and God had anſwered by fire, as he knew he would do, Baal's prieſts would have been diſcouraged, and upon ſome excuſe would have deſiſted from making the trial on their part; and he knew the diſappointment of the prieſts of Baal, of which he was well aſſured, would prepare the people's more diligent attention to his words and actions, and would leave the greater impreſſion upon their hearts. And this they accepted, becauſe they might think, that if Baal did anſwer them firſt, which they preſumed he would, the people would be ſo confirmed and heightened in their opinion of Baal, that they, by the king's aſſiſtance, might murder Elijah before he came to his experiment. By the king and all that were on the idolatrous ſide, being willing to appeal to ſuch a trial, it may be ſeen to what lengths mankind may be deluded by a falſe confidence in that which can no more ſave them, than that the idols of Iſrael could command fire from heaven.

V. 27. It came to paſs at noon—When they had long tried all means in vain. Elijah mocked them—Derided them and their gods, which had now proved themſelves to be contemptible things. And ſaid, Cry aloud: for either he is talking, purſuing, or he is in a journey—He is employed about ſome other buſineſs, and hath not leiſure to mind you: for, being a god of a ſmall and narrow underſtanding, he cannot mind two things at once, and you are unreaſonable to expect it from him. What muſt the king and all the chief men of his party have felt upon this occaſion? With what ſhame muſt they have looked upon each other, when, before their faces, their gods were treated with ſcorn, and themſelves, with all their dignity and power, unable to raiſe one thought of fear in the mind of a ſingle ſervant of the Moſt High, whoſe laws they deſpiſed. But what will they feel?—With what ſhame will they be covered, in the great day that neglected and forſook God for gain, honour, or pleaſure; and to whom Elijah's God ſhall ſay—Go to your idols, and let them ſave you from the wrath of the God and of the Lamb, whoſe glory and ſufferings you equally treated as nothing to you. Say, Reader—Is the food that you eat, your little property in the world, the pleaſures you promiſe yourſelf in it, or all of them together, or any of them by turns, greater gods in your eſteem—more the objects of your deſire and delight than the God of your ſalvation?—Say, Is God in Chriſt Jeſus all your ſalvation and all your deſire? In earth and in heaven do you deſire none beſides him? They whoſe God he is not to be found in that day, may in Ahab's ſhame read their own; and ſee their final doom repreſented in that ſudden deſtruction which the compaſſionate prophet of God executed upon the men that were the heads of the idolatrous worſhip in Iſrael. (v. 40.)

V. 28. They cried aloud—As if Elias had ſpoken the truth. And cut themſelves—Mingling their own blood with their ſacrifices; as knowing, by experince, that nothing was more acceptable to their Baal than human ſufferings. And though men do not, in very deed, make their blood run for their idols, yet what do not men inflict upon themſelves for the idols of praiſe, gain, ſenſual gratifications, ſports, games, and ungodly pleaſures?

V. 29. They propheſied—Praiſed, and prayed unto, and worſhipped their God. There was neither voice, nor anſwer, nor any that regarded—There was no attention paid by their god, who was ſo far from anſwering, that he did not mind any of their words and actions; and the people were now tired out with expectation, and therefore readily deſerted them, and approached to Elijah and his altar, at his call. What muſt now be the rage and vexation of ſatan and his tempting ſpirits, thus reſtrained by the power of God from anſwering by any thing ſupernatural, to deceive the people by his lying wonders?

V. 30. Elijah ſaid unto all the people, Come unto me—From theſe miniſters of idolatry and darkneſs, who, for their wilful neglect of the declared will of God, are given up to a ſtrong deluſion to believe a lie. And thus does the God and Saviour of men, with his infinite love and good-will, invite all to come unto him to taſte that happineſs in the riches of his mercy and grace, which is in vain ſought for from any other god—from any thing under heaven; there being no other power but that of his holy ſpirit, given for the ſake of his beloved Son, which can deliver the heart of man from the bondage of corruption, and reſtleſs miſery conſequent upon it. And to receive this, all are called to come near unto him who is rich to all that call upon him, ſhewing—giving them more than they can either aſk or think. (Matth. xi. 28, 29. Rom. x. 12.) The altar of the Lord was broken down—In doing which, ſome of the people had ſhewn their enmity to the true God.

V. 31. Elijah took twelve ſtones—This he did to renew the covenant between God and all the tribes, and to ſhew, that he prayed and acted in the name, and for the ſervice of the God of all the patriarchs, and of all the tribes of Iſrael, and for their good: and to teach the people, that though the tribes were divided as to their civil government, they ought all to be united in the worſhip of the true God and their Redeemer. Iſrael ſhall be thy name—Which Jacob was graciouſly anſwered by God when he prayed to him, and was honoured with the glorious title of Iſrael, which noted his prevalency with God and men. And I, calling upon the ſame God, doubt not of a like gracious anſwer; and if ever you mean to have your prayers granted, you muſt not ſeek to idols for it, but unto God; and if you would recover the honour which was once conferred upon Jacob, and continued to his poſterity, for the ſake of the promiſed Seed, you muſt return to that God from whom you are departed by wicked works.

V. 32. He built an altar in the name of the Lord—Elijah, with the aſſiſtance of the people, did this by the authority of God, and for his worſhip.

V. 33. Fill four barrels with water, and pour it on the burnt-ſacrifice, and on the wood—This he did, to make the miracle more unqueſtionable, 36 And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, Lord [k] God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day, that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word.

unquestionable, and so more successful. The glory of God being his only aim, his care was to make it appear how ready God was to hear, and with power he could answer all that call upon him as the God of Israel—the Saviour of men.

V. 36. At the time of the evening sacrifice—Which time he chose, that he might unite his prayers with the prayers of the godly Jews at Jerusalem, who at that time assembled together to pray. (Acts iii. 1.) Elijah said, Lord God, let it be known that I have done all these things—Prayed for this famine, gathered the people hither, and done what I have done, or am doing here. At thy word—Not in compliance with my own passions, but in obedience to thy command, as thy agent and minister. For that action of shutting up heaven, and that of killing the priests of Baal, must needs expose him to great envy and reproach; which made this public vindication necessary, as it was also effectual, being witnessed from heaven.

V. 37. O Lord, hear me, that this people may know thou hast turned their heart—That they may feel so powerful and sudden a change in their hearts, that they may know it is thy work, and the effect of thy grace to them, and in them. That they may know thee to be the true God, by the effects of thy divine power, in converting their hearts, in answer to my prayers.

V. 38. Then the fire of the Lord fell—As he hath promised his Spirit shall fall on all them that see and feel the sinfulness of sin, and look to him for the Holy Ghost the Comforter, to cleanse the thoughts of the heart; producing effects as much above all natural power, as this fire did which fell from God, in answer to the prophet's prayer. (John xiv. 17, &c. Acts ii. 17.)

V. 39. When all the people saw it, they fell on their faces—In way of acknowledgment and adoration of the true God. The Lord, he is the God—He alone. They double the words, to note their full assurance of the truth.

V. 40. The prophet here becomes the type of his Saviour, no less in shewing mercy than in executing justice. Before him king Ahab sinks to the level of the least of his subjects. God cloathed the word of his servant with power, and the people obeyed him as the minister of the Most High; and the numerous troop who had the confidence to appear as the avowed enemies to God, and who had given themselves up to serve for the wages of iniquity, are now to reap what they themselves had sown; that in the persons of these 450 wicked men, all Israel, and all the world, might see and know that the wages of sin is death. Elijah said, Let not one escape—And what finally impenitent soul shall escape in that day, when the crucified Saviour of men shall become the righteous judge of all the despisers of his power and of his goodness?

V. 41. Elijah said unto Ahab, Get thee up—From the river, where the king and he had been present. Eat and drink—Take comfort, and refresh thyself: for neither the king, nor any of the people, could have any leisure to eat, being wholly intent upon the decision of the great controversy. There is a sound of abundance of rain—The rain is speedily coming. God's wrath is now appeased, and he hath shewn himself to be the Lord, merciful and gracious, pardoning iniquity, transgression, and sin. He hath this day given repentance unto thousands, and enabled them to say, The Lord he is the God. This was Elijah's bright gospel-day. The people saw, and for themselves knew, that God was able to save and to destroy; and, overcome with a sense of his power and goodness, they fell to the earth and adored him.

V. 42. Ahab went up to eat and to drink—To receive the mercies of God with thanksgiving. Elijah went up to the top of Carmel—Where he might secretly and ardently pour out his prayers unto God, for his grace to preserve him in an humble dependance upon his unmerited goodness. He cast himself down, and put his face between his knees—He kneeled upon his knees, and then cast down his face to the ground between his knees, in token of profound reverence and humility; and that turning away his eyes from all outward objects, he might pray to God without distraction; and every one that would draw near to God in earnest prayer, will find it necessary to enter into the greatest retirement, and in that retirement to approach their God and gracious Redeemer with the profoundest humiliation both of heart and posture.

V. 43. Go up now—Whilst I continue praying to God to fulfil what I have foretold, and he hath promised; but for which he is still to be entreated. Look toward the sea—Elijah desired to have timely notice of the very first appearance of rain, that Ahab and the people might know that it was obtained from God, and thereby be confirmed in the true religion. Go again seven times—Let us not be dejected for some disappointments, but continue to wait upon God, who will answer me, and that speedily.

V. 44. There ariseth a little cloud out of the sea—From which, drawn by the sun's attracting heat, sweet water ascends through the air, is formed into clouds, and driven by the winds; till the fine moisture is more and more condensed into drops, and becoming too heavy for the air, descend in showers, or, in the absence of the sun, falls down in nightly dew, to water the face of the whole earth, and so again to return into the great storehouse of the sea, which, against God's pleasure, can no more send out a single drop, than against his will it can break the bounds of which he hath said, Hitherto thy proud waves shall come, and no farther.

V. 46. The hand of the Lord was on Elijah—God gave him more than natural and ordinary strength, whereby he was enabled to out-run Ahab's chariot, and that for many miles together. He girded up his loins—That his garments might not hinder him. And ran before Ahab—To shew how ready he was to honour and serve the king, if he did not exalt himself above or against God; and that, by this humble and self-denying carriage, it might appear, that what he had done was not from envy, or ambition, or human passion, but only from a just zeal for God's glory; and that by his presence with the king, and his courtiers who attended upon him, he might animate and oblige them to proceed in the well-begun reformation of religion; and also to demonstrate, that he was neither ashamed of, nor afraid for, what he had done, though he knew how Jezebel would resent it, but durst venture himself in the midst of his enemies, as being confident of the Divine power and protection.

C H A P. XIX.

V. 1. Ahab told Jezebel—For his vindication, and her satisfaction. And withal, how he had slain all the prophets—Of Baal.

V. 2. Jezebel sent unto Elijah—She gives him notice of it before-hand; out of the height of her spirit, as scorning to kill him secretly, and resolving to make him a public sacrifice; and out of her impatience, till she had breathed out her rage, which she could do speedily, when it required some time and preparation to seize him, who was now so much esteemed and favoured by all the people; and because she supposed, that he who had the confidence to come thither (where, it seems, she was at this time) would still have the same confidence to stay there, and be obliged in honour to maintain his ground; and principally, from God's all-disposing providence, that so he might have an opportunity of escaping. Let the gods do to me, by to morrow about this time—So far was she from being changed by the miracle, that she persists in her former idolatry, and adds to it a mad and monstrous confidence, that in spite of God she would destroy his prophet.

V. 3. He went for his life—To save his life: Whereby it may be intimated, that he did not flee from Jezreel by the hand or direction of the Lord, by which he came thither, but because of his own fear and apprehension of danger: For this may seem to be an act of human frailty: For God had brought him hither, and his presence might seem very necessary here to encourage and engage the king and people to go on to destroy the priests of the groves, and to purge out idolatry. Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, (Jam. v. 17) which probably is said with respect to his fear and discontent, manifested here. He desired solitude, that he might more freely converse with God in this season of danger.

V. 4. The wilderness—The vast wilderness of Arabia. He durst not stay in Judea, though good Jehoshaphat reigned there, because he was allied to Ahab. For himself—Heb. for his life, or his soul, that it might be taken away from his body, that he might be freed from his great fears and troubles. It is enough—I have lived long enough for thy service, and am not like to do thee more service; neither my words nor works are like to do any good upon these unstable and incorrigible people. I am not better than my fathers—That I should continue in life, when other prophets, who have gone before me, have lost their lives by Jezebel, or other persecutors.

V. 7. The journey is too great for thee—Above thy strength, now thou art faint, and weary, and fasting.

V. 8. He went in the strength of that meat—God giving that food far greater virtue than ordinary. The strength given by natural food at all times depends solely on the blessing of the God of nature: If he withdraws his blessing, food not only ceases to afford nourishment, but that which was before most acceptable becomes most offensive: As, on the other hand, when he pleases to give a superior blessing to the natural effects of food, he can increase the benefits thereof to any extent. The insufficiency of food, as the means of health and strength, comes within the daily experience of thousands that live in fulness of bread; whilst the very poor, and those that have but little, may see the blessing of God, in making their food go farther, and affording them strength to labour and travel on the same quantity of food

11 And he said, Go forth, and stand upon the mount before the Lord. And behold, the Lord passed by, and [g] a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the Lord; but the Lord was not in the wind: and after the wind an earthquake; but the Lord was not in the earthquake:

13 And it was so, when Elijah heard it, that for many days, which other men would consume in one, without finding it enough for the ordinary support of their natural strength. To use God's daily gifts of necessary food with a careful uniform temperance, and with a constant eye to his taking from it that curse which fell upon all the productions of the earth, on account of man's rebellion against him, and never to eat or drink without a design to his glory, is doubtless the way to have our natural refreshment made the means of health, strength, and cheerfulness; and also of turning the food, which is so blessed to us, into a continual support to our faith in that spiritual bread and water which the Living Head of every believing soul is continually giving to all the members of his spiritual body. And to put us upon our guard against our natural infidelity, the great prophet before us is made an example to mankind, that men may be receiving natural support from God, to a degree which nothing less than the immediate exercise of his own Almighty power can give, and at the very time be living in distrust of that very power and goodness by which they are supported. And as faith in God is the very means by which we are brought to see the love and faithfulness of God to us, and so to fulfil the great command of loving him; what name can be given to that compassion and goodness of God which affords us all we want by the immediate exercise of his own Almighty power, and instead of its producing an humble dependance upon him for all that is to come, murmurs, fears, and distrust are the language of the heart in his sight, and many times the language of the lips in the hearing of our fellow-creatures. Elijah was forty days and nights in going to Horeb, which, it is thought, could not have been at most above four moderate days journey. By this it would appear, that he had wandered to and fro without making any real progress in his journey. And is it not thus with those that are either living without faith, or whose faith is weak? they travel far, but make little progress in attaining the prize of their high calling—Christ in them the hope of eternal glory. And as he hath informed us that unbelief is the great hinderance to his works of mercy and grace, it must be the greatest injury which men can do to men who are truly living in the fear of God, to shew, that they do in fact distrust God's willingness or power to do whatever is best for them.

V. 9. What doest thou here—A tacit reproof. This is not thy proper place, nor the station in which I set thee, which was in Israel, to turn that backsliding people, to which end I gave thee my help, and would have proceeded to assist thee further, if thou hadst continued there. Nor did I give thee those excellent gifts to lie idle in this wilderness, but to employ them for the general good of the people of Israel whom now thou hast deserted, and art come hither, not by my command, but through thy own fear and distrust of that very power and willingness to save, support, and bless all that will live by faith in me; and of which thou thyself hast been a witness, for many years under various trials, besides all that thou hast heard and read of my faithfulness, to all that have put their trust in me in ages past.

V. 10. I have been very jealous—I have not been wanting to my vocation, but have executed my office with the hazard of my life. But what is it only to say I have been? Crowns of life are promised to all that are faithful unto death; and whatever, by the grace of God, men may have been, or enabled to perform, so long as they remain in a life of trial, there is no moment, no occasion in which they can turn their backs upon their duty and betray their trust, without forsaking their own mercies by doing so. I, even I only, am left—To plead thy cause; for the rest of thy prophets who are not slain, hide themselves, and dare not appear to do thee any service. Thus does weak faith in God produce the worst thoughts of the obedience and faithfulness of other men. They seek my life, to take it away—I despair of doing them any good: For instead of receiving my testimony, they hunt for my life. When the light and power of faith decays in the heart, then hopeless language is heard from the lips, and the man becomes fearful of himself, looking only for evil being done to him; thinking that even God himself, with all his wisdom, power, and love to men, for the sake of the God-man, either cannot, or will not, do any more good to those for whom he died. And God, to shew what men are without instant faith in him to whom alone all power belongeth, the great prophet is here presented to our view creeping into a cave, from fear that the idolatrous queen, and her party, had power to destroy him whether God would or not.

V. 11. Go forth—As if God had said, Come out of this ignoble retreat so dishonourable to my faithfulness, and so discouraging to the thousands that believe in me. And stand upon the mount—And hear, and see, and feel for thyself again what thy God can do. And the Lord passed by, attended with a great strong wind, which rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks—The spirit of God being compared to the wind, (John iii. 8.) by this discovery of God's power to rend mountains, and break rocks in pieces, we may understand the power of his grace in rending the mountains of unbelief in the mind of man, and in breaking, softening the hardest human hearts. As by the earthquake we may understand his power to make the proudest self-confident minds of men to tremble from one end of the earth to the other.

V. 12. A fire—By which we may understand the nature of his spirit in consuming—burning up all those base and wicked passions, tempers, and desires which constitute the inbred corruption of the human heart. A still small voice—By this we may understand, that God, by his holy spirit, gives peace and consolation, after his powerful spirit hath subdued the pride, and broken the hardness of the human heart, and burnt up whatever resisted the free course of his grace: Then the mind having given to it that preparation which makes it of the number of those that are called his sheep, they hear his blessed voice giving them the conscious assurance, that the Almighty God is their Father, and his equal Son their Friend, and that he will suffer nothing to harm them who are reconciled to him, live in his spirit, and walk in the ways of his holy will.

of God's presence, being sensible that he was neither worthy nor able to endure the sight of God with open face. There came a voice unto him—The second time, that he might the more abundantly be convinced of the sin of unbelief, in flying out of fear of human power, from the duties of the time, place, and station to which God had called him.

V. 14. I, even I only, am left—How sincerely was the prophet persuaded of the truth of this mistaken judgment? And by this all men may see, that when the wisest and holiest men will forget what God requires, and, contrary to his command, presume to judge other men from common report and meer appearance, that in so doing they are laying up for themselves painful repentance or shame.

V. 15. Go, return on thy way—By which thou camest. And the sooner that all return to a lively faith in God's mercy, and never-failing goodness for the sake of Jesus, who have fallen from it, the sooner will their own happiness and usefulness return together.

V. 16. Jehu the son of Nimshi—His grand-son, for he was the son of Jehoshaphat. Elisha shalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room—And thus was the prophet a type of his Lord and Saviour, by whom kings are appointed to reign, and ministers to declare his will, and preach the truths of his everlasting gospel of life and salvation to men.

V. 17. The substance of the thing threatened, is, That one or other of these should execute God's judgments: The prophets are said to pull down and to destroy what they only declare and foretel.

V. 18. I have left—I have reserved to myself; I have, by my grace, kept from the common contagion. And by his grace alone it is, that all are preserved from sin, though all men are chargeable with the guilt of every evil they commit; and this because all that do evil, sin against that light that lighteneth every man that cometh into the world, and against that grace which is, for the sake of man's Mediator, freely offered unto all men; and which men act against and resist before they commit sin. God's love and faithfulness through the son of his love being so great, and the covenant of his grace so extensive, that whoever finally perishes, none will be able to say that they committed sin, and continued in sin, for want of the offers of his grace to deliver them from evil, or enable them to do good: so often will grace have been resisted, that every mouth will be stopt from uttering one complaint against the goodness of God for not offering grace to all. Seven thousand——Indefinitely for many thousands, the number of seven being often used for a great number. The knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him—All those who have not worshipped Baal, nor professed reverence or subjection to him: Which idolaters did to their idols, by bowing the knee, (Rom. xi. 4.) and by kissing them, or by kissing their hand with their mouth, before them, and in respect to them. These expressions teach us that it is not sufficient to deny inward veneration of mind and heart to idols, unless we do also forbear all outward significations of worship or reverence to them; and that he will own none for his people that do otherwise.

V. 19. He with the twelfth—Eleven were managed by his servants, and the last by himself; according to the simplicity and humility of those antient times, in which men of estate submitted themselves to these laborious and manly employments. Elijah cast his mantle upon him—By that ceremony conferring upon him the office of a prophet, which God was pleased to accompany with the gifts and graces of his spirit, wherewith he endowed and qualified him for it. The mantle was the usual habit of the prophets. By which we may understand that entire covering which salvation is to the soul, and which all must be cloathed with, that would live to God on earth, or dwell with him in heaven. (Matth. xxii. 12.)

V. 20. He left the oxen, and ran after Elijah—Being powerfully moved by God's spirit to follow Elijah, and wholly to give up himself to his function. Let me—Bid them farewel before I enter upon that great work of God, to which I now find I must be entirely devoted. Go back again—And take thy leave of them, and then return to me again. What have I done to thee—Whence comes this change? It is not from me, who did only throw my mantle over thee; but from an higher power, even from God's spirit, which hath changed thy heart, and consecrated thee to thy prophetical office, which therefore it concerns thee vigorously to execute.

V. 21. He

Hereby he ſhewed how willingly he forſook all his friends, that he might ſerve God in that high and honourable employment; at the hazard of being put to death, as many of the ſame character had lately been. They that knew him, but knew not that powerful influence of divine love which now filled his ſoul, could not but think this ſudden reſolution to leave his father's houſe and all he had behind him, to follow Elijah, as little leſs than madneſs. He aroſe, and went after Elijah, and miniſtered unto him.—Waited upon him, who himſelf had often been without any certain dwelling-place; reduced to the neceſſity of aſking a poor perſon for a bit of bread, to dwell in a loft, a cave, or ſleep under a tree.

CHAP. XX.

V. 1. The king of Syria gathered all his hoſt together—To war againſt Iſrael: wherein his deſign was to extend the conqueſts which his father had made, but God's deſign was to puniſh Iſrael for their apoſtacy and idolatry. Thirty and two kings—Petty kings, ſuch as were in Canaan in Joſhua's time; governors of cities or ſmall territories, ſubject or tributary to Ben-hadad, or hired by him.

V. 3. Thy ſilver and thy gold is mine—I challenge them as my own, and accordingly expect to have them forthwith delivered into my poſſeſſion, if thou expecteſt peace with me. Ahab's gods were gold, and infinite goodneſs was now about to take another courſe to convince him, his idolatrous ſubjects, and, through them, all mankind, of the folly and impiety of ſetting their hearts upon any thing, as the foundation of their happineſs, which could be taken from them, either by guile or force, or from which death muſt ſeparate them.

V. 4. The king of Iſrael ſaid, I am thine, and all that I have—Knowing by his late experience that there was no ſtrength in his idols to deliver him, and having ſuffered the queen to drive away the prophet of God, he had no confidence or hope in having the divine aſſiſtance; ſo that his heart ſinks into ſubmiſſion to the king of Syria. And thus, to the world and to ſatan, will their hearts ſubmit, however miſerable the terms of their ſubmiſſion are, who wilfully depart from God.

V. 5. Thou ſhalt deliver me thy ſilver and thy gold, and thy wives and thy children—I demand the propriety and actual poſſeſſion of them. And ſatan, like Ben-hadad, will not reſt ſhort of the actual poſſeſſion of their All, that do not belong to God.

V. 6. They ſhall take it away—I will ſend my ſervants into the city, and they ſhall have free liberty and power to ſearch out and take away all which they deſire, and then I will grant thee a peace.

V. 7. The king of Iſrael called all the elders of the land—Whoſe counſel he now deſires in his diſtreſs. I denied him not—I was willing to acknowledge him my ſuperior, and to pay him tribute, as holding all I have by his favour; but he will not be ſatisfied with leſs than actual poſſeſſion of whatever his ſervants may chooſe to take from us.

V. 9. This thing I may not do—If I would do it, I cannot, becauſe my people will not ſuffer it.

V. 10. The gods do ſo unto me—The ſelf-confident boaſt of a mind ignorant of his own and the weakneſs of all human ſtrength; and a ſtranger to that power which is above him.

V. 11. Tell him—Do not triumph before the fight, for the events of war are uncertain.

V. 12. Set yourſelves in array—Put yourſelves in order, to make the aſſault.

15 Then he numbered the young men of the princes of the provinces, and they were two hundred and thirty two: and after them he numbered all the people, even all the children of Israel, being seven thousand.

16 And they went out at noon: but Ben-hadad was drinking himself drunk in the pavilions, he and the kings, the thirty and two kings that helped him.

17 And the young men of the princes of the provinces, went out first, and Ben-hadad sent out, and they told him, saying, There are men come out of Samaria.

18 And he said, Whether they be come out for peace, take them alive; or whether they be come out for war, take them alive.

19 So these young men of the princes of the provinces, came out of the city, and the army which followed them.

20 And they slew every one his man: and the Syrians fled, and Israel pursued them: and Ben-hadad the king of Syria escaped on an horse, with the horsemen.

23 And the servants of the king of Syria said unto him, Their gods are gods of the hills, therefore they were stronger than we: but let us fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they.

27 And the children of Israel were numbered,

V. 13. Thus saith the Lord—God, though forsaken and neglected by Ahab, prevents him with his gracious promise of help; that Ahab, and the idolatrous Israelites, might hereby be won to God, or left without all excuse: and that Ben-hadad's pride and contempt of God, and of his people, might be repressed and punished; and that the remnant of his prophets and people, who were involved in the same calamity with the rest of the Israelites, might be preserved and delivered. Thou shalt know that I am the Lord—And this is the declared end of God's dealings with men, by his providence and by his grace, by his word and by his works—That all men may know him, from the least to the greatest, and in doing so be blessed by fearing him, trusting him, loving and obeying him.

V. 14. By the young men of the princes of the provinces—Not by old and experienced soldiers, but by those young men; either the sons of the princes, and great men of the land, who were generally fled thither for safety, or their pages or servants that used to attend upon them, and to all appearance unfit to resist the Syrian army for a moment. And thus does God shew mankind that he is the governor of the earth, by giving power to the weak, to overcome the mighty. Thou—That it may be known to thee that the victory is wholly due to God, and not to the valour or worthiness of the instruments.

V. 15. All the children of Israel—All that were fit to go out to war. Seven thousand—Which number may possibly be noted with respect to those 7000, commended chap. xix. 18. God being willing to spare nations and cities for the sake of the righteous that dwell therein, however they may be despised by those who are spared for their sakes.

V. 16. They went out at noon—When they were eating and drinking, and secure from all fear and expectation of an assault.

V. 18. Take them alive—He bids them not fight, for he thought they needed not; and that the Israelites could not stand before them.

V. 20. They slew every one his man—Him who came to take him, as Ben-hadad had commanded. The Syrians fled—Being amazed at the unexpected and undaunted courage of the Israelites, and being struck with a divine terror.

V. 21. The king of Israel went out—(i. e.) Proceeded further, and fought against them.

V. 22. See what thou doest—Consider what is necessary for thee to do by way of prevention. At the return of the year—Next year about this time. Present deliverance and future directions were thus bestowed at once. And this is done to those to whom God gives victory over spiritual enemies: they are directed to be upon their guard against the return of danger.

V. 23. They suppose that their gods were no better than the Syrian gods, which the idolatry of the Israelites had given them too great cause to imagine. They do not impute their ill success to their negligence, drunkenness, bad conduct, or cowardice, of which they were really guilty; nor to the valour of the Israelites; but to a divine power, which indeed was visible in it.

V. 24. Put captains—Experienced soldiers of thy own subjects, who will faithfully obey the commands of the general.

V. 26. To Aphek—Nigh to which was the great plain of Galilee.

V. 27. Like two little flocks of kids—Few, and weak in themselves.

29 And they pitched one over against the other seven days; and so it was, that in the seventh day the battle was joined: and the children of Israel slew of the Syrians an hundred thousand footmen in one day.

30 But the rest fled to Aphek, into the city; and there a wall fell upon twenty and seven thousand of the men that were left: and Ben-hadad fled, and came into the city, ‡ § into an inner chamber.

32 So they girded sackcloth on their loins, and put ropes on their heads, and came to the king of Israel, and said, Thy servant Ben-hadad saith, I pray thee, let me live. And he said, Is he yet alive? he is my brother.

37 Then

V. 28. Because the Syrians have said—Declared their unbelief of God's governing all things in heaven and in earth. And ye shall know that I am the Lord—The universal Lord of all places, and persons, and things.

V. 30. The wall fell upon twenty and seven thousand—The Syrians denied the sovereign and infinite power of God, and thereby in some sort obliged him, for his own honour, to give a proof of it; and to shew, that he could as effectually destroy them in their strongest holds, as in the open fields, and make the very walls, to whose strength they trusted for their defence, to be the instruments of their ruin. Ben-hadad fled into an inner chamber—Where we may look upon him as one of many witnesses to the truth of God's word—That sooner or later shall all be cast down, that exalt themselves against God, and boast, in the spirit of this king, what they will do, without any regard to the will and power of God.

V. 31. Merciful kings—Because true religion, which they had professed, taught them humanity, and obliged them to shew mercy. Let us put sackcloth on our loins, and ropes upon our heads—As a testimony of our sorrow for undertaking this war; and that we have justly forfeited our lives for it, which we submit to their mercy.

V. 32. He is my brother—I do not only freely pardon him, but honour and love him as my brother.

V. 33. The men did diligently observe—Whether he spoke this from his heart, or in dissimulation, for it seemed too good news to be true. Thy brother Ben-hadad—Liveth; for that he inquired after,

V. 34. Then said Ahab, I will send thee away with this covenant—He takes no notice of his presumption against God, nor of the injuries which he intended to do to his people; but only minds his own grandeur, and the advancement of his power. Living for himself, and not to God, he does not wait a moment to consider, that he ought not to enter into covenant with one who was at enmity with God.

V. 35. A certain man of the sons of the prophets, said unto his neighbour—Or, brother, another son of the prophets. In the word of the Lord—In the name, and by the command of God, whereof doubtless he had informed him. Smite me—So as to wound me, ver. 37. He speaks what God commanded him, though it was to his own hurt; by which obedience to God, he secretly reproacheth Ahab's disobedience in a far easier matter. And this prophet, by God's appointment, desires, that, looking like a wounded soldier, he might have the more free access to the king, and discourse with him; which it was very hard for a prophet to obtain, that sort of men being hateful to Ahab, (Chap. xxii. 8.) and to his courtiers. And the man refused to smite him—Out of tenderness to his brother, though he knew it was required of him by the word of the Lord.

V. 36. A lion shall slay thee—Because thou hast vainly thought thyself wiser than God, or, that thou wast more compassionate in sparing me, than the Father of mercies is who gave thee this command by my mouth. And how many, by a mistaken tenderness, sin against God? A lion slew him—By which God proves the truth of those parts of his holy word, which declare, that in judgment he shews no respect of persons.

C H A P. XXI.

AND it came to pass after these things, that Naboth the Jezreelite had a vineyard, which was in Jezreel, hard by the palace of Ahab king of Samaria.

Before Christ 900. 899.

2 And Ahab spake unto Naboth, saying, Give me thy [a] vineyard, that I may have it for a garden of herbs, because it is near unto my house, and I will give thee for it a better vineyard than it: or if it * seem good to thee, I will give thee the worth of it in money.

[a] 1 Sam. 8. 14.

* Heb. be good in thine eyes.

3 And Naboth said to Ahab, the Lord forbid it me, [b] that I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee.

[b] Lev. 25. 23. Num. 36. 7. Ezek. 46. 18.

4 And Ahab came into his house, heavy and displeased, because of the word which Naboth the Jezreelite had spoken to him: for he had said, I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers: and he laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread.

5 ¶ But Jezebel his wife came to him, and said unto him, Why is thy spirit so sad, that thou eatest no bread?

6 And he said unto her, Because I spake unto Naboth the Jezreelite, and said unto him, Give me thy vineyard for money; or else if it please thee, I will give thee another vineyard for it: and he answered, I will not give thee my vineyard.

7 And Jezebel his wife said unto him, Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel? arise, and eat bread, and let thine heart be merry:

V. 38. And disguised himself—That he might gain access to the king.

V. 39. He said—This relation is not an untruth, but a parable; an usual way of instruction in antient times, and most fit for this occasion, wherein an obscure prophet was to speak to a great king; who could not bear a downright reproof, and who, by this artifice, is made to condemn himself, before he was aware of it, and so forced to receive the prophet's just sentence with more patience and moderation. A man—My commander or superior.

V. 40. So shall thy judgment be—Thou must perform the condition to which thou didst submit. Either suffer the one, or do the other.

V. 41. The king discerned he was one of the prophets—By the change of the manner of his address to him, which now was such as the prophets used, and which he does not begin with any complimentary or flattering address to the king's vanity: The course he took was but to lay his suspicions, that the king might give the judgment of an indifferent person in his own case.

V. 42. Thy life shall go for his life—God had delivered him into Ahab's hand for his blasphemy. But Ahab doth not so much as rebuke him, but treats him like a friend and a brother, and takes not the least care for God's honour, the end for which he was raised up—the end for which all in authority are required to govern, and the end for which all are required to live.

V. 43. The king went to his house, heavy and displeased—Heavy, from fear that the judgment declared against him by the prophet would take place, as he had so much reason, from his own experience, to expect all would be fulfilled, which was spoken by any of the prophets. And was displeased—That he who was a king returning from victory, so great in his own esteem and in that of the whole kingdom, could not be at liberty to do as he pleased, but in common with all other men, accountable for his conduct to God.

C H A P. XXI.

V. 3. The Lord forbid it—For God hath expressly forbid the alienation of lands from the tribes and families to which they were allotted; and if he did it he should offend God, and wrong his posterity, which he durst not do.

V. 4. Turned away his face—From the light, and company. And would eat no bread—Refused to eat meat in his usual time. His heart being set upon the things of this life, he could have no peace, when he was refused what he desired; and this misery will every soul have, that is not converted to God; in which state it is always looking for happiness from things without, and from which it must soon be for ever separated: It is only the happy privilege of such as are born of the spirit, and delight themselves in the Lord, to have their hearts desires granted to them. (Ps. xxxvii. 4.) Their life, their happiness being hid with Christ in God, whose kingdom of grace is within; and the increase of the knowledge of the love of God, being the only desire of the soul, they ask, and they receive, and their joy is full. (John xvi. 24.)

V. 5. Jezebel his wife came to him—To do the will of satan, by giving wicked counsel to him whose heart was set upon a worldly object, that he might obtain the possession of it by wicked means.

V. 7. Jezebel

Before Christ 1024. merry: I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite.

8 So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal, and sent the letters unto the elders, and to the nobles that were in his city dwelling with Naboth.

i See 2 Kings 9. 26.

14 Then they sent to Jezebel, saying, Naboth is stoned, and is dead.

15 ¶ And it came to pass when Jezebel heard that Naboth was stoned, and was dead, that Jezebel said to Ahab, Arise, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he refused to give thee for money: for Naboth is not alive, but dead.

16 And it came to pass when Ahab heard that Naboth was dead, that Ahab rose up to go down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take possession of it.

17 ¶ And the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

18 Arise, go down to meet Ahab king of Israel, [g] which is in Samaria: behold he is in the vineyard of Naboth, whither he is gone down to possess it.

V. 7. Jezebel said, Doest thou govern—Art thou king, and hast not the courage to use thy power?

V. 8. She wrote letters in Ahab's name—By his consent, which consent the soul must first give to satan's wicked suggestions, before it can be injured by him: Its peace may be disturbed by the tempting spirit's presence, as pain is given to a mind that fears the Lord, by the presence of such as shew, that they are set upon wicked purposes themselves, and are wanting those with whom they are, to become the companions and partners in their guilt; but who no more than satan, possessing any power to oblige any one to say or do that which is wrong, against their will, no actual injury can be done to the soul's safety, till the soul consents to satan's temptations, as Ahab did to Jezebel's advice: When he did so, she sealed the letters—the wicked purpose he consented to with his seal, by which the action was made his own, though she was the only contriver of it. And thus is every sinner's guilt made his own, though the first thought and design of it was suggested to him by the deceiver of men.

V. 9. She wrote, Proclaim a fast—To remove all suspicion of evil design in Ahab, and as if he were grown zealous for God's honour, and careful to inquire into all those sins which provoked God against them, and effectually to purge them out. Satan, to deceive men into sin, covers his designs with the appearance of whatever is just, or true, or good; that those that fear God may not be able to defeat his designs, by exposing them before they are executed.

V. 10. And set two men to bear witness against him—Against Naboth, when he is so exalted; charging him with reviling the Almighty, or some of his attributes, or speaking evil of the king, and against his lawful authority. And this was the course which satan tempted the wicked Jews to take against the Lord Jesus—They falsely accused him of speaking against Cæsar, and of blaspheming God; and which also was done for a purpose like unto this, that the Lord's vineyard—his inheritance might be taken and possessed by those that were led captive by satan at his will, and he left to reign over all as the god of this world.

V. 11. The elders and the nobles did as Jezebel had sent unto them—They cast off the fear of God, and prostituted themselves to obey Jezebel's command. As the chief priests and the elders did in procuring false witnesses against the Lord, and wilfully dooming him to the death of the cross; and this out of envy, and as much with their conscious knowledge of their own injustice and wickedness in so doing, as the elders and nobles of Jezreel had, when they obeyed the directions of Jezebel.

V. 14. They sent to Jezebel—They returned their wicked report to her from whom they received the wicked request. With such examples as this before us, of what men and women will do to their fellow-creatures, shall we not be without excuse, if we allow ourselves to think for a moment, against the authority of the Scriptures, that the human mind is not corrupt and wicked, till the grace of God takes place, and becomes the living principle within it?

V. 15. Jezebel said to Ahab, Arise, take possession—And may we not ask, What then?—What, Jezebel, is the amount of thy kindness? Thy husband has purchased a garden of herbs at the expence of murder; and if he had gained possession of the whole world, at the expence but of a single falsehood, the justice of God cutting him down with that guilt upon his head, where hath God said his portion would have been for ever?—All liars, with all murderers, shall have their part with those that die in unbelief, of what God hath made known to them, of the way of life and the way of death. (John v. 29. Rev. xxi. 8.)

V. 19. Hast thou killed, and also taken possession—Instead of fearing the judgment of God, and repenting with sorrow for the sin which thou hast committed by consenting to it, art thou now approving of that wickedness, and expecting to reap the benefit of it, the same as if there was no God to judge the earth?

20 And Ahab said to Elijah, [i] Hast thou found me, O mine enemy? And he answered, I have found thee: because [k] thou hast sold thyself to work evil in the sight of the Lord.

21 Behold, [l] I will bring evil upon thee, and will take away thy posterity, and will cut off from Ahab [m] him that pisseth against the wall, and [n] him that is shut up, and left in Israel,

22 And will make thine house like the house of [o] Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and like the house of [p] Baasha the son of Ahijah, for the provocation wherewith thou hast provoked me to anger, and made Israel to sin.

23 And [q] of Jezebel also spake the Lord, saying, The dogs shall eat Jezebel by the ‡ wall of Jezreel.

24 [r] Him that dieth of Ahab in the city, the dogs shall eat: and him that dieth in the field, shall the fowls of the air eat.

25 ¶ But [s] there was none like unto Ahab, which did sell himself to work wickedness in the sight of the Lord, [t] whom Jezebel his wife § stirred up.

26 And he did very abominably in following idols, according to all things, [u] as did the Amorites, whom the Lord cast out before the children of Israel.

27 And it came to pass when Ahab heard those words, that he rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and went softly.

28 And the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

29 Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days: but [x] in his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house.

V. 20. Ahab said to Elijah, Hast thou found me—Thou unwelcome messenger of truths I hate to hear, and therefore look upon thee as mine enemy. And is it not in this light, that the human mind looks upon the word of God and of all his faithful servants whilst it is wilfully living in sin? Elijah answered, I have found thee—As the messengers of the justice of God will find out all that will continue in sin as thou art doing.

V. 21. I will bring evil upon thee—Great and powerful as thou art, as thou hast sown, so shalt thou reap; that in thy punishment, it may appear to all men, that God hath, by his own almighty power, caused sufferings and misery, both in this life and that which is to come, to be the certain followers of sin: and from which there is no other way to escape, but by repentance, and looking for mercy through the only Mediator between God and man.

V. 23. The dogs shall eat Jezebel—Tear her flesh, and devour that body, which, against all the calls of grace to her soul, she made subserviant to sin. Well may it be said—Behold the severity of God. (Rom. xi. 22.)

V. 25. There was none like unto Ahab—None among all the kings of Israel which had been before him. Which did sell himself—To the service of satan; and in this he robbed God of that right and property which he hath in every man, both by creation and redemption. And it is added of Ahab, Whom Jezebel his wife stirred up—To shew that temptations to sin, nor the advice of the nearest person to us in the world, to do wickedly, is any excuse to the sinner.

V. 26. He would follow the example of those against whom God had first declared, and then executed his wrath; and on the other hand he would depart from that clear knowledge of the way of life and salvation, which was amongst the people of his own nation, for their benefit and that of all mankind. And thus is it with all that stand exposed to the judgment of God, and the wrath to come. The ways of life and death are set before them; but, like Ahab, they will follow the wicked, with whom they are surrounded, in the broad ways of destruction, by living to please themselves, and wilfully depart from the ways of peace and everlasting life, in which the true Israel of God are living by faith in him that made them, and died to redeem them.

V. 27. Ahab went softly—After the manner of mourners, or those who are under distress, and in deep consideration.

V. 29. Because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil—By this we are shewn how the Lord observes all the dwellers upon earth, and how infinitely ready his gracious mind is, to shew mercy to all that repent and turn unto him, with sorrow for their offences against him.

C H A P. XXII.

V. 3. The king said, Ramoth in Gilead is ours—Ahab's mind was still bent on having more of earth in his possession; the vineyard of Naboth, and the dominion of Israel were not enough, for a mind that was not seeking, nor possessed of that rest which remaineth for the people of God. (Heb. iv. 9.)

V. 4. I am as thou art—I will heartily and effectually join with thee; and my forces shall be at thy service, as much as thine own. And in this alliance, with one that had done, and still was doing dishonour to God, Jehoshaphat displeased the Lord.

V. 5. Inquire of the Lord to day—By some prophet; that we may know the mind of God, and what success we may expect. This was the practice of the godly. And there is equal occasion this day, as there was at that, for all that would be blessed of the Lord, to inquire—What is the will of the Lord, in every step they take. It is no less necessary to remember our Creator and Redeemer in the beginning of every action, than in the days of our youth, and the the beginning of life. In all the parts of which the whole of this life of trial conſiſts, thoſe only will endure the fire, by which every man's work ſhall be tried—that were begun, carried on, and ended in the name of the Lord—by faith in him whoſe blood all men ſtand in need of, to ſprinkle and make every deſign, and word, and work acceptable to the Lord.

V. 6. They ſaid, Go up—They do not ſay, Thus ſaith the Lord, but of themſelves they ſay, what the Lord would do. They that declare the promiſes of the Lord to men, for the ſake of their Mediator, have need of all the caution of ſpiritual minds, that they do not declare to the careleſs, the impenitent, and unbelieving, what God only promiſes to them that fear him, mourn for their ſins, and would believe in his power and willingneſs to ſave.

V. 7. Is there not here a prophet beſides—One who ſpeaks the language of Moſes and the prophets—Thus ſaith the Lord.

V. 8. There is one—In this place, for whom I can ſpeedily ſend: There were other prophets, as Elijah, Eliſha, and others: but theſe were not at hand. Micaiah—Not one of the 12 prophets, who lived about 150 years after this time, but another of that name. I hate him—My ſoul is ſet againſt him. For he doth not propheſy good concerning me, but evil—He is always a meſſenger of evil tidings: Micaiah was purely God's inſtrument in all his meſſages: And whatſoever evil he threatened, Ahab himſelf was the cauſe and procurer of it. Let not the king ſay ſo—Do not preſage evil: Let us neither hate his perſon, nor deſpiſe his meſſage; but firſt hear it, and then do as we ſee cauſe.

V. 11. Zedekiah—One of the temporizing falſe prophets, now imitates the language of the true, and not, as they had before expreſſed themſelves, to the diſſatisfaction of the king of Judah.

V. 13. Let thy word be good—Do thou approve of the deſign which the king himſelf is ſet upon. Little did this courtier know of the ſpirit of the man he was ſpeaking to: That ſpirit was no leſs than the mind which was in Jeſus, (Phil. ii. 5.) and which, ſo long as that was the living principle in Micaiah's mind, kings and common men were alike to him, when he was called to declare the will of the Lord, who is no reſpecter of perſons; he durſt neither ſoften nor keep back any part of the truth, to pleaſe all the kings upon earth.

V. 14. What the Lord—Jehovah, Almighty God, ſaith unto me, that will I ſpeak, for it muſt be given me what I ſhall ſay, when I come before the king; what that may be I cannot tell thee; but this I can tell thee, that I have given myſelf to God, and though he ſhould ſuffer me to be ſlain, as he hath often allowed others to be, yet will I do this—I will ſpeak what God commands, that it may be known to the kings of Iſrael and Judah, and to all the people, that I am the Lord's ſervant, and that I put my truſt in him.

V. 15. The king ſaid, Shall we go—To which Micaiah anſwered, Go and proſper; not ſeriouſly, but ironically, uſing the very words of the falſe prophets. Micaiah's meaning is plainly this, Becauſe thou doſt not ſeek to know the truth, but only to pleaſe thyſelf, go to the battle as all thy prophets adviſe thee, and expect the ſucceſs which they promiſe thee, and try the truth of their prediction by thy own coſtly experience.

V. 16. I adjure thee—I adjure thee again and again, that thou give over this mockery, and ſeriouſly tell me the mind of God in this matter.

V. 17. I ſaw—In the ſpirit, or in a viſion. All Iſrael ſcattered—As people who have loſt their king. And the Lord ſaid, Let them return in peace—Diſcharged from the war: which was fulfilled.

V. 18. The king of Iſrael ſaid unto Jehoſhaphat—Now thou ſeeſt my words verified, and this man ſhewing his hatred by this malignant and treaſonable propheſy, and how little regard is to be paid to his words. Which inſinuation ſeems to have had too great

V. 20. The Lord said, Who shall persuade Ahab—This is not to be understood, as if God did ask and take counsel from his creatures, or were at a loss to find out an expedient to accomplish his own will; but only to bring down divine things to our capacities, and to express the various means which God hath to execute his own designs.

V. 21. There came forth a spirit—An evil spirit came out of the company of them, standing possibly on the left hand, and presented himself before the throne, as having something to say to the Lord.

V. 22. I will be a lying spirit in all his prophets—I will inspire a lie into the minds and mouths of his prophets. Thou shalt prevail also—I will give them up into thy hands, and leave them to their own ignorance and wickedness This was the Almighty's sentence, and the evil spirit was the executioner of the divine justice which must now take place on the despiser of his mercy.

V. 24. Zedekiah—The chief of the false prophets. Smote Micaiah on the cheek—In contempt and scorn.

V. 25. Micaiah said, Thou shalt see when thou shalt go to hide thyself—Out of a just fear of the deserved punishment of a false prophet, and of the great author and abettor of this pernicious war, and of Ahab's destruction.

V. 26. The king said, Take Micaiah back—To prison.

V. 27. Until I come in peace—Until I return in triumph, which I doubt not I shall do in spite of all his malicious suggestions to the contrary.

V. 28. Micaiah said, Hearken, O people—Micaiah calls all the people to be witnesses of what he had said.

V. 30. I will disguise myself—Put off my imperial habit, that the Syrians may not know me, and direct their main force against me; which they will endeavour, as knowing that this war proceedeth from me, and is likely to die with me: and then thou shalt see that this man is a false prophet, and I shall have the success which I desire and expect, notwithstanding all his presages. But put thou on thy robes—Thy royal robes: which thou mayest do without any danger, because thou art not the object either of the Syrian's rage, or of this false prophecy.

V. 31. The king of Syria commanded his captains, saying, Fight only with the king of Israel—This he ordered, either in policy, supposing this to be the best way to put an end to the war; or, with design to take him prisoner, that thereby he might wipe out the stain of his own captivity, and recover the honour and advantage which then he lost. This was the return which Ahab received at the hands of Ben-hadad, whose life he spared when the honour of God required it should have been taken, as an example to mankind, that they forfeit their lives to the great Creator and Governor of heaven and earth, who exalt themselves against him, defying his power, as subjects forfeit their lives, who set lawful authority at defiance. So far from Ahab's disobedience to the will of God in sparing Ben-hadad, being the means of procuring him any real good in this life, that it was made the means by which he lost his life. Thus would the Father of mercies guard us against that common temptation of satan's—That a life devoted to the will of God, is not our greatest good; and that by disregarding God, men at least secure all that this life can afford. A deceit of the nature of that, by which some are brought to think it may be their interest to evade, or openly violate human laws; and this against the numerous examples, which public justice is obliged to make, of the folly and wickedness of forgetting, that men, for their own safety, must be against those that do wickedly, and that God hath declared, that there is no peace for the wicked, even in this life—Godliness alone having the reward of the life that now is, as well as that which is to come.

V. 32. They turned aside—They drew their forces from their several quarters towards Jehoshaphat. Who cried out—To the Lord for help.

V. 33. They turned back from pursuing him—His alliance and going with Ahab did not cost him his life, but he was in imminent danger. Thus does God threaten before he destroys.

V. 34. A certain man drew a bow at a venture—In his simplicity, ignorantly, without care or any design of reaching Ahab. But God designed it, whose Almighty power and unerring wisdom governs no less amidst all the confusion and violence of his poor fallen creatures, than he does in calmly regulating the seasons of the year, that the earth may be replenished with food, on which it is his will that the whole human race should live in peace, to prepare for endless peace with him. Ahab said, Carry me out of the host—The sentence of the Lord hath taken place upon me. I am wounded—These are the last words of Ahab.

V. 35. The battle increased—Grew violent. The king was stayed up—By his servants, that by his presence he might encourage his soldiers, and that he might see the event of the battle.

V. 36. There went a proclamation—Probably by Jehoshaphat's order. Saying, Every man to his city—The king is dead, and the battle ended; and therefore every man hath liberty to return to his own house. And thus was the word of the Lord fulfilled, as it had been delivered by the prophet Micaiah.

V. 37. So the king died—Thus ended Ahab's life of trial for life and immortality; and if all desire of turning to God for mercy was for ever lost and gone, and all offers of redeeming love before this finally rejected, had he no other calls to repent and live than those that are recorded, whose thought can imagine an excuse for his neglect of that great salvation of which he had so many offers, and so many proofs of God's willingness to give, and of his power to make effectual? How much more then without excuse when it shall appear, either to vindicate God's justice, or to shew the extent of his mercy, that all his outward calls to repentance were but a small part of what he knew and felt from the strivings of his Holy Spirit who died for him.

V. 41. Jehoshaphat began to reign over Judah in the fourth year of Ahab—Who reigned twenty-two years: therefore he reigned about eighteen years with Ahab.

V. 43. He walked in all the way of Asa his father—He took the same care for the government of his kingdom, and for the reformation of religion, that Asa did. Nevertheless, the high places were not taken away—He took away those which were erected to idols, but not those which were erected to the true God; of which this place speaks.

V. 44. Jehoshaphat made peace with the king of Israel—With Ahab first, and then with his son. This proved of mischievous consequence to Jehoshaphat's posterity.

51 ¶ z Ahaziah the ſon of Ahab began to reign over Iſrael in Samaria the ſeventeenth year of Jehoſhaphat king of Judah, and reigned two years over Iſrael.

Before Christ 898.

52 And he did evil in the ſight of the Lord, and walked in the way of his father, and in the way of his mother, and in the way of Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, who made Iſrael to ſin.

53 For he ſerved Baal, and worſhipped him, and provoked to anger the Lord God of Iſrael, according to all that his father had done.

CHAP.

V. 49. Jehoſhaphat would not—It is ſaid, that he did join with Ahaziah. (2 Chron. xx. 35, 36.) That was before this time, and before the ſhips were broken: for the breaking of the ſhips is noted to be the effect of his ſin, in joining with Ahaziah, and of the prophecy in conſequence of it. (2 Chron. xx. 37.) And Jehoſhaphat being warned and chaſtiſed by God for this ſin, would not be perſuaded to repeat it; by which he ſhewed the ſincerity of his repentance.

V. 51. By comparing this verſe with verſe 41, it appears, that Ahaziah was made king by his father, and reigned in conjunction with him a year or two before Ahab's death.

V. 52. He walked in the way of Jeroboam—Which clauſe ſeems here added, to ſhew how little the authority and example of parents, or anceſtors, is to be valued, where it is oppoſed to the will and word of God.

V. 53. He provoked to anger—By doing wickedly, after the example of thoſe that had done evil before him, and from which he derived no warrant or authority; every one being required by God to live according to his word, by which all men are to be judged.

CHAP. I.

V. 1. Moab—Had been ſubdued by David, as Edom was; and upon the diviſion of this kingdom into two, Moab was joined to that of Iſrael, and Edom to that of Judah, each to that kingdom upon which it bordered. And when Iſrael and Judah were weak and forſaken by God on account of their unbelief, their idolatry and diſobedience, they took that opportunity to revolt from them; Moab here, and Edom a little after it.

V. 2. Ahaziah fell—In his chamber he met with an hurt, which occaſioned his ſending to inquire of the idol Baal-zebub; or of the prieſts that attended to give anſwers in the names of theſe gods; and this public acknowledgment of an idol's having power to do any thing, was the king's ſin unto death.

V. 3. Is it not—Doſt thou not by this action caſt contempt upon the God of Iſrael, as if he were either ignorant of the event of thy thy disease, or unable to give thee any relief; and as if Baal-zebub had more skill and power than he?

V. 4. Thou shalt surely die—For this crime of regarding an idol. The messengers might well think they had sufficient cause to return, when they had met with one that told them the secret message which the king delivered to them in his bed-chamber.

V. 5. Why are ye now turned—Before you have been at Ekron: Which he easily knew by their quick return.

V. 9. Thou man of God—So he calls him out of scorn, as if he had vainly pretended to be the servant of a god that could do greater things than the god whom the king acknowledged. The king hath said, Come down—Which if thou refusest, I am here to carry thee to him by force; and by which thou shalt know that there is no power above the king's.

V. 10. Elijah said, If I be a man of God, then let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty—Which desire did not proceed from passion; but from the motion of God's spirit; as is evident from God's answer. And therefore Christ doth not condemn this act, but only reproves his disciples for their perverse imitation of it, from another spirit and principle. (Luke ix. 54, 55.)

V. 11. Another captain said, Thus hath the king said, Come down quickly—Wherein he discovers how little he was moved by the former example.

V. 12. And the fire of God came down from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty—That by these examples of God's severity, men might learn to fear him; and though they are sent to execute the commands of kings, not to act as if there was no power above them.

V. 13. The third captain besought him—Expressing a belief of God's power.

V. 15. Elijah went down with him unto the king—Not fearing the rage of the king, nor of Jezebel, nor of all their forces. Wherein he gives an eminent example of his faith and obedience; and of his growth in grace since that time that he fled for fear of Jezebel. And by this instance of God's commanding the prophet to go down, with the captain that besought him in the fear of God's power, we see that the same thing which cannot be done by the command of a king, nor by an armed force, is done in answer to prayer. The angel of the Lord speaks to Elijah as if he was his immediate attendant; and by this we see both how vain and how dangerous it is for men to use force, or express themselves with contempt against those, on whom the angels of God wait as ministring spirits; which is upon every heir of salvation—upon all who are living devoted to the will of God by faith in his beloved Son.

V. 16. He said unto him—To his face. Nor durst the king lay hands upon him, being daunted by the late dreadful evidence of his power with God and over men.

V. 17. So he died—Leaving an example to all men of the danger of seeking to any idol—to any other power but that of God's, either either to deliver them from evil, or to do them good. Jehoram reigned in his stead—His brother, for he had no son to succeed him.

CHAP. II.

V. 1. The Lord would take up Elijah into heaven—To enjoy his favour, and be crowned with glory in his presence for ever; thus discovering his gracious designs to all that are faithful unto death, and especially to those that follow their Redeemer after the example of Elijah, and become his public servants at all hazards to themselves, in promoting his holy will amongst men.

V. 2. Elijah said, The Lord hath sent me to Beth-el—He was first to go to Beth-el, as also to Jericho, to the schools of the prophets there, that he might comfort and strengthen their hearts in God's work, and give them his last and dying counsels. And who can tell the value of their advice, who have grown old in the public service of God?

V. 3. Knowest thou that the Lord will take away thy master—This was revealed to some of the sons of the prophets, and by them to the whole. He said, I know it, hold you your peace—Do not aggravate my grief, nor divert me with any unseasonable discourses; that I may prepare myself for so great a stroke, and diligently attend all my master's steps, and that I may beg and obtain some great blessing before his departure.

V. 4. Elijah said, Elisha, tarry here, I pray thee—Who can help admiring the affectionate simplicity of the aged prophet's address to his son in the work of the Lord? Elijah being filled with the love of his God and Saviour, and enraptured with his foretastes of the joys of the world to come, he wanted to be, without interruption, with that adorable Being from whom all his blessings flowed; and who by faith he so clearly beheld.

V. 6. I will not leave thee—Was the repeated answer of Elisha; and this is the language of love in the hearts of all that love God, to those that they think possess more of his gracious presence than themselves; they want to be near them, and, in the bonds of pure affection, desire to be inseparably one.

V. 7. Fifty of the prophets stood to view—To observe this great event, Elijah's translation to heaven, which they expected every moment.

V. 9. Elijah said unto Elisha, Ask what I shall do for thee—And thus saith the God of Elijah to all that cleave unto him with full purpose of heart; he kindly bids them ask that they may receive, that their joy maybe full. (John xvi. 24) Elisha said, Let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me—God's spirit being desired for God's glory, the power which accompanied Elisha, appears indeed to have been a full answer to this request, great as it was. But God hath promised that no manner of thing that is good shall be withheld from them, who, with uprightness of heart, look for his gifts, to use them for his glory.

V. 10. Thou hast asked a hard thing—A rare and singular blessing, which I cannot promise thee, which only God can give; and he gives it only when, and to whom he pleaseth. If thou see me—Great as Elijah's interest was with God, he does not assure him of his receiving the answer to his request unconditionally. The sign proposed was such as led Elisha earnestly to look to Elijah. And though it is promised unto all that ask, that they shall receive, yet they are to continue to look unto Jesus, the author and finisher of their faith.

V. 11. They still went on, and talked—The subject of their conversation is not recorded in the Scriptures; but blessed be the Lord, that though this and many other things are omitted, which might have afforded great delight to spiritual minds, yet a full sufficiency is recorded, to lead all that will be led to present and endless blessedness; where doubtless the happy spirits of all the redeemed will, as they can bear, have all those things made known to them, which will increase their love to God, and to all the countless multitudes which shall be for ever with him. There appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire—A bright cloud formed into such a likeness, managed by holy and blessed angels sent from heaven to conduct him thither. Elijah went up into heaven—Being so transformed, as might make him meet to be admitted into those blessed mansions; as they in a moment shall be changed, from a mortal to an immortal nature, who shall be found living on earth when the trumpet of God shall sound, to proclaim the coming of Jesus, and to call the living and the dead to appear before him. (1 Cor. xv. 51, 52.)

V. 12. My father, my father—So he calls him for his fatherly affection, and for his authority over him. The chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof—Who, by thy prayers, and power with God, didst more for the defence and preservation of Israel, than all their chariots and horses.

V. 13. The mantle of Elijah fell from him—God so ordering it for Elisha's comfort, and the strengthening of his faith, as a pledge, that, together with Elijah's mantle, his office and spirit should rest upon him.

V. 14. Where is the Lord God of Elijah—Who, at Elijah's request, divided these waters, and is as able to do it again; and hath given me his spirit, and office, and therefore I humbly beg his assistance, and this assurance of his power and goodness in my behalf.

V. 15. The sons of the prophets bowed themselves before him—Testifying their reverence and subjection to him as Elijah's successor, and their master and teacher. The Lord having given to Elisha the spirit of prophecy and of government, by the same spirit the sons of the prophet were made acquainted with this duty of submitting themselves to him, whom God had set over them.

V. 16 Fifty strong men—Able to take such a journey. Let them seek thy master—They thought that God had not finally taken him away from them, but only for a time; which they heartily desired, and therefore easily believed; or that God had only taken away his soul, and that his body was cast down into some place, which they desired to seek, that they might give it an honourable burial.

V. 17. Till he was ashamed—To wit, to deny them any longer, lest they should think his denial proceeded from a neglect of his master, or a contempt of the sons of the prophets.

V. 18. Did I not say unto you, Go not?—Because I saw the heavenly hosts convey him up through the air to heaven.

V. 20. Bring me a new cruse—That there might be no ground of suspicion, that the cure was wrought by any natural virtue of any thing which was or had been in the cruse before, but only by God's power; unbelief being always ready to ascribe any good that is done to natural causes, rather than to God, by whose power alone is done all the good that is done upon earth. And put salt therein—They that have the spirit of God abiding with them, are called the salt of the earth; and as the prophet made use of salt to heal the waters, so does the spirit of God alone heal the human heart of all its natural evils, and in consequence of it, of all the barrenness and unfruitfulness which there is in the lives of men, till the grace of God takes place as the living principle of their minds. And this greatest and most glorious work of God in restoring the fallen sinful souls of men, is represented to our belief by this, as well as by very many other proofs of the divine power recorded in the Scriptures, and which had for their witnesses men who hazarded their lives, or laid down their lives, rather than deny the facts of which God had made them witnesses; and which were also not things done in a corner, or only to the knowledge of a few, but, as in this case, to the knowledge of all the inhabitants of a city, and of a whole nation.

V. 21. He went to the spring, and cast the salt in there—As a sign of God's presence and power, which did the thing. There shall not be from thence any more death—The cause of death shall no more be found in this spring.

V. 22. The waters were healed—Of the evil qualities which were in them before, causing death to those that drank of them; and barrenness to the ground about both the spring and streams. And by this God shewed his power to heal the human mind of all its native evils; (Mark vii. 21.) and instead of that death to the divine life, and that barrenness as to all devotion to the will of God which was in it before, he communicates from his holy spirit purity and

V. 23. Elisha went up from thence unto Beth el—To the school of prophets. There came forth little children—They were old enough to discern between good and evil. Out of the city—Beth-el, which was the mother-city of idolatry, and where the prophets planted themselves, that they might bear witness against it, and dissuade the people from it; though, it seems, they had but small success. And mocked him—Deriding both his person and ministry, from a contempt of true religion. This contempt of the prophet, these young persons might have learnt from their parents, superiors and elders; and this prejudice against the known servant of God, might be much increased in their ignorance and wicked minds, by the suggestions of satan, who led men to shew the highest contempt and hatred to the Lord himself when he was on earth in the person of a man, and who is ever doing the same thing to all that are truly devoted to the will of God. Go up—Go up into heaven, whither thou pretendest that Elijah is gone. Why didst not thou accompany thy Friend and Master to heaven? That thou mightest not trouble Israel, as Elijah did! Bald-head—So they mock that which was natural to him: This is a great sin. Thou bald-head—It was no sudden nor rash slip of their tongue, but a scoff proceeding from a rooted impiety and hatred of God and his prophets.

V. 24. He cursed them—Pronounced the sentence of death upon them; that they might be a public example of God's displeasure against all that express themselves with, or shew contempt to such as appear amongst men in any country on the side of God, and of true religion. In the name of the Lord—Not from any passion, but by the motion of God's spirit, as appears by God's concurrence with him; which was to vindicate the honour, and maintain the authority of his prophets, and to shew how much he is on the side of them that give themselves up to do his will on earth. Two she-bears tare forty and two children—Of them that mocked. Thus does God shew that the beasts of the field are made to do his will, and when he pleases he can make them the executioners of his wrath.

V. 25. He returned to Samaria—By the direction of God's spirit for the service which he had there to perform. (chap. iii. 11.) How material is it for all to live in the Spirit, and to take every step under its guidance? none but God being able of a certainty to make known to all men where they ought to be, in order to do that which he requires of them.

CHAP. III.

V. 2. He put away the image of Baal, that his father had made—Not from any principle of conscience (for that would have reached the calves also): But either, because he was startled at the dreadful judgments God inflicted upon his Father and Brother for idolatry: Or, because he needed God's help to subdue the Moabites, which he knew Baal could not do: Or, to gratify Jehoshaphat, whose help he meant to crave, which he knew he should never obtain without this; and for this reason, it seems, Jezebel was willing out of policy to connive at it.

V. 3. Nevertheless, he cleaved unto the sins of Jeroboam—The worship of the calves: Which all the kings of Israel kept up as a wall of partition between their subjects and those of Judah. Thus he shews that his religion was over-ruled by his interest and policy.

V. 4. Mesha king of Moab was a sheep-master—A man of great wealth, (which in those times and places consisted much in cattle) which enabled and emboldened him to rebel against the king of Israel.

V. 5. The king of Moab rebelled—It is here repeated to make way for the following relation.

V. 6. King Jehoram numbered all Israel—Such as were fit for war. He begins his design with considering his strength, not by inquiring what was the will of God; and by this he shews his heart was not right with God, and that he did not ascribe unto him the honour due unto his name.

V. 7. Jehoshaphat—He joins with him, because the war was just in itself, and because Jehoram had reformed some things, and Jehoshaphat hoped by this means to engage him to proceed further in that work.

V. 10. The Lord hath called these three kings, to deliver them into the hand of Moab—So he chargeth this calamity upon God; and not upon himself, whose sins were the true cause of it.

V. 11. That we may inquire of the Lord by him—This he should have asked when they first undertook the expedition: for that neglect he now suffers: his affliction brings him to the remembrance of his duty. Elisha, which poured water on the hands of Elijah—Who was his servant.

V. 12. The word of the Lord is with him—We may inquire the mind of God by him: For he is a true prophet. They did not send for him, but went to him, that, by giving him this honour, they might more effectually engage him to give them his assistance.

V. 13. What have I to do with thee?—I desire to have no discourse with thee. Get thee—i. e. To the calves, which thou, after thy father's example, dost worship; and to the Baals which thy mother yet worshippeth by thy permission. Let these idols, whom thou worshippest in thy prosperity, now help thee in thy distress. The king of Israel said, Nay—I renounce those false prophets, and will seek to none but God for help. These three kings—If thou hast no respect for me, yet pity those that are involved in the same danger with myself.

V. 14. I regard the presence of Jehoshaphat the king of Judah—Whom I reverence and love for his faith in God, and his devotion to his will in consequence thereof.

V. 15. Bring me a minstrel—One that can sing and play upon a musical instrument. This he requires, that his mind, which had been disturbed and inflamed with holy anger at the sight of wicked Jehoram, might be composed and within itself, and that he might be excited to the more fervent prayer to God, and joyfully praising him; whereby he was prepared to receive the knowledge of the will of God.

V. 16. Make this valley full of ditches—Which may receive the water, and hold it for the use of men and beasts.

V. 17. Ye shall not see wind—Any of those winds which commonly produce rain. And seeing is here put for perceiving or feeling, one sense for another.

V. 18. This is but a small favour in comparison of what he intends to you for Jehoshaphat's sake. He will give you more than you ask or expect. For they were so weakened and discouraged with the great drought, that they had no hopes of proceeding in the offensive war, and thought it sufficient, if it were possible, to defend themselves from the Moabites.

V. 19. That they should have so full and compleat a victory, that they should be able to do all which is here expressed.

V. 20. When the meat-offering was offered—The morning-sacrifice: Attended with solemn prayers. By the way of Edom—From those parts which were towards Edom.

V. 21. The Moabites stood in the border—In that border of their country which was towards Edom, which way they understood the kings came.

But, Firſt, That place ſpeaks of the king, not of the king's ſon; and of the burning of his bones, not of the offering of a living man for a burnt offering. Secondly, This would not have made the beſiegers to raiſe their ſiege, but to have followed it more warmly to revenge ſo barbarous an action. Thirdly, The following clauſe, that ſhould have reigned in his ſtead, agrees not ſo well to the Edomites, whoſe king was only Jehoſhaphat's Viceroy, and therefore his ſon had no right to ſucceed him; as it doth to the Moabites, whoſe king was revolted from Iſrael, and intended to keep that kingdom to his own ſon, whom he ſacrificed; to obtain the favour of his God, according to the manner of the Phœnicians and other people in grievous and public calamities. Upon the wall—That the beſiegers might ſee it, and be moved by it. There was great indignation againſt Iſrael—For having been the cauſe of this horrid action indirectly, by being the occaſion of the war.

CHAP. IV.

V. 1. There cried a certain woman of the wives of the ſons of the prophets—Who, though they were wholly devoted to ſacred employment, were not excluded from marriage, no more than the prieſts and Levites. Thy ſervant my huſband did fear the Lord—His poverty was not therefore procured by his wickedneſs, but by his piety.

V. 2. Eliſha ſaid unto her, What ſhall I do for thee?—How ſhall I relieve thee? This was the ſame man that would not look upon a wicked king, that attends to a poor widow's requeſt.

V. 6. The oil ſtayed—When ſhe had nothing wherein to receive any more. God hath no other bounds in ſhewing mercy and communicating grace, but the capacity of the ſouls of men to receive the ſame. Juſt before God had ſhewn the thouſands of Judah and Iſrael, by ſupplying them with water, that it was with him an eaſy thing to relieve a whole nation from their diſtreſs; and in this inſtance we ſee his power and goodneſs extended to a private family. And what are theſe but different ways of making known to all mankind, that, under every public difficulty or private ſuffering, the Lord of life can relieve by ways and means far above all human thought, both in things temporal and ſpiritual; his goodneſs being confined within no other limits than the capacity—the faith of thoſe that look to him; God himſelf having gone ſo far as to ſay, That they that delight themſelves in him, ſhall have their hearts deſires granted to them; and that what things ſoever ye deſire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye ſhall have them? (Pſa. xxxvii. 4. Mark xi. 24.)

V. 7. The man of God ſaid, Pay thy debt, and live thou of the reſt—Firſt, do juſtice to others, and then take care of thyſelf and children. It may be obſerved that this woman believed the words ſpoken by the prophet of God, and did as he required her: She acted as a perſon fully ſatisfied that he who ſupplied the armies of Iſrael and Judah with water, could furniſh her with the means of paying her debt; and it is alſo obſervable, that this was done by increaſing the little which ſhe already poſſeſſed. Thus does God put into every one's power the means of doing all he requires of them, both for the purpoſes of juſtice and mercy. Eliſha's Lord is the God of the faithful at this day; and let not any deſpair of accompliſhing thoſe purpoſes which are for God's glory, but let them imitate this diſtreſſed, but believing perſon, firſt by regarding what the word of God encourages them to hope for, and then regulating their conduct agreeable to its directions.

V. 8. Shunem——A city in Iſſachar, near Mount Carmel, whither the prophet frequently went. A great woman—For eſtate, or quality; or more probably famed in Iſrael for the greatneſs of her faith, and her eminent devotion to God. She conſtrained him—By her importunate deſire. To eat bread—To take his repaſt there.

V. 9. I perceive, that this is an holy man of God——A prophet,

Before Christ 895.

9 And she said unto her husband, Behold now, I perceive that this is an holy man of God, which passeth by us continually.

10 Let us make a little chamber, I pray thee, on the wall, and let us set for him there a bed, and a table, and a stool, and a candlestick: and it shall be when he cometh to us, that he shall turn in thither.

11 And it fell on a day that he came thither, and he turned into the chamber, and lay there.

12 And he said to Gehazi his servant, Call this Shunammite. And when he had called her, she stood before him.

13 And he said unto him, Say now unto her, Behold, thou hast been careful for us with all this care: what is to be done for thee? wouldest thou be spoken for to the king, or to the captain of the host? And she answered, I dwell among mine own people.

14 And he said, What then is to be done for her? And Gehazi answered, Verily she hath no child, and her husband is old.

and that of eminent holiness: By our kindness to whom, we shall procure a blessing to ourselves.

V. 10. Let us make a little chamber on the wall—That he may be free from the noise of family-business, and enjoy that privacy, which, I perceive, he desireth for his prayers and meditations. He will not be troublesome or chargeable to us: He cares not for rich furniture or costly entertainment, and is content with bare necessaries. By this amiable woman's using the words, I pray thee, to her husband, a further discovery is made to us of her character, and shews that she possessed that humbleness of mind, which would not allow her to undertake even this work of piety, without first asking her husband's concurrence.

V. 12. She stood before him—Before the prophet, in the door of his chamber. The relation may be thus conceived: The prophet sent Gehazi to call her, and that she came to him upon that call. Then follows a particular description of the whole business with all the circumstances; first, of the message with which Gehazi was sent when he went to call her, and of her answer to that message, and of Gehazi's conjecture thereupon.

V. 13. What is to be done for thee?—Wherewith shall I recompense all thy care and kindness? To the captain of the host—With whom he justly had great power for his eminent services. I dwell among mine own people—I live in love and peace among my kindred and friends; nor have I any cause to complain of them, or to seek relief from higher powers.

V. 14. What then is to be done for her?—Hast thou observed any thing which she wants or desires? For the prophet kept himself much in his chamber, whilst Gehazi went more freely about the house, as his occasions led him. The prophet appears as if he could not be satisfied, till a full return should be made to her, in that which would be most acceptable to her. And thus are all the true servants of God continually desirous that a full return should be made to all that have shewn them kindness; and such is the bounty of their gracious God, that he will not, in their requital, so much as overlook a cup of cold water that hath been given for his sake.

V. 15. She stood in the door—Out of reverence, humility, and modesty, waiting till he came to her, or called her further in to him.

V. 16. Do not lie unto thine handmaid—Do not delude me with vain hopes. She could not believe it for joy.

V. 21. She had a confidence put into her by God, that the prophet could and would restore her Son.

V. 23. It is neither new-moon nor sabbath—Which were the chief times in which they resorted to the prophets for instruction, for which he supposed she now went, not suspecting but that the child was well by this time. It shall be well—Be contented; let me go.

V. 26. It is well—So it was in some respects, because it was the will of a wise and good God, and therefore best for her. Or, it shall be well: Though the child be dead, I doubt not, by God's blessing upon thy endeavours, it shall live again and do well: She answers briefly, that she might sooner come to the prophet, and more fully open her mind to him.

V. 27. She caught him by the feet—She fell at his feet and touched them, as a most humble and earnest suppliant. She intimated, what she durst not express in words, that she desired him to go along with her. Gehazi came to thrust her away—Judging this posture indecent for her, and offensive to his master. Her soul is vexed

r Chap. 8. 1.

s Acts 22. 3.

vexed within her—Disturb her not, for this is a sign of some extraordinary grief. The Lord hath told me—Whereby he signifies, that what he knew or did, was not by any virtue in himself, but only from God.

V. 28. Did I desire a son of my lord?—This child was not given to me upon my immoderate desire, for which I might have justly been thus chastised, as Rachel was, but was freely promised to me by thee in God's name, from his grace and favour: And therefore I trust both thou didst pray for it, and God design it as a blessing, and not as an affliction. Did not I say, Do not deceive me?—With vain hopes of a comfort that I should never have. And I had been much happier if I had never had it, than to lose it so quickly. Therefore thou art in some measure concerned to revive my dead hopes, and to continue to me the great blessing which thou hast procured.

V. 29. Gird up thy loins—Tie up thy long garments about thy loins for expedition. Answer him not again—Make no delays, but go with all possible speed. Lay my staff upon the face of the child—This was an expression of the prophet's faith, that God would restore the child to life again.

V. 30. I will not leave thee—Till thou goest home with me: Her faith was not so strong as to think that the prophet could work so great a miracle at this distance, and by his staff; which possibly was the reason why this did no good. (Matth. ix. 18.)

V. 31. There was neither voice, nor hearing—No sign of life in the child. Elisha having yielded to her importunity to go with her, might not join his fervent prayers with Gehazi's action, but reserved them till he came thither. The child is not awaked—Not revived: Death being often compared to a sleep.

V. 33. He shut the door upon them twain—Upon himself and the dead child, that he might pray to God without distraction.

V. 34. The child waxed warm—Not by any external heat, which could not be transmitted to the child's body by such slight touches of the prophet's body; but by a natural heat, proceeding from a principle of life, which was already infused into the child, and by degrees enlivened all the parts of his body. And as incapable as the living are to communicate natural life to the dead, so incapable are those that are spiritually alive, to communicate spiritual life in any degree, to such as are dead in trespasses and sins. None can quicken his own soul from that death which is passed upon all men. God, and God alone, by his own holy Spirit, can give spiritual life to the soul of man; and faith in his willingness to do it for the Mediator's sake, is the great mean which is to breathe through all their prayers and all their endeavours, who labour for the restoration of their fallen fellow-creatures to the life and image of God. (Matth. xiii. 58. & xvii. 20.)

V. 35. And went up—Repeating his former actions, to teach us not to be discouraged in our prayers if we be not speedily answered, but to wait with patience, and continue, and be instant in prayer, till we obtain what we seek for. Although miracles were for the most part done in an instant, yet sometimes they were done by degrees, as here, and 1 Kings xviii. 44, 45. Mark viii. 24, 25.

V. 37. Then she went in—Into his chamber, and, after she had done him honour, to the bed where the child lay, whence she took him, and went her way.

V. 38. To Gilgal—When he came with Elijah, where was a school of the prophets, whom he designed to comfort concerning the present dearth, and their other discouragements, and to confirm in the profession and practice of religion, and to instruct in the duties of the present season. Seethe pottage—He provides no delicious meats, but meer necessaries, to teach them, that those that mean to live to God must be temperate, keeping at an equal distance from all fulness and delicacy of living.

Before Christ cir. 894.

CHAP. V.

V. 1. Naaman was a great man with his master—In great power and favour with the king of Syria. And honourable—Highly esteemed for his quality and success. By him the Lord had given deliverance unto Syria—Which expression is used to remind the Israelites, that all the hurt they had from the Syrians was from the Lord, who used them as his rod, and gave them the successes against Israel, which are recorded; and partly, to check that proud conceit which then was working, and afterwards more fully discovered itself in the Israelitish nation, as if the care, and providence, and goodness of God, were wholly confined to themselves, and not imparted to any other people.

V. 3. The prophet would recover him—Take away his leprosy from him.

V. 4. One went in, and told his lord—Told it to the king of Syria.

V. 5. I will send a letter unto the king of Israel—Desiring him to obtain this favour from the prophet. He took silver and gold—For presents to the prophet.

V. 6. That thou mayest recover him—Procure his recovery by the means of Elisha, whom thou mayest command to use his utmost skill and power.

V. 7. The king of Israel, he rent his clothes——In detestation of his giving God's perfections to him. See how he seeketh a quarrel against me—For not doing what he requires, which he knows impossible for me to do.

V. 8. When

V. 39. A wild vine—A plant whose gourds or leaves resemble the leaves of a vine, and are very bitter and pernicious.

V. 40. There is death—Some deadly thing: which they gathered from its bitterness, by which possibly some of them might discern what it was.

V. 41. And there was no harm—The meal took away that hurtful quality; not by its natural power, which could do little in so short a time, but by the supernatural blessing of God upon it.

V. 42. Bread of the first-fruits—Which were the priest's due; but these, and probably the rest of the priest's dues, were usually brought by the pious Israelites, according to their ability, to the Lord's prophets, because they did a great part of the priest's office, and because they were not permitted to carry them to Jerusalem. And this passage seems to be noted here, not only on occasion of the following miracle, but also that by this one instance we might understand how so many schools of the prophets were supported. Twenty loaves—Small loaves, because one man brought them all so far; and because otherwise there had been no miracle here. Give unto the people—The sons of the prophets, who were then present with him.

V. 43, 44. To the servitor the quantity of food appeared to be so little for so many, that he thought it ought not to be set before them; but the prophet knew that the Lord would make that which they had, more than enough to supply their wants who gave themselves to his service. And how often does the Lord lengthen out their bread who live in his fear and hope in his mercy.

Before Christ cir. 894. rent his clothes, that he ſent to the king, ſaying, Wherefore haſt thou rent thy clothes? let him come now to me, and he ſhall know that there is a prophet in Iſrael.

V. 8. When Eliſha the man of God had heard—Joram had not conſulted with him.

V. 9. Naaman ſtood at the door of the houſe of Eliſha—Waiting for Eliſha's coming to him.

V. 10. Eliſha ſent a meſſenger unto him—That it might appear he ſought not his own glory and profit, but only God's honour, and the good of men; and for the diſcovery of the Almighty power of God, that could, by ſuch ſlight means, cure ſo deſperate a diſeaſe.

V. 11. Naaman was wroth—Suppoſing himſelf deſpiſed and mocked by the prophet. Behold, I thought—Herein he gives an example of the perverſeneſs of the human mind, which is ever ready to prefer its own fancies before God's appointments. And ſtrike his hand over the place—Over the affected part, without which it ſeemed to him ridiculous to expect a cure.

V. 12. May I not waſh in them, and be clean?—Is there not as great a virtue in them to this purpoſe? But he did not conſider, that the cure was not to be wrought by the water, but by the power of God, who might uſe what means and methods of cure he pleaſed.

V. 13. My father—Or, our father. So they call him, to ſhew their reverence and affection to him, and to mitigate his exaſperated mind.

V. 14. He was clean—Free from the leaſt mixture or mark of the diſeaſe.

V. 15. He returned to the man of God—To give him thanks, and a recompence for his great kindneſs. Now I know that there is no God in all the earth, but in Iſrael—By this wonderful work I am fully convinced, that the God of Iſrael is the only true God. And thus it is when God, by his grace, cures the leproſy of ſin, and purifies the ſoul from its uncleanneſs; it is then aſſured, with Naaman, that none but God, infinite in power and goodneſs, could perform the work which it has the ſame certain knowledge is wrought in it, as Naaman had of his being cured of his leproſy. And human reaſon, unenlightened with the grace of God, can only look upon all that is ſaid of ſalvation from ſin, by faith in the Redeemer of the world, as Naaman conſidered the command of the prophet—That the means were not equal to the end, and that he could never be cured by that which was ſo eaſy and ſimple in itſelf. But againſt all that can be ſaid by human reaſon, bleſſed are they whoſe iniquities are forgiven, and who are ſanctified by grace, received through faith in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. (Rom. iv. 7. Acts xxvi. 18.) I pray thee, take a bleſſing—A thankful acknowledgment.

V. 16. He urged him, but he refuſed—Not that he thought it unlawful to receive things ſuch as were neceſſary for him, but God ſupplied his wants without receiving ſums of ſilver or gold.

V. 17. Shall there not be given to thy ſervant two mules burden of earth?—Wherewith I may make an altar. He would, by this token, profeſs his conjuction with the Iſraelites in the worſhip of God, and conſtantly put himſelf in mind of his great obligations to that God from whoſe land this was taken.

V. 18. Rimmon—A Syrian idol. Acts vii. 43. Remphan. And I bow myſelf in the houſe of Rimmon—Not in honour to the idol, which I do here, and ſhall there, openly renounce; but only in compliance with the king's infirmity and conveniency, who cannot well bow if I ſtand upright. The Lord pardon thy ſervant in this thing—Becauſe there ſeemed to be an appearance of evil in this action, though done with an honeſt mind, he deſires the prophet's prayers, that God would not charge it upon him as idolatry, nor be diſpleaſed with him for that practice.

V. 19. Go in peace—Go, and the peace or bleſſing of God go along with thee: And the prophet well knew, that as he grew in Before Christ cir. 894. hath spared Naaman this Syrian, in not receiving at his hands that which he brought: but as the Lord liveth, I will run after him, and take somewhat of him.

21 So Gehazi followed after Naaman: and when Naaman saw him running after him, he lighted down from the chariot to meet him, and said, § Is all well?

§ Heb. Is there peace?

22 And he said, All is well: my master hath sent me, saying, Behold, even now there be come to me from mount Ephraim two young men of the sons of the prophets: give them, I pray thee, a talent of silver, and two changes of garments.

23 And Naaman said, Be content, take two talents. And he urged him, and bound two talents of silver in two bags, with two changes of garments, and laid them upon two of his servants, and they bare them before him.

‖ Or, secret place.

24 And when he came to the ‖ tower, he took them from their hand, and bestowed them in the house; and he let the men go, and they departed.

25 But he went in, and stood before his master: and Elisha said unto him, Whence comest thou, Gehazi? And he said, Thy servant went * no whither.

* Heb. not hither or thither.

26 And he said unto him, Went not mine heart with thee, when the man turned again from his chariot to meet thee? is it a time to receive money, and to receive garments, and olive-yards, and vineyards, and sheep, and oxen, and men-servants, and maid-servants?

AND [a] the sons of the prophets said unto Elisha, Behold now, the place where we dwell with thee is too strait for us.

cir. 893. a Chap. 4. 38.

2 Let us go, we pray thee, unto Jordan, and take thence every man a beam, and let us make us a place there where we may dwell. And he answered, Go ye.

3 And one said, Be content, I pray thee, and go with thy servants. And he answered, I will go.

4 So he went with them. And when they came to Jordan, they cut down wood.

5 But as one was felling a beam, the * ax-head fell into the water: and he cried, and said, Alas, master, for it was borrowed.

* Heb. iron.

6 And the man of God said, Where fell it? And he shewed him the place. And [b] he cut down a stick, and cast it in thither, and the iron did swim.

b Chap. 2. 21.

grace, and in the knowledge and love of God his Saviour, he would, in his outward conduct, do whatever would be most for the glory of God; and though he could not now bear to be told that he must rather lose his life than come under the roof where an idol was worshipped, yet the prophet knew the faithfulness of God, and the consolations of his spirit, would lead him on till his heart should be so established in grace, when he should be enabled to do that, which now he could not bear to be told.

V. 20. My master hath spared Naaman this Syrian—A stranger, and one of that nation who are the implacable enemies of God's people: Whom therefore my master should not have had so much regard to, as to the Lord's prophets, who better deserved, and more needed the money which he offered, than Naaman himself did. But as the Lord liveth, I will take somewhat of him—He swears, that he might have some pretence for the action to which he had bound himself by his oath; not considering, that to swear to do any wicked action, is so far from excusing it, that it is adding one crime to another.

V. 21. He lighted down from the chariot to meet him—Thereby testifying his great respect to the prophet his master.

V. 22. My master hath sent me—This was unlikely; but Naaman was not willing to question it, but glad of the opportunity of shewing his gratitude to the prophet.

V. 23. He urged him—Who at first refused it, upon a pretence of modesty and obedience to his master's command.

V. 24. When he came to the tower—A private place which he chose for that purpose. He let the men go—Before they came within sight of his master.

V. 26. Went not mine heart with thee?—Did not my mind, being enlightned by God's spirit, discern what thou saidst and didst? Is it a time—Was this a fit season for this action? I had but newly and obstinately refused his gifts, for great reasons; and now thou hast given him cause to think, that I was a wicked impostor, who vain-gloriously refused in public, what I inwardly and greedily desired, and sought only a fitter place and opportunity to take; and that all our religion is but an imposture; and that the God who owns such a vile wretch for his prophet, as thou hast represented me to him, is not so holy and righteous as we pretend. And maid-servants—It would appear that the things mentioned Gehazi intended to purchase with this money: And therefore the prophet names them, to inform him, That he exactly knew, by Divine inspiration, not only Gehazi's outward actions, but even his most secret intentions.

V. 27. He went out from his presence—Being confounded with the sense of his guilt, and shame, and misery, and banished from the company of others by God's law. And who shall avoid a diseased soul, that seeks for gain by the profession of godliness.

CHAP. VI.

V. 2. Let us take thence every man a beam—A piece of timber for the building. Hence it may be gathered, That although the sons of the prophets principally devoted themselves to religious exercises, such as prayer, and praising of God, and the studying of God's word, and instructing of others, and waiting for divine revelations; yet they employed themselves in labour.

V. 5. The ax-head—The iron fell from the wood. It was borrowed—By this it would appear, that this prophet was not in a condition himself to repair this, otherwise trifling loss; for if he had, it would not have occurred to him to have expressed such a sense of the loss; nor is it likely that a miracle would have been wrought to restore that which might have been done at so small a cost: By such means as these, God shews the poverty and industry in which they lived, who lived to God.

V. 6, 7. All nature obeys the will of the God of nature, and no distress is too small for him to relieve, no injury too little for him to repair to them that live to him.

V. 8. In such a place shall be my camp—Thither I will send my forces, to surprise the king of Israel.

V. 10. The king of Israel sent to the place—Soldiers, to secure the place and passage designed. And saved himself—Either his person when he was to pass that way: Or his people, or places of importance. Not once nor twice—But frequently.

V. 13. Go, spy, that I may fetch him—For though I cannot conceal my designs from him, yet I may possibly take him by force; his power being, I doubt not, much inferior to his knowledge. In Dothan—A city near Shechem, and not far from Samaria.

V. 15. The servant of the man of God—Who, having been with him but a little time since Gehazi's dismission, had not yet seen any experiments of his great power; or, if he had, his faith might easily be shaken upon so great and sudden a danger.

V. 16. And may not every one at all times say this, who have given themselves to God as a living sacrifice? (Rom. xii. 1.)

V. 17. Lord, I pray thee that he may see—That by some visible appearance he may see the invisible guard of angels which incompass and defend us. But do angels attend on all that live by faith in God their Saviour? Yes, the angels are all ministering spirits sent forth from God, and though unseen by men, yet they minister to all the heirs of salvation; (Heb. i. 14.) they defend them from evil and do them good, and are the means of bestowing benefits from God, the greatness and number of which the full light of eternity can only be able to make known. The young man saw chariots of fire round about Elisha—He saw, in a vision, Elisha upon the mountain, encompassed with fiery horses and chariots.

V. 18. When they came down to him—In the field without the city, whither he went to meet them. Elisha prayed unto the Lord, and said, Smite this people with blindness—With a partial blindness, that they could not discern the man they sought, nor the way by which he led them.

V. 19. This is not the way, neither is this the city—Where you will find the man for whom you seek; which was true, because he was now come out of the city. I will bring you to the man whom ye seek—And so he did, though not in such manner as they expected and desired. He led them to Samaria—Their senses being still deluded.

V. 21. The king of Israel—To whom Elisha had doubtless sent notice of his intentions, that he might accordingly prepare himself. My father—Now he gives him this title of reverence and affection, because of a great and present benefit he received from him; though otherwise he hated him, and would not hearken to his counsel. Shall I smite them—The repetition of the question shews his great desire to smite them, and that with utter destruction.

V. 22. Thou shalt not—It is against the laws of humanity to kill captives, though they had been taken with my own sword and bow; but much more unworthy will it be in cold blood to kill these, whom not thy arms, but God's miraculous providence hath put into thy hands. Set bread and water before them—Give them meat and drink, which may refresh and strengthen them for their journey. Which was an action of piety and charity, in doing good to their enemies, and much to the honour of the true religion; and of no leſs prudence, that hereby the hearts of the Syrians might be both turned towards the Iſraelites, and afraid to oppoſe that people who had ſuch an invincible protector.

V. 23. He ſent them away—Refreſhed. The bands of Syria came no more—For ſome conſiderable time.

V. 26. As the king of Iſrael was paſſing by upon the wall—To give neceſſary orders for the defence of the city, and to obſerve the motions of the enemy.

V. 27. Whence ſhall I help thee—Or, doſt thou aſk of me corn or wine, which I want for myſelf?

V. 29. We boiled my ſon, and did eat him—A dreadful judgment threatened to them in caſe of their apoſtacy, (Deut. xxviii. 56, 57.) in which they were now deeply plunged. She hath hid her ſon—Either, that ſhe might eat him alone; or, that ſhe might ſave him from death.

V. 30. The king rent his clothes—In grief for ſuch an horrid fact. He had ſackcloth within, upon his fleſh—Under his inner garments, in token of his ſorrow.

V. 31. This partial prince overlooks his own great and various ſins; and amongſt others, his obſtinate cleaving to the idolatry of the calves, and the whoredoms and witchcrafts of his mother Jezebel, (2 Kings ix. 22.) and the wickedneſs of his people, which was the true and proper cauſe of this, and all their calamities; and lays the blame of all upon Eliſha, either, ſuppoſing that he who had the ſpirit of Elijah reſting upon him, had brought this famine by his prayers, as Elijah had formerly done, (1 Kings xvii. 1.) or, becauſe he had encouraged them to withſtand the Syrians, by promiſing them help from God in due time: or, becauſe he would not, by his interceſſion to God, and the working of a miracle, deliver them from theſe calamities, as he eaſily could have done. But he did not conſider, that the prophets could not work what miracles, and when they pleaſed, but only as far as God ſaw fit, whoſe time was not yet come; otherwiſe it was Eliſha's intereſt, as well as theirs, to be freed from this diſtreſs.

V. 32. Eliſha ſat in his houſe—In the houſe where he lodged: for he had no houſe of his own, having forſaken all when he followed Elijah. The elders ſat with him—To receive comfort and counſel from him, in this diſtreſſed time; or rather to ſolicit him, to uſe his power with God for their relief: which accordingly he doth, and in compliance with them, not out of any fear of the king, he gives the following anſwer, Chap. vii. 1. The king ſent a man from before him—One of his guard, or ſome other officer, to take away his head. He ſaid to the elders—Being admoniſhed by God of his danger. This ſon of a murderer—The genuine ſon of that wicked Ahab the murderer of the Lord's prophets, and whoſe ſon he is not by birth only, but alſo by his bloody diſpoſition. This expreſſion may ſeem harſh; nor is it to be drawn into imitation by others: But it muſt be conſidered, that he was a prophet, intruſted with a power ſuperior to that of Joram, and had authority to rebuke him in the name of the King of Kings. He hath ſent to take away mine head—To kill me, before he hear what I have to ſay. Shut the door, and hold him—Not the king, but the meſſenger, who was laſt mentioned; that he may not break in upon me, and take away my life, before the king comes. Is not his maſter's feet behind him—You ſhall not need to hold him long, for the king is coming.

V. 33. He ſaid—The king lays all the blame upon God, not, as he ought, upon his own and his mother's wickedneſs, which provoked God (who doth not willingly afflict) to ſend this heavy judgment upon him. What ſhould I wait for the Lord any longer—Thou bidſt me wait upon God for help: But I perceive I may wait long enough before deliverance comes: I am weary with waiting, I can wait no longer.

THEN Elisha said, Hear ye the word of the Lord, Thus saith the Lord, [a] To morrow about this time shall a measure of fine flour be sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, in the gate of Samaria.

3 ¶ And there were four leprous men [d] at the entering in of the gate: and they said one to another, Why sit we here until we die?

d Lev. 13. 46.

4 If we say, we will enter into the city, then the famine is in the city, and we shall die there: and if we sit still here, we die also. Now therefore come, and let us fall unto the host of the Syrians: if they save us alive, we shall live; and if they kill us, we shall but die.

5 And they rose up in the twilight, to go unto the camp of the Syrians: and when they were come to the uttermost part of the camp of Syria, behold, there was no man there.

6 For the Lord had made the host of the Syrians [e] to hear a noise of chariots, and a noise of horses, even the noise of a great host: and they said one to another, Lo, the king of Israel hath hired against us [i] the kings of the Hittites, and the kings of the Egyptians, to come upon us.

8 And when these lepers came to the uttermost part of the camp, they went into one tent, and did eat and drink, and carried thence silver, and gold, and raiment, and went and hid it; and came again, and entered into another tent, and carried thence also, and went and hid it.

9 Then they said one to another, We do not well: this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace: if we tarry till the morning light, † some mischief will come upon us: now therefore come, that we may go and tell the king's household.

13 And one of his servants answered, and said, Let some take, I pray thee, five of the horses

CHAP. VII.

V. 1. Then Elisha said—To the king, being then come to him, and to his courtiers, who were come with him. Thus saith the Lord—Whom you have so highly offended, of his own grace and bounty hath sent you the glad tidings of your deliverance.

V. 2. If the Lord would make windows—Through which he could rain down corn, as once he did manna. Thou shalt see it, but shalt not eat thereof—A just punishment for such peremptory unbelief, whereby he made not only the prophet, but even God himself, (in whose name it was evident Elisha said and did this) a liar.

V. 3. There were four leprous men at the entering in of the gate—To wit, of the city; out of which they were shut by virtue of God's law: Either, the dwelling-place of the lepers was near the gate; or, they were come very near the gate, for fear of the Syrians.

V. 5. They rose up in the twilight—In the evening twilight, as appears from v. 9. and 12.

V. 6. The Lord made the host of the Syrians to hear a noise—And with the supernatural noise which God caused them, and them only to hear, they were left to believe their own groundless conjectures, of danger from allies coming to the aid of the Israelites.

V. 7. They arose and fled for life—To save their lives; which they fancied to be in such present and extreme danger, that they durst not stay to take away any of their goods, but every man fled the next way before him.

V. 9. We do not well—Not well for our brethren, whom we should pity and help: Nor well for ourselves; for we may suffer for this neglect; either, from the Syrians, who may lie lurking hereabouts; or, from our king and people; or, from God's immediate hand. They were convinced of the sin and danger of neglecting to do that which was in their power for the good of others who entirely needed their assistance; and though they themselves were shut out from the benefits of society, yet, by this conviction, they were led without delay to go and cry to the people within the city, that they might be saved from their present misery, and danger of speedily perishing. What an example do these poor men afford all, to whom in a gospel sense it is a day of good tidings—who can rejoice in their rich portion in the knowledge of the pardoning love of God, for the sake of their Redeemer? (Isa. lxi. 7.) How ought they to cry to all that are living in the misery and danger of unpardoned offences against God; a state, from which if the living are not saved by true repentance and faith in the only Saviour of sinners, no less fatal to the soul than famine to the body.

V. 14. They took two chariot-horſes, and the king ſent—It was moved by the king's ſervant that all the five horſes ſhould be ſent. It ſeems it was thought, by the king and others, that two were ſufficient for that purpoſe.

V. 15. In their haſte—Or, in their fear, wherewith God ſtruck them.

V. 17. The king appointed the lord on whoſe hand he leaned, to have the charge of the gate—To prevent tumults amongſt the people; and to take order about the ſhutting of the gates, if need were, and if the Syrians ſhould happen to return upon them.

V. 20. And he died—Leaving an example of the danger of unbelief; in the reading of which we cannot too earneſtly apply it to ourſelves, if we are not conſcious that, with our whole hearts, we believe the word of God, in thoſe things wherein all have a never-ending concern; as he that believeth not, when this life of trial ends, will periſh, with no leſs certainty than that this unbelieving lord loſt his life. He that believeth not ſhall be damned. (Mark xvi. 16.)

CHAP. VIII.

V. 1. Then ſpake Eliſha unto the woman—Expreſſing his gratitude for her former kindneſſes, by taking care for her preſervation. The Lord hath called for a famine—Hath appointed to bring a famine, or a great ſcarcity of proviſions. This expreſſion intimates, that all afflictions are ſent by God, and come at his command. Seven years—A double time to the former famine under Elijah, (James v. 17.) becauſe they were ſtill obſtinate under all the ſevere judgments of God, and under the powerful miniſtry of Eliſha, who confirmed his doctrine of repentance towards God, and faith in him, as the only Redeemer by glorious miracles. (See Lev. xxvi. 21, 24, 28.)

V. 2. She went, and ſojourned in the land of the Philiſtines—This land, though bordering upon Iſrael, was free from this famine, that it might appear that this was a ſpecial judgment of God upon the Iſraelites for their idolatry, and for their neglect of all the means of grace which now they enjoyed by Eliſha, and many other prophets; which the Philiſtines not enjoying, their ſin was leſs, and therefore their preſent condition was better. To whom God gives much, of the ſame he requires much.

V. 5. As he was telling the king, the woman cried for her houſe—By God's wonderful and gracious providence brought thither in the moſt advantageous ſeaſon.

V. 6. When the king aſked the woman—Concerning the truth of Gehazi's relation. How full are the Scriptures of proofs of God's continual care over all that fear him, that hope in his mercy, and obey his word as this woman did; who was thus brought back to her native country at the moment of time, when the king was receiving information of the miracle wrought by the power of God on her ſon; and ſo prepared to give her the immediate poſſeſſion of all that belonged to her.

V. 8. Take a present in thine hand—By which he thought to purchase his favour, and the healing of his disease. How generally does this opinion prevail amongst men, that favour is to be obtained by offering something worthy of his acceptance who is to bestow the favour. And are not all men led to consider, at one season or another of their life of trial, what they shall offer unto God to obtain his mercy and favour? and when that light that lighteneth every man that cometh into the world, sheweth all that will be led by it, that themselves and all they have is the property of God, and that they have nothing to offer unto him which is not already his own by his right as Creator, how are all mankind left solely dependant on the Son of God, who gave himself an offering for men, that for his sake they may receive all that they stand in need of in this life, and that which is to come?

V. 9. Thy son Ben-hadad—He who before persecuted him as an enemy, now in his extremity honours him like a father.

V. 10. Here is no contradiction: For the first words contain an answer to Ben-hadad's question, ver. 8. Shall I recover of this disease? To which the answer is, Thou mayest, or shalt recover, i. e. notwithstanding thy disease, which is not mortal, and shall not take away thy life. The latter words contain the prophet's addition to that answer, which is, that he should die, not by the power of his disease, but by some other cause.

V. 11. He settled his countenance stedfastly—The prophet fixed his eyes upon Hazael. Until he was ashamed—Till Hazael was ashamed, because it follows, by way of distinction, the man of God wept.

V. 12. I know the evil thou wilt do unto the children of Israel—So here was a double cause of his grief and tears, the evil of sin in Hazael; and the evil of suffering upon Israel. And thus known unto God is all the evil that is in men, and all the evil that will ever be done by them. How great then must that patience and long suffering be, which spares them, that he may shew mercy to them?

V. 13. Is thy servant a dog—So vile and unworthy, so fierce, and barbarous, and inhuman. Thou shalt be king over Syria—And when thou shalt have power in thy hand, thou wilt discover that bloody disposition, and that hatred against God's people, which now lies hid from others, and from thyself.

V. 14. He told me that thou shouldest surely recover—He represents the prophet's answer thus, that by his master's security he might have the opportunity to execute his treasonable design.

V. 15. He took a thick cloth, and spread it on his face—He choaked him therewith: By which artifice his death seemed to be natural; but this wickedness was known to God, who will bring every secret sin to light, and reward every wrong-doer according to his works. Hazael reigned in his stead—Having the favour of the people, and of the men of war. We may see the cause of the prophet's sorrow in its being known unto him, that God suffered this wicked man to be exalted to execute his great displeasure, not only against Jezebel, but upon thousands of the people of Israel. And who that loves God, and their fellow-creatures, for his sake, can help weeping when they see men standing exposed, by their own wilful disobedience, to the wrath revealed from heaven against their unrighteousness?

V. 18. The daughter of Ahab was his wife—This unequal marriage, though Jehoshaphat possibly designed it as a means of uniting the two kingdoms under one head, and in the true religion, is here and elsewhere noted, as the cause both of the great wickedness of his posterity, and of those sore calamities which befel them.

V. 19. As he promised him to give him alway—Until the coming of the Messiah, as it is elsewhere limited and explained: For the making good of God's promise and covenant made with David. But when the Messiah was once come, there was no more need of any succession, and the sceptre might and did without any inconvenience depart from Judah, and from all the succeeding branches of David's family, because the Messiah was to hold the kingdom for ever in his own person, though not in so gross a way as the carnal Jews imagined, but in a spiritual manner.

V. 5. He that was over the houſe—The chief governor of the king's palace. He that was over the city—The chief magiſtrate. We will do all that thou ſhalt bid us—They ſubmit all to his mercy.

V. 6. He wrote a letter—Thus Jezebel is requited for her letter directed in like manner to the elders of Naboth's city, whereby his life was wickedly taken away. And who ſhall do wickedly, and not have the evil that he did returned to him? To do evil in any way or degree, and to expect to eſcape the conſequences thereof in ſuffering for it, is to act againſt the plaineſt declarations of God's word, and againſt all the proofs of the truth of it, from almoſt numberleſs examples. And when children live, as is moſt to be expected, as they have been accuſtomed to ſee their parents live before them, and are puniſhed for doing ſo, what juſt cauſe is there to believe, from the deſire that unhappy ſpirit had (Luke xvi. 28.) that his brethren might not be with him in his torments, that death does not relieve parents, and all that have ſet a wicked example, from feeling an increaſe of miſery for the ſufferings of ſuch, as they have been the means of miſleading: By this inſtance we ſee that ſuch as have died in their ſins, are not without their concern in the world they have left behind them. It may be ſafely ſaid, That there is not one poſſible conſideration, which can have any weight in leading men to turn unto God, and to accept of his grace, (Heb. xii. 28.) which the gracious Creator and Redeemer of men hath not made uſe of, to prevent men from making themſelves miſerable, and deſtroying themſelves by ſin.

V. 7. They ſlew ſeventy perſons—Jehu juſtly required this, becauſe the Sovereign and moſt righteous Lord of all men's lives commanded it; but the Samaritans wickedly obeyed it, becauſe they deſtroyed perſons in a great meaſure innocent, meerly out of ſlaviſh fear, and without any knowledge of, or regard to, God's command.

V. 8. The gate—The place of judicature; to ſignify, that this was an act of juſtice, and of God's righteous judgment; and the place of greateſt concourſe, that all men might behold this dreadful ſpectacle of Divine vengeance upon Ahab's family, and thereby might juſtify Jehu's proceedings.

V. 9. He ſaid to all the people—To the multitude met there to gaze upon this ſad and ſtrange ſpectacle. So the ſenſe is, Be not you troubled nor affrighted with theſe unuſual and diſmal occurrences: If any thing be amiſs in theſe actions, I do here publicly and ſolemnly acquit you as righteous and innocent; do not you therefore fear any vengeance from God or men for it: If there be any guilt, it is in me, and in thoſe who cut off theſe heads.

V. 10. There ſhall fall unto the earth nothing which the Lord ſpake—This is not man's work, but God's, and done by his command; but who did not require any man's treachery in executing his will. By ſuch diſcoveries as this, we may ſee how the wicked may be puniſhed, or the innocent and righteous taken from evil to come, and the purpoſes of God's wiſe, juſt, and good government carried into execution by the conduct of men, who are purſuing their own ſelfiſh and ſinful deſigns. By his ſervant Elijah—Whom he mentions, rather than Eliſha; partly, becauſe Elijah was now dead, and therefore his name and memory was more ſacred than Eliſha's, who was yet alive; this being the common humour of mankind, to value and honour thoſe that are dead, whom they contemned whilſt they lived.

V. 11. Jehu ſlew all the houſe of Ahab, and all his great men—Whom he had advanced and made great in wealth, or honour, and who had been partners with him in his ſins. And his prieſts—His domeſtic prieſts which had waited upon Ahab and Jezebel in their idolatrous ſervices. He left him none remaining—In that kingdom; for he did leave ſome of the Royal ſeed of Judah.

V. 12. At the ſhearing-houſe—Where they uſed to ſhear ſheep, and then to feaſt after their manner.

V. 17. He slew all that remained unto Ahab—All his kindred and relations, though more remote from him.

V. 18. Jehu gathered all the people together—By their representatives, their elders or rulers, as was usual; to whom he imparts his mind; and they being generally corrupt, and such as had no sense of religion; none, no not one, had enough of the fear of God to lead them to hazard the king's displeasure, by offering so much as their advice against a proposal, so full of impiety as this was. Jehu shall serve him much—As if he had said, My quarrel is only with Ahab's family, and not with Baal. Which words being manifestly false, and spoken with a design to deceive, they were sinful, this being an unalterable rule, that we must not do the least evil, that the greatest good may come. (Rom. iii. 8.)

V. 19. Call unto me all the prophets of Baal, all his servants—All his ministers: His prophets and priests; and the rest of his worshippers. But Jehu did it in subtilty—With another design, that he might both certainly discover, and utterly destroy them all.

V. 21. Jehu was known to be indifferent and unconcerned in matters of religion, one that had served Baal when his Prince Ahab lived and did so, and forsook it when the next Prince Joram did; and therefore it was doubtful whether Jehu had not in good earnest returned to that which he had formerly embraced, and only deserted in complacency to others.

V. 22. Bring forth vestments—Sacred garments; such as were used by the priests and others in God's worship; the deceiver of mankind being always desirous that those that obey him, by living for any other end but God, should, as far as appearances will go, be the imitators of the true worshippers of God, that they themselves, and others by their example, may be deceived to their destruction; the design of the deceiver of souls not being to shew men their danger in obeying him, but to hide it from them.

V. 23. Look that there be none of the servants of the Lord—Because their presence will offend Baal.

V. 24. When they went in—When some in the name of the rest went to the altar to offer sacrifice. Jehu appointed fourscore men—Far greater numbers being doubtless in readiness to assist them.

V. 25. As he—The chief priest of Baal. Had made an end of offering the burnt-offerings—So far he suffered them to proceed. The guard went to the city of the house of Baal—To some city near to Samaria.

againſt king Ahaz came from Damaſcus—He made haſte, and delayed not to do it, to pleaſe the king, and advance himſelf. Their diligence who live to themſelves, ought to be looked to as the example of ſuch as ſee the neceſſity and happineſs of living to God. They that are now going with diligence and delight to execute the buſineſs, and purſue the intereſts of this momentary life without any regard to God therein, are only doing that which will ſoon be as much labour in vain to them, as Urijah's diſpatch to pleaſe the king at the expence of offending God is now to him; whilſt they that are to the utmoſt of their ſtrength living to God by the help of his grace, are laying up treaſures of holy conſolations which will endure for ever.

V. 12. The king ſaw the altar: and offered thereon—A ſacrifice; and that not unto God, but unto the Syrian idols, to whom that altar was appropriated.

V. 13. And ſprinkled the blood of his peace-offerings—For the heathens; and Ahaz, in imitation of them, offered the ſame ſorts of offerings to their falſe gods, which the Iſraelites did to the true.

V. 14. He brought the braſen altar—Of burnt-offerings, made by Solomon, and placed there by God's appointment. And put it on the north ſide of the altar—So he put God's altar out of its place and uſe.

V. 15. The braſen altar ſhall be for me to inquire by—He would not vouchſafe to mention the name of the Lord, whom he had ſo groſly forſaken and deſpiſed. They that believe in God, his ſacred names are precious to them; but they that worſhip other gods—love and delight in other objects, all that belongs to God is made to give place to their idol-worſhip; and thus does every idolater ſtand ſelf-excluded from everlaſting life, the very ſpirit of their minds being contempt of the Moſt High himſelf, the fountain of all bleſſedneſs.

V. 16. Having once begun, he would not now retreat; but proceeds to execute all the king's commands.

V. 17. And put it upon a pavement of ſtones—Which he did, either to expreſs his contempt of them, or to render them inconvenient for the uſes to which they had been deſigned; or to diſpoſe of them, or of the braſs of them, in ſome other place and way, as beſt ſuited with his fancy; or for the king of Aſſyria, as it follows in the next verſe.

V. 18. The covert for the ſabbath—It is generally underſtood of ſome covert, under which the king uſed to ſit to hear God's word, and ſee the ſacrifices. The king's entry without, turned he from the houſe of the Lord, for the king of Aſſyria—That he might ingratiate himſelf with the king of Aſſyria, by his public contempt of that religion, which had been the only partition-wall between the kings of Judah and other kings. They that ſhew a diſregard to things ſacred, for the ſake of ſecuring the favour of men, or advancing their intereſts in the world, do that which ſatan, the god of this world, would have all men to do—that is, to openly diſhonour the Moſt High, by avowing their diſregard or contempt of what he hath required: For men to do the contrary—to comply with the ignorant and corrupt cuſtoms of thoſe that know not God, when they themſelves are better informed, is to make that which is due to the Lord of All, to give place to the intereſts of a life which may end with the next breath; and to violate his ſacred commands, in compliance with the cuſtoms or deſires of thoſe that are regarded as men of rank and influence, but who themſelves to morrow may be the food of worms, and their impious ſpirits trembling with amazement, at beholding in the world of ſpirits the indignation and wrath which they bring upon themſelves who obey unrighteouſneſs, in oppoſition to all the revelations which God hath given of himſelf in his word and works. V. 4. Hoshea sent to So king of Egypt—That, by his assistance, he might shake off the yoke of the king of Assyria, the king of Egypt's rival; (see 2 Kings xviii. 21. Jer. xxxvii. 5.) The king of Assyria bound him in prison—After he had come up against him, and taken him, with Samaria.

V. 6. The king of Assyria carried Israel away into Assyria, and placed them in the cities of the Medes—To cut off all hopes and thoughts of returning to their own country, which they never did.

V. 9. The children of Israel did secretly those things that were not right, against the Lord—This belongs their gross idolatries, and other abominable practices, which they were ashamed to own. They covered their idolatrous worship with fair pretences of necessity.

V. 11. They wrought wicked things to provoke the Lord to anger—In despight and contempt of God, and his authority and command.

V. 13. The Lord testified against Israel—Disowned, and gave testimony against their false worship, and against all their impieties. By all the prophets, and by all the seers—To whom he declared his mind, and by whom he published it.

V. 14. They hardened their necks—Refused to submit to the yoke of God's precepts. A metaphor from stubborn oxen, that will not bow to the yoke.

V. 15. They followed vanity—Idols so called, because of their nothingness. And became vain—By the long worship of idols, they were made like them, vain, sottish, and senseless creatures.

V. 16. They left all the commandments of the Lord—From a partial disobedience to some of God's laws, they fell by degrees to a total apostacy from all of them. And thus is it in general with all that fall from God; from what they look upon as slight neglects and trifling acts of disobedience, only to avoid, as satan makes deceived souls believe, an unnecessary singularity, till by degrees they are prepared to do that which the enemy of God and man ever hath in view; that is, to have the soul cast off God's authority, and renounce it altogether. All the host of heaven—The stars, as Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Venus.

V. 18. Therefore the Lord was very angry with Israel, and removed them out of his sight—Out of Canaan. That by this they might be made an example to all mankind, that such as will continue in sin, till their state of trial ends, will be banished from the presence of God for ever. There was none left but the tribe of Judah only—And part of the tribe of Benjamin, and those of the tribes of Simeon and Levi who adhered to them, and were incorporated with them; and therefore denominated from them.

and wickedneſs is here remembered, as an aggravation of the ſin of the Iſraelites, which was not only evil in itſelf, but miſchievous to their neighbour.

V. 20. The Lord rejected all the ſeed of Iſrael—All the kingdom of Iſrael. But this extends not to every individual perſon of theſe tribes; for many of them removed into the kingdom of Judah, and were aſſociated with them. The Lord had choſen Iſrael to be his people, as the ſame Lord chooſes all the children of men, not willing the death of a ſinner; but when Iſrael finally rejected God's deſigns of mercy and grace to them, then they were rejected of him that made them, and died to redeem them; God thus teaching all men, in their day of ſalvation, to accept of his grace, that they may eſcape the wrath to come.

V. 21. Iſrael made Jeroboam king—Which action is here aſcribed to the people, becauſe they would not wait till God, by his providence, had inveſted Jeroboam with the kingdom, which he had promiſed him; but rebelliouſly roſe up againſt the houſe of David, to which they had ſuch great obligations, and ſet him upon the throne without God's leave or advice. And it is common to all men, as it was to the people of Iſrael, to be tempted to obtain the things which God hath promiſed, by means that are contrary to his holy will; and when the bleſſings are conſidered, which his unmerited goodneſs hath ſet before us, and graciouſly encouraged us to expect from him, both in this life and that which is to come, then it is to be our conſtant care not to purſue thoſe ends in the ſpirit of our own ſelf-will, or with an impatience which does not regard the order and government of God over all the concerns of this life. Jeroboam drave Iſrael from following the Lord—He kept them by force from God's worſhip. A great ſin—So the worſhip of the calves is called, to meet that idle conceit of the Iſraelites, who eſteemed it a ſmall ſin, eſpecially when they were forced to it by ſevere penalties; which yet he ſhews did not excuſe it from being a great ſin.

V. 22. The children of Iſrael departed not from them—But willingly followed the wicked examples of their kings, though contrary to God's expreſs commands.

V. 23. Until the Lord removed Iſrael out of his ſight—They continued to the laſt obſtinate, under all the inſtructions and corrections which God ſent to them; and therefore were given up by God to this dreadful captivity, which all this foregoing diſcourſe was deſigned to prove. So was Iſrael carried away out of their own land to Aſſyria, unto this day—When the Scriptures were formed under the guidance of God's holy ſpirit. An hundred and thirty years after the time of this great captivity, we find a gracious promiſe made (Jer. xxxiii. 7.) that God would cauſe the captivity of Judah, and the captivity of Iſrael, to return, and that he would build them as at firſt. But, before this promiſe was made, all the thouſands of Iſrael that were led away by the Aſſyrians would be cut off by death; and in their baniſhment from the promiſed land, where God himſelf was their immediate king and governor, all mankind may ſee the eternal danger that awaits thoſe that imitate their example, and finally turn away from and forſake God.

V. 24. From Babylon—Which then was ſubject to the Aſſyrian monarch; but a few years after, revolted from him, and ſet up another king. From Hamath, and from Sepharvaim—Several places then in his dominion.

V. 25. They feared not the Lord—They did not acknowledge nor worſhip God in any ſort. Therefore—For this contempt of God. The Lord ſent lions among them—Hereby God aſſerted his own right and ſovereignty over that land, and made them to underſtand, that neither the Iſraelites were caſt out, nor they brought into that land by their valour, or ſtrength, but by God's Providence, who, as he had caſt the Iſraelites out for their neglect of God's ſervice; ſo he both could, and would in his due time, turn them out, if they were guilty of the ſame ſins.

V. 26. The nations which thou haſt removed, know not the manner of the God of the land.—They ſaw, by their ſufferings, that there was ſomething ſupernatural in them, and they concluded theſe ſufferings were awarded by a ſuperior Being, againſt whom they had ignorantly offended.

V. 27. Carry one of the prieſts—One of the chief of the prieſts, with others, to be under his direction. Let them go, and let him teach the inhabitants which have been removed into the country of the Jews. They that are truly deſirous of being better informed, are thus immediately ſupplied with ſuch as are able to teach them, and the Jews that deſpiſed the knowledge of God, had, as it is reaſonable to believe, not a few but many of their public teachers taken away from them, at the very time when their ſufferings, as captives, would give them to feel their need of being taught the knowledge of God their Saviour. And how would they then call to remembrance, their neglect and contempt of the faithful teachers which God had continually raiſed up and ſent among it 28 Then one of the priests whom they had carried away from Samaria, came and dwelt in Beth-el, and taught them how they should fear the Lord.

amongst them? This addition to their sufferings might lead thousands to cry for mercy and for help from God, and prove the chastening of his goodness to lead them to himself. (Heb. xii. 6.)

V. 28. Then one of the priests taught them how they should fear the Lord—Jehovah, the Creator and Redeemer of men, the constant observer of the thoughts of every heart, and the righteous judge of all the earth.—That they should live by faith in him, as their Saviour, and with simplicity and godly sincerity have their conversation in the world, passing the time of their sojourning here in fear of offending him by the least violation of his holy law, which requires all his rational and immortal creatures to love him, and to love one another.

V. 29. Howbeit, every nation made gods of their own—Whom they worshipped in the places from whence they came.

V. 31. The Sepharvites burnt their children in fire to Adrammelech—This is the religion of men, who either knew not, or regarded not, the word of God; and the history of our own country informs us that the ancient Britons did the same thing—their foolish hearts being hardened, they offered human sacrifices to their devil gods; the author of which worship is now, against all the light of God's revealed will, leading mankind into the same spirit, in ways no less dangerous, though less shocking to humanity, by tempting them to sacrifice their own, and the very souls of their children to the love of this world—the gain, the honour, and the pleasures of it: but who will believe that the love of this world, the desire of receiving the honour that cometh of men, and living in pleasure, are the marks which God himself lays down of souls that are dead in trespasses and sin, as well as they that drove their very children into the fire. (1 John ii. 15. John v. 44. Mark xvi. 16. 1 Tim. v. 6.)

V. 32. So they feared the Lord, and made unto themselves priests of the high places—The danger they had found themselves in from the lions, which devoured many of them, made them desirous of understanding the nature of God, and of his government; but contenting themselves with being taught this as a meer human science, and not worshipping God in spirit and in truth, they paid an outward acknowledgment to the Lord Almighty, as men would acknowledge the government of a prince, whom they neither love nor honour; and not acquainting themselves, in the spirit of their minds, with the true God, they were left in that weak and sinful state which all are in, who want to reconcile whatever is agreeable to their inclinations with the worship of God; which only amounts to a fear lest he should punish them, but the bent of their inclinations—their real worship, is of the idols of their hearts.

V. 33. After the manner of the nations, whom they carried away from thence—They trod in the steps of their predecessors, the Israelites, who did many of them worship both God and Baal.

V. 34. Neither do they after their statutes—This is alledged as an evidence, that they did not fear the Lord, whatsoever they pretended, because they lived in the constant breach of his statutes.

V. 39. He shall deliver you—And therefore you have no pretence of need to go to other gods for relief.

V. 4. He removed the high places—He had more zeal and courage than his predeceſſors: and the dreadful judgments of God upon the kingdom of Iſrael for their ſuperſtition and idolatry, had made the people of Judah more pliable to the commands of God, and of their king. And brake in pieces the braſen ſerpent that Moſes had made—Which had been kept as a memorial of God's mercy; but being now commonly abuſed to ſuperſtition, was deſtroyed. He called it Nehuſhtan—This ſerpent, howſoever formerly honoured, and uſed by God as a ſign of his grace, yet now it is nothing but a piece of braſs, which can do you neither good nor hurt; and therefore is no fit object for your worſhip.

V. 5. He truſted in the Lord God of Iſrael—Without calling in foreign ſuccours to ſtabliſh or help him. And he was determined to pay no regard to any fears of danger from his own ſubjects, on account of his aboliſhing their long-continued idolatry. He truſted God with his life, his temporal and his eternal intereſts; he had therefore but one thing to do, which was to commend himſelf to God, by doing his will from the heart.

V. 10. At the end of three years—Of the ſiege.

V. 14. Hezekiah ſent to the king of Aſſyria, ſaying, I have offended—His ill ſucceſs might make him think that he had ſinned againſt God in this action, and might make him willing to ſubmit to him, though God graciouſly prevented it. And thus it is, when men are ready to ſubmit themſelves to the ſpirit of the world about them, and to acknowledge their ſubjection to that tyranny, from which they had revolted, the boundleſs goodneſs of God breaks in upon them, and ſaves them that deſpair of ſaving themſelves.

And thus in the day of trial, ſatan would ſeduce men to anſwer his evil reaſonings; in order to ſeparate the ſoul from God, and prevent us from keeping our minds ſtayed upon him, according to his holy word, in which he hath given all ſufficent cauſe to truſt.

V. 37. As theſe ſervants of the king of Judah reported to him what was ſaid by his and their enemy, ſo ſhould the children and ſervants of the king and Saviour of men report to him what they both fear and feel, from the temptations of the avowed enemy of God and man; and he who knows what temptations mean, will by his grace ſupport, and by his providence make a way for the eſcape of all them that caſt their care upon him.

CHAP. XIX.

V. 3. This is a day of rebuke—From the Aſſyrian, who reviles and reproacheth us. There is not ſtrength to bring forth—We are like a poor travelling woman in great extremity, and having no ſtrength left to help herſelf, and to bring forth her infant into the world. We have begun an happy reformation, and are hinder- from bringing it to perfection. And thus it is, when men have made conſiderable advances in the divine life in their ſouls, and in devotion to the will of God in their lives, they meet with difficulties, which they find themſelves too weak to overcome; and by which they are taught that never to be forgotten declaration of the LORD's—Without ME ye can do nothing. (John xv. 5.) The faithful Leader of ſouls is ever bringing all that walk in his ſteps, all his church upon earth, to new trials of their faith, that the heart may be fully eſtabliſhed in that grace by which they are both enabled to ſtand, and to become more than conquerors through their Redeemer.

V. 4. It may be—He ſpeaks doubtfully, becauſe he knew not whether God would not deliver them all up into the Aſſyrian's hand, as he and his people deſerved: Sometimes this is not a word of doubt, but of hope. The Lord thy God—To whom thou art dear and precious. Will hear all the words of Rab-ſhakeh—Will ſhew that he hath heard them with juſt indignation. Liſt up thy prayer for the remnant—This he mentions as an argument, to ſtir up Iſaiah to pray, and to move God's compaſſion towards them; that they were but a ſmall remnant either of God's people, of whom ten tribes were now loſt, or of the kingdom of Judah, which had been greatly waſted by this Aſſyrian.

V. 6. Thus ſaith the Lord, Be not afraid—And thus at this day does the ſame merciful Lord ſay to all them that put their truſt in him.

V. 7. I will ſend a blaſt upon him—A ſtorm, by which name God's judgments are often called. And the ſame God hath the ſame power to do the ſame thing, to the ſelf-confident enemies of his church and people, wherever he may be allowing them, for a ſeaſon, to be ſuffering at the hand of wicked and unreaſonable men.

And where is it that he is not preſent to hear and anſwer, ſave only in the unbelieving mind? that there is a ſupreme and powerful God, by whoſe decree and providence, all theſe wars and calamities were ſent, and ordered; whoſe meer inſtrument thou art, ſo that thou haſt no cauſe for theſe vain boaſtings? didſt thou not hear what I did for this people many ages ſince, that I carried them out of Egypt in ſpite of Pharaoh and all his hoſt; and through the Red ſea, where I overthrew the Egyptians; and through the vaſt wilderneſs; and then brought them into this land by a ſtrong hand, by which I deſtroyed all their enemies, and planted them in their ſtead? By which thou mayeſt underſtand how dear this people are to me, and how eaſily I could deſtroy thee before them, if I ſaw it fit; and that the places which thou haſt taken, and the conqueſts which thou haſt made, are not to be imputed to thy valour, or numbers, but unto my Providence, who, for wiſe and juſt reaſons, have given them up into thy hands. Though the Aſſyrian was indeed the rod in God's hand, (Iſa. x. 5.) yet he did not ſo underſtand it; nor was God in all his thoughts, but he minded only the enlargement of his own empire, by the deſtruction of other kingdoms. Now have I brought it to paſs, that thou ſhouldeſt be to lay waſte fenced cities into ruinous heaps—I have ſo diſpoſed of things by my Providence, that thou ſhouldeſt be a great and victorious Prince, and that thou ſhouldeſt be ſo ſucceſsful as thou haſt hitherto been, firſt againſt the kingdom of Iſrael, and now againſt Judah.

V. 27. I know thy abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in—Though thou doſt not know me, yet I thoroughly know thee, and all thy deſigns and actions, all thy ſecret and ſubtle contrivances in the place of thy abode, in thy own kingdom and court; and the execution of thy deſigns abroad, what thou intendeſt in thy going out, and with what ſucceſſes or further thoughts thou comeſt in, or returneſt to thy own land. And thy rage againſt me—Things are frequently ſaid to be done againſt God, which are only done againſt his people, becauſe of that near union and relation which is between them.

V. 28. I will put my bridle in thy lips—A metaphor from wild and furious beaſts, that muſt be thus managed. I will turn thee back—I will cauſe thee to return to thy home with ſhame and loſs.

V. 29. This ſhall be a ſign unto thee—That Zion ſhould triumph over this inſulting enemy. That God would not only preſerve the city from his preſent fury, but alſo, That God would bleſs his people with a durable proſperity. And this ſign was the more neceſſary, becauſe otherwiſe Hezekiah and his people had cauſe to fear, That the Aſſyrians would be greatly enraged for their ſhameful repulſe, and would quickly recruit their army, and return againſt them with greater force and violence. This ſign was miraculous, conſidering the waſte and havock which the Aſſyrians had made in the land.

V. 30. Take root downward, and bear fruit upward—Shall increaſe and multiply greatly.

V. 31. Out of Jeruſalem ſhall go forth a remnant—That handful of Jews who now were gathered together, and ſhut up in Jeruſalem, ſhall go out to their ſeveral habitations, and by my ſingular bleſſing increaſe exceedingly. Although this may ſeem too great a bleſſing for you to expect or believe, yet God will do it from the zeal which he hath, both for his own name, to vindicate it from the blaſphemous reproaches of the Aſſyrians, and for the good of his people.

V. 34. I will defend this city for my ſervant David's ſake—For my promiſe and covenant's ſake made with David, concerning the ſtability of his kingdom; as a type of that ſpiritual kingdom which ſhall endure for ever.

V. 2. He turned his face to the wall—By turning his face from the company, he might intimate his desire of privacy, and so might with more freedom and fervency pour out his soul to God.

V. 3. I have walked before thee in truth—Sincerely, with an honest mind. Hezekiah wept sore—For the distracted condition in which the church and state were then likely to be left, through the uncertainty of the succession to the crown, and the great proneness of the people to backslide to their false worship, and evil practices; which he easily perceived, and which he knew would bring far worse calamities upon them, if he were removed; as afterwards came to pass.

V. 4. Afore Isaiah was gone out into the middle court—This is noted to shew God's great readiness to hear the sincere and fervent prayers of his children.

V. 5. Tell Hezekiah, thus saith the God of David thy father—I am mindful of my promise made to David and his house, and will make it good in thy person. I will heal thee on the third day—Which shews that the cure was miraculous. Thou shalt go up unto the house of the Lord—To give me solemn praise for this mercy. Which proves the perfection of the cure.

V. 6. I will defend this city for mine own sake—To vindicate my glory against that blasphemer.

V. 7. Take a lump of figs—Though the deliverance was certainly promised, yet means must be used, and those suitable: Though that power was altogether insufficient to produce so sudden and so compleat a cure.

V. 8. Hezekiah said—Had said: For it is evident this was said before his recovery, though his recovery be mentioned before it; such transpositions being frequent in Scripture. What shall be the sign—He asketh a sign, not because he distrusted it; but for the strengthening of his faith, which otherwise might be shaken by the greatness of his danger, and by the contradiction between this and his former message; neither of which the prophet scrupled to deliver. By the first he spoke plainly to the king, and declared to him that he was to die; and when, in answer to prayer, the Lord of life reversed the sentence, and gave him a respite of fifteen years, the prophet had learnt to prefer obedience to God to any regard to his own character, which might be injured in the esteem of those that heard him contradict himself in so short a space of time.

V. 10. It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees—In an instant: For that course of the sun is natural for the kind of it, though miraculous for the swiftness of it; but the other would be both ways miraculous.

V. 11. Isaiah the prophet cried unto the Lord—Being moved by God's spirits first to offer him this sign, and then to pray for it. He brought the shadow ten degrees backward—What were these degrees? Lines in the dial: But whether each of these lines or degrees noted an hour, or half an hour, or a quarter of an hour, is uncertain. What was it that went down? The sun itself went back, and the shadow with it. This miracle was noted by the Babylonians, who, having understood that it was done for Hezekiah's sake, sent to inquire into the truth and manner of it, (2 Chron. xxxii. 31.) In the dial of Ahaz—Which Ahaz had made in the king's palace.

league with them. All that was found in his treasures—For though his country had lately been harassed by the Assyrians, yet he had reserved all his treasures and precious things, which he and his fathers had gathered in Jerusalem. Also he had many presents sent to him, (2 Chron. xxxii. 23.) which doubtless were things of considerable worth. There was nothing that Hezekiah shewed them not—Which he did through vain ostentation and pride of heart, being lifted up by the great honour which God had done him, in working such glorious miracles for his sake, and by the great respects and presents rendered to him from divers princes and people, and now by this great Babylonian Monarch. So hard a matter is it even for a good man to be high and humble.

V. 14. They are come from a far country—A vain-glorious expression, intimating the great honour which he had from all parts both far and near. Even from Babylon—That great and potent monarchy: Which he speaks to magnify his own honour and happiness.

V. 15. What have they seen in thine house?—He asketh, not that he was ignorant of it, but that from his answer he might take the occasion of delivering God's message to him.

V. 17. That which thy fathers have laid up shall be carried into Babylon—This judgment is denounced against him for his pride, which God abhors; and for his ingratitude, whereby he took that honour to himself which he should have given to God; and for his carnal confidence in that league which he had now made with the king of Babylon.

V. 18. Thy sons shall they take away—Whereby God would teach the world the great evil of sin, of those sins which are generally esteemed but small.

V. 19. Then said Hezekiah, Good is the word of the Lord—I submit to this sentence, as being just, because procured by mine and my people's sins; and merciful, because the punishment is less than I have deserved. Is it not good, if peace and truth be in my days—Which he speaks not as if he were careless and unconcerned for his posterity, or for the church and people of God, for whose welfare he was so solicitous in the whole course of his life; but because it was a singular favour that this judgment did not immediately follow his sin.

V. 21. Hezekiah slept with his fathers: and Manasseh reigned in his stead—In the life of Hezekiah an example is given, how far a man may go in true religion, zeal for God and in faith unfeigned, and yet after all that experience be lifted up into vain conceits, and capable of robbing God of the honour and praise that is due unto his name. And what is this discovery for, but to shew us the necessity of holding the beginning of our confidence stedfast to the end of our lives, in order to be made partakers of the eternal benefits of Christ's death. (Heb. iii. 14.) No deliverances wrought out for us by the immediate hand of God, no degree of prosperity and favour with men can place any man—the greatest king or the most highly honoured man on earth, in circumstances, in this life, in which he is not bound to live in the very spirit and meaning of this declaration—It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed. (Lam. iii. 22.) And to look upon every good he is possessed of as the unmerited gift of God, for the sake of the Son of his love, who purchased and saved us from everlasting death by the shedding of his blood; and he that hath out-lived an humble dependance on this, as the foundation and sole cause of every spiritual, temporal, and eternal blessing, is building upon the sandy foundation of self-confidence, which shall not stand the storms of that dreadful day, wherein every man's work shall be tried; and of this danger all men are warned by the faithfulness of God, in such discoveries of his displeasure as those he made to Hezekiah, when he ceased to acknowledge the hand which made him great, and bestowed all that he had upon him.

V. 4. He built altars in the house of the Lord—In the temple itself, in the holy place. Of which the Lord said, In Jerusalem will I put my name—That place I have consecrated to my worship and honour: Which made it the greater impiety and sacrilege to alienate it from God. and to dedicate any part of it to the service of idols, whom God abhorreth.

V. 6. And observed times—Lucky or unlucky days or seasons for the dispatch of businesses, according to the superstitious practice of the heathens.

V. 7. In this house will I put my name for ever. The same thing was said just before, v. 4, and is here repeated, to shew what God hath declared himself—A jealous God, and that he will neither give nor allow his honour to be taken by another. The whole world is God's, and whatever is therein, and as such all things are ever to be considered; and the name of any other god or being, imaginary or real, is not so much as to be named or thought of, as having power to do men good, or deliver them from evil, or to have any of the divine attributes ascribed to them; and to allow of any such thought in the heart, is doing spiritually what Manasseh did openly—place his idols in the very temple of the Lord, where he had said He would record his name—make himself known as the Lord, merciful and gracious. They that entertain an idol in the heart, do far more than that to the Creator and Redeemer of the soul, which an husband or a wife would do to those to whom they are married, were they to prefer another; and by considering ourselves the person thus slighted, the feelings of our own hearts will lead us into the best understanding of Manasseh's crime, and the crime of every one that gives his heart to any idol, and not to the living God, to whom all love, and honour, and praise is due, and is by him required.

V. 8. That is in token of God's willingness to bestow eternal life on all men, God would have given the people of Israel every temporal blessing, had they but continued to live by faith in him—To do according to all that he had commanded them, only for their good.

V. 9. But they hearkened not—They would not hear nor regard what the Lord their God required of them; therefore the following sentence is pronounced upon the whole nation, and the character of Manasseh was such only as shewed the temper and spirit of the people in general, God giving to nations, when they have gone to the utmost lengths of wickedness, such governors doing such actions as will shew to the rest of mankind the very crimes for which his public judgments are inflicted, that they may hear them, see them, and in doing so, may fear to commit their sins, and so prevent the Father of Mercies from afflicting more of the children of men; which he never does willingly, but of a necessity flowing from his infinite love, which is never wanting to bring back the most wicked to penitence and mercy; or by their example in suffering under his just displeasure, preserve others from departing out of the ways of his holy will. Manasseh seduced them to do more evil than did the nations, whom the Lord destroyed—As their light was far more clear, their obligations to God higher, and their helps against idolatry much stronger than the Canaanites, so their sins, though the same in kind, were unspeakably worse in respect of these dreadful aggravations.

V. 11. Manasseh hath made Judah also to sin with his idols—By his example, encouragement, and command.

V. 12. Thus saith the Lord, I am bringing such evil, that whosoever heareth of it, his ears shall tingle—The severity with which these people shall be punished for their sins, committed against light and knowledge, shall be such, as shall make all that hear thereof wonder with amazement, that God would inflict such evils on a nation which before, for so many ages, he had favoured with mercies which distinguished them for blessedness from all mankind. And by this temporal sentence does God discover the dreadfulness of that sentence which shall be pronounced on all the finally impenitent—Depart from me ye accursed into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels—Ye who would, in your life of trial, against all that infinite compassion could do for you, go on in a careless or bold disregard of what God required: Well may it be said, O that men would but fear the Lord, and depart from all iniquity!

V. 13. The line of Samaria—The same judgments which Samaria had. Turning it upside down—As men do with a dish that hath been used, first cleanse and wipe it, and turn it upside down, that nothing may remain in it; so will I deal with Jerusalem, thoroughly empty and purge it from all its wicked inhabitants.

V. 14. I will forsake the remnant of mine inheritance—The kingdom of Judah, the only remainder of all the tribes of Israel, which I did once choose for my inheritance, but now, notwithstanding that privilege, will utterly reject and forsake them.

V. 15. They have provoked me since the day their fathers came forth out of Egypt, even unto this day—This sore judgment, though it was chiefly inflicted for the sins of Manasseh and his generation, yet had a respect unto all their former sins, against which God now declares his displeasure, though his mercy and long-suffering passed over, and spared them that before offended him, that he might bring them to repentance.

V. 16. Manasseh shed innocent blood—The blood of those prophets and righteous men who either reproved his sinful practices, or refused to comply with his wicked commands and worship. God, to vindicate his justice, and to shew the greatness of his mercy, never left himself without witnesses to appear on the side of justice, mercy, and truth in the wickedest ages and nations; and the treatment these have met with hath been generally the same. Reproach, persecution, and death hath been that which the most faithful servants of God have received at the hands of those against whose impiety and wickedness the spirit of the Lord compelled them to bear testimony against all their interests and feelings as men. Beside his sin.—His idolatry, which is called evil corruption, and here sin, by way of eminency; which is here compared with horrid cruelty, and implied to be worse than that, and more abominable in God's sight, because it doth more directly and immediately strike at the glory and purity of the Divine Majesty. And this expression God here useth in opposition to the gross error of those who look upon idolatry as a small sin, as a meer mistake of the mind, as the fruit of a good intention, and as an excess proceeding from zeal in religion.

V. 18. Manasseh was buried in the garden of his own house—As a lasting testimony of his sincere repentance, which took place under the great and severe judgments of God.

V. 23. The servants of Amon slew the king—Who made himself an example, that a mind bent on what is wrong, is not to be prevented by examples of the most dreadful judgments of God against the very same sins. Amon living but to do wickedly, he lived not out half his days: Being neither to be won by mercy, nor restrained by fear of offending God, he was cut off by his wicked servants.

V. 24. The people slew all them that conspired against king Amon—They, with their master, lost their lives for their wickedness; and are added to the number of the examples which God hath given in his word, to shew that the wages of sin is, sooner or later, death to the impenitent.

C H A P. XXII.

V. 1, 2. Josiah was eight years old when he began to reign, and he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord—Thus soon in life, giving himself to obey that grace of God, which enlighteneth every man that cometh into the world. And his early piety is a proof, that the cause and foundation of it was not from any thing which he derived from his natural parent, the whole spirit of his character being the contrary of all piety and virtue.

V. 4. That he may sum the silver—Take an account how much it is.

Before Christ cir. 641.

4 Go up to Hilkiah the high priest, that he may sum the silver which is [c] brought into the house of the Lord, which [d] the keepers of the * door have gathered of the people.

5 And let them deliver it into the hand of the doers of the work, that have the oversight of the house of the Lord: and let them give it to the doers of the work, which is in the house of the Lord, to repair the breaches of the house;

6 Unto carpenters, and builders, and masons, and to buy timber and hewn stone to repair the house.

7 Howbeit, [e] there was no reckoning made with them of the money that was delivered into their hand, because they dealt faithfully.

8 ¶ And Hilkiah the high priest said unto Shaphan the scribe, [i] I have found the book of the law in the house of the Lord: and Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan, and he read it.

9 And Shaphan the scribe came to the king, and brought the king word again, and said, Thy servants have † gathered the money that was found in the house, and have delivered it into the hand of them that do the work, that have the oversight of the house of the Lord.

V. 7. Because they dealt faithfully. Repeated proofs of their integrity had established their character for faithfulness.

V. 8. Hilkiah the high priest found the book of the law—That original book of the law of the Lord, given or written by the hand of Moses, which, by God's command, was put beside the ark, and probably taken from thence and hid, by the care of some godly priest, when some of the idolatrous kings of Judah persecuted the true religion, and defaced the temple, and (which the Jewish writers affirm) burnt all the copies of God's law which they could find, and now met with in some secret place. And for which gracious providence of God, his name will be adored so long as his word is known and loved on earth, and then praised for ever in heaven, for all the benefits which the spirits of the blessed received by its means in this life; where men so intirely need it, as the foundation and first principles of all human laws, but above all as a school-master to lead us to Christ, the only Saviour from all the misery, which is the consequence of offending against the holy law of God.

V. 11. When the king had heard the words of the law, he rent his clothes—From a godly sorrow for his defective obedience, and a fear of the punishments, to which the whole nation stood exposed for their conduct, which the king now saw to be in opposition to the plain commands of God in many respects. Thus did the law answer the great and blessed purpose of being the means of convincing the king that he himself, and the whole nation, had cause to cry to God for mercy, for having (though they had reformed many abuses) followed the general example under which they had grown up, without ever having inquired how far the general example was warranted by the word of God. And surely, before we allow ourselves to rest upon any such persuasion as that we are in the ways of true religion, because we live and act as our fathers did, we ought to satisfy ourselves, from the word of God itself, how far that example is agreeable to what God requires of every one of the human race.

V. 12. Asahiah a servant of the king's—Who most constantly waited upon the king's person; otherwise all of them were the king's servants.

V. 13. Go ye, inquire of the Lord—Either, what he intends to do with us; or, what we shall do to appease his wrath. And what the king said to his servants, may be said to all that are so far enlightened by the grace and word of God, as to see that they have done things which they ought not to have done; and have left undone things which God required of them. God is truth and love, and all may inquire of him and of his word what they shall do to be saved, with a certainty of being fully informed. (James i. 5.) Concerning the words of this book—Whether the curses here threatened must come upon us without remedy, or whether there be hope in Israel concerning the prevention of them.

V. 14. So Hilkiah the priest went unto Huldah the prophetess—For we read of women prophetesses, both in the Old and New Testament, as Miriam, Exod. xv. 20. Deborah, Judg. iv. 4. Hannah, 1 Sam. ii. Elizabeth, and the Blessed Virgin, Luke i. and Philip's daughters, Acts xxi. 9. But why did he send to this woman, and not rather to Zephaniah, or Jeremiah, who were prophets in Josiah's days? Because she was in Jerusalem, which is noted in the following part of the verse, when Jeremiah might at this time be at Anathoth; and Zephaniah might not be a prophet at this time, though he was afterwards, in the days of Josiah. Or, 2d, Because the king or his courtiers had longer and greater experience of the eminency of her prophetical gifts than of Jeremiah's,

3 ¶ And the king [c] stood by a pillar, and made a covenant before the Lord, to walk after the Lord, and to keep his commandments and his testimonies and his statutes, with all their heart, and all their soul, to perform the words of this covenant, that were written in this book: and all the people stood to the covenant.

miah's, who began not to prophecy till the thirteenth year of Josiah, (Jer. i. 2.) and being well assured of her fidelity in delivering the mind and counsel of God to those that inquired of her, they rightly concluded, that it was much more material what message God sent, than by whom it was conveyed to them. The college—Where the sons of the prophets, or others, who devoted themselves to the study of God's word, used to meet and discourse of the things of God, and receive the instructions of their teachers.

V. 17. Gods, the works of their hands—Gods made with hands. This she adds to aggravate their folly and contempt of God, in preferring such vain and idle things before him.

V. 20. Thou shalt be gathered into thy grave in peace—He died in peace with God, and was by death translated to everlasting peace.

CHAP. XXIII.

V. 1. They gathered unto him all the elders—The chief governors both of church and state.

V. 2. The prophets—Either Jeremiah, Zephaniah, Urijah: or, the sons or disciples of the prophets. And he read—He caused to be read.

V. 3. And all the people stood to the covenant—As to the taking of it: They declared their consent to it, and their concurrence with the king in that act.

V. 4. The priests of the second order—Those two who were next in degree to the High-priest, and in case of his sickness were to manage his work. And carried the ashes of them unto Beth-el—To disgrace that place which had been the chief seat and throne of idolatry. And in these proceedings there is a lively representation of a soul's turning unto God by true repentance. Convinced of their danger, they inquire by what means they shall escape the wrath revealed against all their unrighteousness. They then enter into covenant with God, and shew their abhorrence of the vain idols which they and their fathers had worshipped.

V. 8. Geba—The northern border of the kingdom of Judah. To Beer-sheba—Which was the southern border. In the entering in of the gate of Joshua the governor of the city—This circumstance is noted to shew Josiah's great zeal and impartiality, in rooting out all monuments of idolatry, without any respect to those great persons who were concerned in them, or affected to them.

V. 9. The priests of the high places—Which worshipped the True God there. Came not up to Jerusalem—Were not suffered to come thither to the exercise of their priestly function; as a just punishment for the corruption of God's worship, and the transgression of the positive law of God. But they did eat of the unleavened bread—And thus he mitigates their punishment: He shuts them out from spiritual services, but allows them necessary provisions.

V. 11. And burnt the chariots of the sun—Which were made for the honour and worship of the sun.

V. 12. And the altars on the top of the upper chamber of Ahaz—Upon the roof of the king's house. They were so mad upon their idols, that they were not content with all their public high places and altars, but made others upon their house-tops, for the worship of the heavenly bodies. And cast the dust of them into the brook Kidron—To shew his detestation of them; and to abolish the very remembrance of them as far as he could.

V. 13. Mount of corruption—The mount of olives, here called the mount of corruption, for the gross idolatry there practised.

Which Solomon the king of Israel had builded—This brand being left by the Holy Ghost upon his name and memory, as a just punishment of that abominable practice, and a means to deter others from the like. The abomination—The idol so called, because it was abominable, and made them so to God.

V. 16. As Josiah turned himself—Josiah's care and zeal was so great, that he would not trust his officers with these things, but would see them done with his own eyes. Who proclaimed these words—300 years before it was done. God's faithfulness in fulfilling all that he has promised and foretold, is established upon so many proofs, that he who trusts God agreeable to his word, need not be moved, could he hear all mankind saying to him, as with one voice—What confidence is this wherein thou trustest? (chap. xviii. 19.)

V. 17. What title is that that I see—It appears to have been the manner then, as now it is, to set up pillars or stones, by, or upon, the graves of the higher sort of men, upon which the name of the person, and some remarkable passages relating to him, were engraven.

V. 18. So they let his bones alone, with the bones of the prophet that came out of Samaria—Which were now mixed together.

V. 21. The king commanded all the people, saying, Keep the passover—Having abolished false worship, he now endeavours to set up the true worship of God. As it is written in this book of the covenant—In this book which I have found; wherein is contained the covenant made between God and Israel, and the terms of it.

V. 22. Surely there was not holden such a passover—Celebrated with such solemn care, and universal joy of all good men; which was much the greater, because of their remembrance of the former wicked and miserable times; and the hopes all the pious now had of the establishment of true religion; and of the prevention of God's judgments. From the days of the judges—Or, from the days of Samuel, the last of the Judges. None of the kings had taken such care to prepare themselves, the priests, and people, and to observe all the rites, and diligently to purge out all uncleanness, and to renew their covenant with God, so solemnly as Josiah now did.

V. 24. The workers with familiar spirits, and the wizards, and the images, and the idols, and all the abominations—All the instruments and monuments of idolatry were destroyed, as God had commanded. That were spied—All that were discovered; not only such as were in places of worship, but such as their priests or zealots had removed, and endeavoured to hide and secure.

V. 25. Like unto him was there no king before him—For his diligent study in God's law, and his exact care, and unwearied industry, and fervent zeal, in rooting out of idolaters, and all kinds and appearances of idolatry, not only in Judah, but in Israel, and in the establishment of the true religion in all his dominions, and in the conforming of his own life, and his people's too, (as far as he could) to the holy law of God: Though Hezekiah might excel him in some other particulars, of whom therefore the like is said.

V. 26. The Lord turned not from the fierceness of his great wrath, wherewith his anger was kindled against Judah—Because though the King was most hearty in his repentance, and acceptable to God, and therefore the judgment was delayed for his time; yet the people were generally corrupt, and secretly averse from Josiah's pious reformation, and inclined to their old lusts and idols, as appears from the complaints of the prophets, Jeremiah and Zephaniah, against them: And by the following history, wherein we see, that as soon as ever Josiah was gone, his children, and the princes, and the people, suddenly and greedily returned to their former abominations. The provocations that Manasseh had provoked him withal—The people in general had never sincerely repented of their own, nor of their father's sins; but their hearts still hankered after them; which, though not yet seen by men, was manifest to God, who therefore pronounced this terrible sentence against them.

V. 27. The Lord said, I will remove Judah as I have removed Israel, and will cast off this city Jerusalem, which I have chosen—Lest any longer forbearance should make them think, and others after them, that the nature of my covenant with them, and with all or any part of mankind was such, that they might make themselves sure of the continuance of my mercies to them, when the very conditions of my promises were trampled upon and despised by them.

V. 29. King Josiah went against him, and he slew him—Gave him his death's wound there. When he had seen him—When he fought with him, or in the first onset.

V. 30. The people of the land took Jehoahaz the son of Josiah—Who was younger than Jehoiakim, yet preferred by the people before the elder brother. And anointed him—As they used to do in extraordinary cases.

35 And Jehoiakim gave [x] the silver and the gold to Pharaoh, but he taxed the land to give the money according to the commandment of Pharaoh; he exacted the silver and the gold of the people of the land, of every one according to his taxation, to give it unto Pharaoh-nechoh.

V. 33. Pharaoh put him in bands—Because he presumed to take the kingdom without his leave; or, because he renewed the war against Pharaoh, and was conquered, and taken prisoner. And put the land to a tribute—To a yearly tribute, whereby they should acknowledge him to be their superior.

V. 34. And took Jehoahaz away—As a punishment for him; and that he might give no disturbance to his brother. He came to Egypt, and died there—His reign was short, but long enough to bring upon himself, and the people with whose corrupt desires he complied, many of the miseries which are the sure consequences of the sinful conduct he and his subjects were guilty of. Those kings that governed in the fear of God, their reigns were a blessing to their people; those kings that did not regard his word as the rule of their conduct, but lived to please themselves, and to gratify the people in their irreligious and wicked courses, were uniformly the means of bringing calamities upon their country of one kind or other.

V. 35. He taxed the land to give the money to Pharaoh—And thus were the people made to labour under oppression, at the time that there was amongst them a general departure from the worship and ways of God.

V. 3. Surely at the commandment of the Lord came this upon Judah—This express declaration, that the powers that united themselves against Judah came at the command of God, is opposed to those natural unbelieving views which are so common, and by which all that is done by one or more nations to another, is regarded as having its sole cause in the different motives by which men are led to act, as if the Judge and Governor of all the earth regarded not what was done by his rational creatures, who he hath sent into this life as the only state of trial for his endless favour. For the sins of Manasseh—Which had never been charged upon them, if they had not made them their own by their impenitency for them, and repetition of them.

V. 6. Jehoiachin—Called also Jeconiah.

V. 20. Through the anger of the Lord it came to paſs, that Zedekiah rebelled againſt the king of Babylon—Thus the people's ſins were the true cauſe why God gave them wicked kings, whom he left to themſelves; the conſequence of which was, that they did wickedly, and brought the long-deſerved and threatened puniſhments upon themſelves and their people.

CHAP. XXV.

V. 1. Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his hoſt, againſt Jeruſalem—To chaſtiſe Zedekiah for his rebellion. They built forts againſt it round about—To keep all ſupplies of men or proviſions from entering into the city; and that from thence they might ſhoot darts, or arrows, into the city.

V. 3. There was no bread for the people of the land—For the people, who flocked thither from all parts, upon the approach of the Babylonian army; but only for the great men and ſoldiers.

V. 4. The city was broken up—By the Chaldeans, who broke and entered the gate. Men of war fled between two walls——Between the outward and inward wall of the city, by a private way, having the advantage of the darkneſs of the night. The king went the way toward the plain—Of Jericho.

I. CHRONICLES.

THESE Books of the Chronicles are not the same which are so called (1 Kings xiv. 19.) and elsewhere. They were written after the Babylonish captivity, as appears from 2 Chron. xxxvi. 20, &c. The chief design of these books is, to compleat the history of the kings of Judah, and to gather up the fragments of sacred history, which were omitted in the Books of Samuel and Kings, and to explain some passages there mentioned, and to give an exact account of the genealogies, which was necessary to preserve the distinction of the tribes and families; that so it might appear that Christ came of that nation, and tribe, and family of which he was to be born. And this account is most seasonably mentioned in these Books, because this was to be in a manner the last part of the sacred and canonical history of the Old Testament, and therefore the fittest place to record those genealogies, with which the New Testament is so much connected. These two Books contain something concerning the state of the church, from Adam, till after the Babylonish captivity.

This first Book of Chronicles goes down to the death of David: It contains twenty-nine chapters.

CHAP. I. Adam's line to Noah. The sons of Japheth. The sons of Ham. The sons of Shem. Shem's line to Abraham. Ishmael's sons. The sons of Keturah. The posterity of Abraham, by Esau. The kings of Edom. The dukes of Edom.—CHAP. II. The sons of Israel. The posterity of Judah by Tamar. The children of Jesse. The posterity of Caleb, the son of Hezron. Hezron's posterity by the daughter of Machir. Jerahmeel's posterity. Sheshan's posterity. Another branch of Caleb's posterity. The posterity of Caleb the son of Hur.—CHAP. III. The sons of David: His line to Zedekiah. The successors of Jeconiah.—CHAP. IV. The posterity of Judah by Caleb the son of Hur. Of Ashur the posthumous son of Hezron. Of Jabez, and his prayer. The posterity of Shelah. The posterity and cities of Simeon. Their conquest of Gedor, and of the Amalekites in mount Seir.—CHAP. V. The line of Reuben (who lost his birthright) unto the captivity. Their habitation and conquest of the Hagarites. The chief men, and habitations of Gad. The number and conquest of Reuben, Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh: the habitations, and chief men of that half-tribe. Their captivity for their sin.—CHAP. VI. The sons of Levi. The line of the priests unto the captivity. The families of Gershom, Kohath, and Merari. The office of Aaron, and his line unto Ahimaaz. The cities of the priests and Levites.—CHAP. VII. The sons of Issachar, of Benjamin, of Naphtali, of Manasseh, and of Ephraim. The calamity of Ephraim by the men of Gath. Beriah is born. Ephraim's habitations. The sons of Asher.—CHAP. VIII. The sons and chief men of Benjamin. The ſtock of Saul and Jonathan.—CHAP. IX. The original of Iſrael's and Judah's genealogies. The Iſraelites, the prieſts, and the Levites, with the Nethinims, which dwelt in Jeruſalem. The charge of certain Levites. The ſtock of Saul and Jonathan. —CHAP. X. Saul's overthrow and death. The Philiſtines triumph over Saul and his ſons. Saul's ſin: for which the kingdom was tranſlated from him to David.—CHAP. XI. David, by a general conſent, is made king at Hebron: he winneth the caſtle of Zion from the Jebuſites, by Joab's valour. A catalogue of David's mighty men. CHAP. XII. The companies that came to David at Ziklag. The armies that came to him at Hebron.—CHAP. XIII. David fetcheth the ark with great ſolemnity from Kirjath-jearim. Uzza being ſmitten, the ark is left at the houſe of Obed-edom.— CHAP. XIV. Hiram's kindneſs to David. David's felicity in people, wives, and children: his two victories over the Philiſtines. —CHAP. XV. David having prepared a place for the ark, ordereth the prieſts and Levites to bring it from Obed-edom: he performeth the ſolemnity thereof with great joy. Michal deſpiſeth him.—CHAP. XVI. David's feſtival ſacrifice: he ordereth a choir to ſing thankſgiving: the pſalm of thankſgiving: he appointeth miniſters, porters, prieſts, and muſicians, to attend continually on the ark.—CHAP. XVII. Nathan firſt approving the purpoſe of David to build God an houſe, after by the word of God forbiddeth him: he promiſeth him bleſſings and benefits in his ſeed David's prayer and thanſgiving.—CHAP. XVIII. David ſubdueth the Philiſtines and the Moabites: he ſmiteth Hadarezer and the Syrians. Tou ſendeth Hadoram with preſents to bleſs David. The preſents and the ſpoil David dedicateth to God: he putteth garriſons in Edom. David's officers.—CHAP. XIX. David's meſſengers ſent to comfort Hanun the ſon of Nahaſh, are villainouſly intreated. The Ammonites, ſtrengthened by the Syrians, are overcome by Joab and Abiſhai. Shophach making a new ſupply of the Syrians, is ſlain by David.—CHAP. XX. Rabbah is beſieged by Joab, ſpoiled by David, and the people thereof tortured. Three giants are ſlain in three ſeveral overthrows of the Philiſtines. —CHAP. XXI. David, tempted by ſatan, forceth Joab to number the people. The number of the people being brought, David repenteth of it. David having three plagues, propounded by Gad, chooſeth the peſtilence after the death of ſeventy thouſand. David, by repentance, preventeth the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. David, by Gad's direction, purchaſeth Ornan's threſhing-floor: where having built an altar, God giveth a ſign of his favour by fire, and ſtayeth the plague. David ſacrificeth there, being reſtrained from Gibeon by fear of the angel.—CHAP. XXII. Nor is it at all strange that the names of places should be changed in so many hundreds of years as were between Joshua and this time. And to the cities themselves, this is further to be observed, that they are dispersed among all the tribes, partly that Jacob's prophecy might be fulfilled concerning the scattering of Levi, (Gen. xlix. 7.) and partly that every tribe might have teachers among them, by whom they might be directed in, and quickened to, the observation of God's laws, upon which their safety and happiness wholly depended.

V. 2. The first inhabitants—After the return from Babylon. In their cities—(i. e.) That took possession of their own lands and cities allotted to them; but of late years had been taken from them for their sins, and possessed by other people. The Israelites—(i. e.) The common people of Judah and Israel, called here by the general name of Israelites, which was given to them before that unhappy division of the two kingdoms, and now is restored to them when the Israelites are united with the Jews in one and the same commonwealth, that so all the names and signs of their former division might be blotted out. And although the generality of the ten tribes were yet in captivity, yet divers of them were now returned, either such as had long before the captivity fled to Jerusalem to worship God, and joined themselves with Judah; or such as, upon Cyrus's general proclamation, associated themselves, and returned with those of Judah and Benjamin. The priests, Levites—These took possession of the cities or places belonging to them. And the Nethinims—A certain order of men, either Gibeonites or others joined with them, devoted to the service of God, and of his house, and of the priests and Levites; who, that they might attend upon their work without distraction, had certain places and possessions given to them; which they are now said to repossess.

V. 13. Able men—Which is here noted as an excellent qualification for their place; because the priests might meet with great opposition and difficulty in the faithful discharge of their office, in the execution of the censures upon all persons without exception.

V. 17. The porters—Whose office it was to keep all the gates of the temple, that no unclean person or thing might enter into it.

V. 18. In companies—They kept the gates successively.

V. 19. All things were now restored to their primitive order and institution; and the several persons took those places and offices upon them, which their ancestors had before them.

V. 20. The Lord was with him—To direct, and assist, and bless him in the discharge of his place. Which seems here related to encourage his successor, and consequently all the priests and Levites of this time, to go on couragiously and resolutely in their work, not doubting but God will stand by them as he had done by their fathers.

V. 22. Whom David and Samuel the seer did ordain in their set office—This is added to shew that this was no human invention, as some might conceive, but a divine appointment, to which all ought to submit.

V. 12. And fasted seven days—Every day till evening, after the manner of the Jewish feasts. Where do the Christians live that imitate their example even for a day, to express to Him, that seeth in secret, their sorrow for any calamity, or their desire to obtain any spiritual blessing from God? Reader, Did you ever fast a day in your life from a sincere desire to know the blessedness of the man whose sins are pardoned, or that God, by his grace, might renew a right spirit within you, and of a truth cleanse the thoughts of your hearts? But is it necessary for Christians to fast? Does the Lord Christ require it? Yes, both in the Old Testament and in the New. Fasting gives power to prayer, and they that unite both together, will soon know what it is so to run the Christian race, as to obtain Christ in them, the hope of glory.

V. 13. Saul died for his transgression—Wonder not that Saul fell by the hands of the Philistines, who were armed against him by his own sin, and by God's displeasure for it. Against the word of the Lord—Against God's express, and plain, and positive command: which is a great aggravation of any sin. And also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit—Which was contrary to God's law, and to his own conscience, which was so fully convinced of, that he had endeavoured the utter extirpation of all such persons.

V. 14 And inquired not of the Lord—Saul inquired of the Lord, but not in a right manner, not humbly, penitently, and perseveringly: but when God would not answer him speedily, he gives it over, and goes from God to the devil. Such an inquiry as Saul made is accounted to be no inquiry at all.

V. 2. The Lord thy God said unto thee—Or, concerning thee: for it is apparent that they knew of it; and therefore many of them opposed David hitherto against their own consciences. And how many are there who know that Jesus, the son of David and the prince of peace, ought to reign over them, but who against themselves resist him for years together. Happy are they that submit themselves to his mild command, for his yoke is easy, and his burthen light. But better would it have been for that man if he had never been born, whom death finds declaring, in the spirit of his mind, Jesus shall not reign over me.

V. 6. So Joab went first up, and was chief—Before this he was one of David's chief captains, but now he is made captain-general of all the forces of Israel and Judah.

V. 9. The Lord of hosts was with him—The sole cause of real greatness. All other exaltation will one day leave those that are lifted up the highest to have but the greatest fall.

Where do the Christians live that imitate their example even for a day, to express to Him, that seeth in secret, their sorrow for any calamity, or their desire to obtain any spiritual blessing from God? Reader, Did you ever fast a day in your life from a sincere desire to know the blessedness of the man whose sins are pardoned, or that God, by his grace, might renew a right spirit within you, and of a truth cleanse the thoughts of your hearts? But is it necessary for Christians to fast? Does the Lord Christ require it? Yes, both in the Old Testament and in the New. 38 All these men of war, that could keep rank, came with a perfect heart to Hebron, to make David king over all Israel: and all the rest also of Israel, were of one heart to make David king.

39 And there they were with David three days, eating and drinking: for their brethren had prepared for them.

V. 22. Like the host of God—Innumerable like the stars or angels, both which are called God's hosts.

V. 23. According to the word of the Lord—Whereby he had settled the crown upon David after Saul's death.

V. 24. The children of Judah, that bare shield and spear, were six thousand and eight hundred—Who came thither in the name of all their brethren; for that whole tribe stuck to David at his very first coming to Hebron. And the spiritual Judah will ever cleave to Jesus, and acknowledge him as their head and king.

V. 29. Hitherto the greatest part of them had kept the ward of the house of Saul—(i. e.) Endeavoured to keep the crown in their own tribe, and in Saul's family.

V. 31. Which were expressed by name—Which were not ashamed nor afraid publicly to own David; first by putting their names to some paper presented to them for that purpose; and then by marching to him to Hebron. These brave men gave up their names, to shew their willingness to run all hazards that might attend their taking David's side. And blessed are such as follow their example, in avowing themselves on the side of the Son of David, even with the certain knowledge of its being true, That whoever will live godly lives, walking in the spirit and example of Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution. (Matth. v. 11, 12.)

V. 32. Men that had understanding of the times—Political prudence to discern and embrace the fit seasons for all actions.

V. 33. They were not of double heart—They were all of one heart and one mind towards David; not some for him, and others secretly against him, but all with one soul and one consent adhered to him.

V. 40. They that were nigh them—That lived not far from Hebron, the place where they now were. There was joy in Israel—Their civil wars were wholly ended, and they were all united under one king: and they had now a king of eminent valour and piety, and therefore expected to be saved from all their enemies, and from the calamities under which they had so lately been suffering. And when the spiritual Israel of God with one heart repair to and acknowledge their Lord and Saviour, they are filled from their living head with an holy joy, of which this is but a faint representation.

elder of the people. And will not they that act with the general mind procure to themselves, by that means, the general support? The experience recorded in this sacred history proves, that they that act with a single eye to God and the general good, will, with David, have the people's hearts, and hands, and voices on their side.

V. 2. If it be of the Lord our God—If my proposal is, in your opinion, agreeable to the will of God. Let us send abroad—Let us break out and send; let us send messengers speedily and universally to the several tribes. It is a metaphor from the sea or rivers, which, when the banks are broken, do suddenly overflow. Unto our brethren every where, that are left—By which word he reminds them of the great desolations which God, for their sins, had hitherto made among them; and therefore adviseth that remnant whom God had so graciously saved from ruin, that they would more seriously set themselves to seek God than they had formerly done.

V. 3. We inquired not at it—The ark was then neglected; and the generality of the people either lived in the gross neglect of the solemn worship of God, or contented themselves with going to Gibeon, and offering sacrifices there, not caring, though the ark, the soul of the tabernacle, was in another place. And as the ARK was now to be resorted to, as the means of preventing their falling into mistaken courses, and bringing upon themselves the same calamities they had so long seen and felt; so is the WORD OF GOD to be resorted to as the sure guide in all human affairs.

V. 4. The thing was right in the eyes of all the people—Their consciences smiting them for their former negligence, and being fully convinced of the piety and reasonableness of this proposal.

CHAP. XVII.

V. 9. The children of wickedness—Such as are devoted and wholly given up to wickedness, elsewhere called children of Belial.

V. 14. I will settle him in mine house—This strictly and properly agrees only to Christ, to whom alone that promise also of an everlasting establishment in this kingdom belongs. And this expression seems to be most emphatically added, to signify that that person in whom all those promises should be fully and perfectly accomplished—the Messias should be settled not only in the king's throne, as others of David's successors were, but also in God's house or temple; and consequently that he should be a priest as well as a king; which mystery was more clearly revealed to David, (Psal. cx. 1, 2, 4.) and intimated in these words. In my kingdom—And this, as well as the former phrase, may seem singularly to belong to the Messiah, who was not only to be the king of Israel, but also of all nations, and of all creatures.

V. 16. And David sat—Which may note either his gesture, or his continuance there, till he had finished this following prayer.

V. 17. O Lord God—Thou hast treated me as if I had been born the son of a great monarch, and not a poor shepherd, as indeed I was. Thou hast regarded me as the type or figure of that man of high degree, who is—the Lord God, the Messiah, the God-man. Thou hast given to me and my house an everlasting kingdom, which is the peculiar privilege of that great person the Messiah.

V. 19. O Lord, for thy servant's sake—Not for any increase of thine own blessedness, but for thy servant's happiness, and not for my sake, whom thou knowest to be but a sinful man, but for the sake of him, of whom thou hast graciously made thy servant a type, and with whom thou art ever well pleased, and through whom, by faith in his name, it is thy will that all the ends of the earth shall be blessed.

NOW after this, [a] it came to pass, that David smote the Philistines, and subdued them, and took Gath and her towns out of the hand of the Philistines.

NOW [a] it came to pass after this, that Nahash the king of the children of Ammon died, and his son reigned in his stead.

14 So Joab and the people that were with him, drew nigh before the Syrians, unto the battle; and they fled before him.

CHAP. XXI.

V. 1. Satan stood up—Before the Lord and his tribunal, to accuse David and Israel. Standing is the accuser's posture: and the Holy Scripture speaketh of God, and of the things of God, after the manner of men, to bring them down to our capacities. The internal peace of David's kingdom being settled, and the people that warred against it being overcome, satan now stands up in his own person against the Israel of God; and the effects of his influence on the mind of David appears by his conduct in the act of numbering the people, which proceeded from a spirit of pride. And thus is it with all in this life of trial, we have the world, the flesh, and the devil to overcome and to resist; and when, by the mercy of God made known to the soul through the Mediator, the peace of the mind is settled, and by his grace, power is given over our sinful nature, and vain and sinful customs in the world about us, still satan remains bent on preventing every soul of man from being finally a partaker of Christ: (Heb. iii. 14.) he stands up against the soul, and, by his wicked suggestions, endeavours to bring back those that had escaped from him to their own former spirit, and that of the world which lieth in the wicked one; and to do this, he makes use of circumstances of difficulty or affliction, to tempt the soul to murmur at its condition, and to accuse the gracious governor of the world impiously or foolishly, as if God did, in their particular case, that which was unjust or unwise: and under circumstances of prosperity, the tempter's design is ever to turn the goodness of God into occasions of offending him, and, if possible, to make the soul more careless, wanton, and presumptuous, the more God hath blessed it with an abundance of all good things. And in all temptations it is the deceiver's business to make the mind believe, that it is neither tempted nor deceived, that it is neither sinning, nor in danger at present of doing so; but, like David, bent on the object of its pride or foolish desire, and resisting the grace of God till it is left to itself, it contends for that as right which, in its nature, produces its own misery or ruin; and next to studying the Scriptures with a view to know the way of salvation, and how to walk in it, they are to be read with a view to discover the dangers to our present and everlasting peace, and to which all mankind are now as much exposed as they were when the Scriptures were written, the Scriptures being written, as to us, to answer the very purpose of making known to us wherein our spiritual strength and safety lies, and what are the ways and causes of danger. And they that think but little of the value of that salvation, which cost the life of God our Saviour in the person of Christ Jesus, and also, which is the natural consequence of thus thinking, are careless and indifferent as to any danger they may be in from satan, from the world about them, and from their own fallen nature—but looking upon both the great branches into which the word of God divides itself—the way that leads to life and to death, as things not worthy of their chief and constant care—thus to be living, is all that satan would have us do, to bring upon ourselves our own destruction, that the holy name by which we are called, may be blasphemed on our account for ever; and they that will not look for the knowledge both of their safety and of their danger in the word of God, must not expect the prince of darkness to acquaint them, any more than he did David, from what quarter it was that the vain pride of his mind was set upon that measure which produced that dreadful judgment which is here recorded.

V. 2. David said, Go, number Israel, and bring the number of them to me—Who am their king, that I may know it, and see how great I am among the princes of the earth, by being at the head of such a nation.

V. 3. Why will he be a cause of trespass to Israel—Why will the king provoke God by this sin to punish Israel? Thus he speaks, because God commonly punisheth the people for their sins, by leaving their governors to fall upon such measures as should produce their punishment.

V. 6. Levi and Benjamin counted he not among them—And Joab presumed to leave these two tribes unnumbered, because he had specious pretences for it; for Levi, because they were no warriors, and the king's command reached only to those that drew sword; and for Benjamin, because they, being so small a tribe, and bordering upon Jerusalem, their chief city, might easily be numbered afterward.

V. 7. God was displeased with this thing—Because this was done without any necessity, and out of ostentation and carnal confidence, as David's own conscience told him, which therefore smote him. (2 Sam. xxiv. 10.)

CHAP. XXII.

V. 1. Then David said, This is the house of the Lord God—This is the place appointed by God for the building of his temple and altar.

V. 2. He set masons to hew wrought stones—Wherein he could not do much, being prevented by death: but Solomon carried on and perfected what David had begun.

V. 3. David prepared iron for the joinings—To be used together with melted lead, for the joining of those great stones together.

V. 8. Because thou hast shed much blood upon the earth—Not that wars either now are or then were simply unlawful, or that David sinned in shedding the blood of war, for it is manifest that David's wars were undertaken by God's command, or with his leave, and were attended with his blessing; but partly because David's military employments did for a good while fill his head and hands, and gave him no leisure for temple work: and to teach us, that the church (whereof the temple was a manifest and illustrious type) should be built by Christ, the Prince of Peace, (Isa. ix. 6.) and that it should be gathered and built up not by might or power, or by force of arms, but by God's spirit, (Zech. iv. 6.) and by the preaching of the gospel of peace.

V. 11. The Lord be with thee, and prosper thou—The Lord give thee that rest and prosperity which is necessary for it.

V. 12. Only the Lord—Give thee instructions or direction rightly to manage and rule his people Israel.

V. 13. Then shalt thou prosper, if thou takest heed to fulfil the statutes and judgments which the Lord charged Moses with concerning Israel—And will not that country, family, or individual be most prosperous, that regards the will of God as the sole rule of conduct? Dread not, nor be dismayed—Whilst thy designs and actions are warranted by God's word, God himself will be on thy side; and however the wicked may oppose and rage against thee, they will but increase thy faith, thy patience, and all the fruits of the Spirit within thee; but they shall never overcome thee, if thy God is the Lord.

V. 16. Arise, and be doing, and the Lord be with thee—The shades of the evening of life were now begun to appear with David; and now, from his experience of the great ends of living, he gives o Ver. 11.

17 ¶ David also commanded all the princes of Israel to help Solomon his son, saying,

18 Is not the Lord your God with you? and hath he not given you rest on every side? for he hath given the inhabitants of the land into mine hand, and the land is subdued before the Lord, and before his people.

19 Now set your heart and your soul to seek the Lord your God, arise therefore, and build ye the sanctuary of the Lord God, to bring the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and the holy vessels of God, into the house that is to be built to the name of the Lord.

gives his son this advice; to be guilty of no delay in doing the work which God had given him to do in his day; and, Reader, if the wise providence of God hath placed you in any station that is looked upon as poor, mean, or low by men, to do, and patiently suffer, agreeable to the will of God in that station, are duties of the same importance to you, as the great work of building the temple, and governing Israel, was with the son of David; and the advice given to him may be applied to all—Arise, and be doing—In this life thy body is to be made the temple of the Holy Ghost, and to learn how to govern thy spirit by faith in the grace of God, is a greater work than he ever hath in hand, who governeth a kingdom without living to God.

V. 18. The inhabitants, and the land, is subdued before the Lord, and before his people—It is brought under the command of God, and of you, his people, all the enemies of God, and of Israel, in it or near it, being now perfectly subdued, whereof both God and your own eyes are witnesses. And this hath God given you to see by his own wisdom, power, and goodness manifested in our behalf, which calls for all your love and grateful obedience.

CHAP. XXIII.

V. 1. David made Solomon king—Not that he did resign the kingdom to him, but he declared his mind concerning his succession into the throne after his death.

V. 2. He gathered together all the princes of Israel, with the priests and the Levites—To declare God's mind that Solomon should be his successor; and so to cut off the claims and pretences which others of his sons might make to the crown: and to acquaint them with those directions which he had received from God by the Spirit, concerning the establishment of a new order in the ministration of the priests and Levites in the temple.

V. 3. The Levites were numbered from the age of thirty years and upward—Not only till fifty, as it was appointed, (Num. iv. 2, 3.) but even till their death: For that was but a temporary law grounded upon a special reason, because the Levites were employed in carrying the tabernacle and sacred vessels from place to place; and therefore God would have them freed from those burdens when they came to feel the infirmities of age: Which reason wholly ceasing upon the building of the temple, and their work being far easier than it had been, and their service being now a privilege, they were not to go out of the service of the temple as long as they lived. And in this, representing on earth, those that dwell in buildings not made with hands but eternal in the heavens, out of which they will not go any more for ever.

V. 4. To set forward the work of the house of the Lord—To take care that all the work of the temple should be punctually and diligently performed. Officers and judges—Whose work it seems to have been to judge of and determine all difficult causes or differences which might arise either among the priests or Levites about their sacred administrations; or among the people, which being governed in all their concerns by the laws of Moses, it was necessary that the priests and Levites should be the judges.

V. 6. David divided them into courses—By the command of God.

V. 13. That he should sanctify the most holy things—As a type of that everlasting High-priest, whose blood alone can sanctify the holy things—the most devout spiritual worship and service of his humblest and most faithful servants.

Before Christ 1015. Lord, to minister unto him, and [l] to bless in his name for ever.

V. 14. Moses the man of God, his sons were named of the tribe of Levi—Moses willingly left the government to Joshua, and the priesthood to Aaron, and was content to have his posterity reduced to a private condition.

V. 24. From the age of twenty years—And the reason why they were now sooner admitted to service than they had been formerly by the constitution of Moses, is, because now their work was more easy, they being wholly discharged from that burdensome work of carrying the tabernacle and its utensils. By this we see they were not taken into the public service, till they were old enough to have strength sufficient for it; nor did they continue in it when they were of an age and under circumstances to be oppressed by it. Thus tenderly does God care for all that do him service, and though he requires the greatest diligence, and the full exercise of all the strength and wisdom he hath given, yet the hand of the diligent maketh rich, and he hath said, The labourer is worthy of his hire. If the children and servants of God were even to go before the men who live only for this world, in care and labour, surely it would still be found that the service of God was perfect freedom, and that their happiness in the favour of God, increased with their zeal and active devotion to his will; God never leaving himself debtor to any that live to promote his glory in the happiness of their fellow-creatures.

V. 27. By the last words of David—When he was old and near his death, and going to give up his account to his Lord and Maker, of all his actions, and particularly of the alterations which he made in the service of God; which he declared was done by the spirit of God.

V. 29. All manner of measure and size—All measures used either in sacred or civil things, the public standards whereof were kept in the sanctuary or temple; and the priests and Levites were to examine other measures by them, as occasion required.

V. 30. Every morning to thank and praise the Lord, and likewise at even—The two solemn times of offering sacrifices: Which work was attended with public prayer and thanksgiving. And shall any one do the same thing in the temple of their hearts, and not be blessed of the Lord? Who that complains of the want of that peace which the world can neither give nor take away, may not find the cause of it in not thanking and praising God for all his benefits, or as much and as many of them as they are capable of comprehending; for who can tell the sum of the mercies of God to any one of the human race? His love was from eternity; and the designs of God to men are infinite and unchangeable in goodness; and a thankless—praiseless man, may well be conceived to be an object of wonder to all that can behold him from heaven or hell. Would we but consider what God himself declares to be the sufferings of the finally impenitent, where shall a soul be found that is yet in a state of trial, without gratitude to God, who, at the expence of his death, in our nature hath hitherto saved us from that misery which the justice of God awards against every sin? And would we but consider that eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive the greatness of that blessedness which God, for Christ's sake, waits to bestow upon the most miserable of the human race for ever, what but a mind, void of the grace of God, could be without that gratitude which is continually thanking and praising God?

5 Thus were they divided by lot, one sort with another; for the governors of the sanctuary, and governors of the house of God, were of the sons of Eleazar, and of the sons of Ithamar.

V. 4, 5. The sons of Obed-edom, for God blessed him—With a numerous posterity and other blessings, for his respect and affection to the ark. (2 Sam. vi. 11.) God thus shewing his gracious notice of him, for his regard to that which belonged to his worship.

V. 6. They were mighty men of valour—This clause is mentioned, because their office required both strength and courage: for they were to shut the doors of the temple, one whereof was so great and weighty, that in the second temple it required the help of twenty men to open and shut it, as Josephus, an eye-witness, reports. They were also to keep the guard, and to keep out all forbidden persons, who might sometimes presumptuously attempt to enter into the temple, as Uzziah did, and to prevent or suppress any tumults or disorders which might happen in the temple, or in its courts, and to keep the treasures of the temple, and to be officers and judges over Israel, and to manage every matter pertaining to God, and the affairs of the king. And hath not the church of God, in all ages, occasion for such as possess the same spirit, to appear on God's side against the wicked and self-confident, and to shew them, that whilst they remain in that state of mind, the sacred doors are shut against them.

V. 10. His father made him the chief—And surely the God and Father of all will make them chief in his favour, who, from a principle of love, are most devoted to his holy will.

V. 13. For every gate—That it might be known to whom the care of each gate was more especially committed.

V. 15. The house of Asuppim—Or, of gatherings; so named, either from the assembly of the elders, who met there to consult about the affairs of the temple: Or, from the people, who were there gathered together to hear the discourses of the teacher of the law; or because the gifts of the people towards the house and worship of God were kept there.

V. 16. Ward against ward—That as one gate was over against another, the west against the east, and the north against the south, so one ward was over against another.

V. 20. The treasures of the dedicated things—Those things which had been freely given or dedicated to God. And ought not all that God hath given, be again dedicated to him, and be looked upon as the treasures of dedicated things, to be used agreeable to the will of God?

V. 27. The ſpoils won in battles, did they dedicate to maintain the houſe of the Lord—Thus did thoſe brave and pious men turn their profeſſion into a ſacrifice to God, by giving the advantages of it to maintain the houſe of the Lord; and all may have the opportunity of imitating the ſpirit of their example. (Matth. xxv. 35, 36.)

V. 28. Whoſoever had dedicated any thing, it was under the hand of Shelomith—Who is particularly named, becauſe they were chiefly committed to his truſt, he being, it ſeems, a perſon of eminent wiſdom and faithfulneſs.

V. 29. For the outward buſineſs—For that buſineſs of the Lord and of the king, which was to be done without the temple and without Jeruſalem. For officers and judges—Who ſhall be officers and judges over the people in the ſeveral cities and towns, to determine queſtions and controverſies, which might ariſe among them. And the reaſon why the Levites were intruſted with theſe matters was, becauſe the common or municipal law of Iſrael, by which they had and held all their rights, was no other than the law of God, whereof the prieſts and Levites being the beſt and eſtabliſhed interpreters, muſt needs therefore be the moſt proper judges of things depending thereupon.

V. 30. In all buſineſs of the Lord—In all things which did or ſhould concern the houſe or worſhip of God; to take care that ſuch monies as were either impoſed by a tax, or freely given by the people, towards the building or repairing of the temple, or towards the ſacrifices and other holy miniſtrations, ſhould be gathered, and received, and faithfully ſent up to Jeruſalem, to be employed in that work; and to ſee to the execution of all the laws of God among the people, and to reſtrain or puniſh wilful offenders againſt it. And in the ſervice of the king—Not that all the king's buſineſſes were managed by them, for the king's military affairs were managed by his captains, and his political or civil affairs were managed by the princes, and judges, and officers of other tribes; but becauſe they ſerved the king in the execution of his decrees, made purſuant to the laws of God, by which the ſeveral rights of king and people were eſtabliſhed, and all things both in church and commonwealth were to be ordered; and as the king was the principal perſon intruſted with the execution of God's laws, ſo theſe Levites chiefly were his eyes by which he ſaw his people's tranſgreſſions, and his hands by which he inflicted due and deſerved cenſures upon them for their miſcarriages. And the doing of this was very much for the ſervice of the king, whoſe throne was eſtabliſhed and ſecured by ſuch righteous adminiſtrations. Beſides they were to take care, by their counſel and authority, to keep the people in obedience to their king; which the Levites were moſt obliged and beſt able to do.

V. 31. In the fortieth year of the reign of David—Which was his laſt year, in which he made all the orders and diſtributions of families and offices here recorded.

V. 32. Two thouſand and ſeven hundred chief fathers, king David made rulers over the Reubenite, the Gadite, and the half-tribe of Manaſſeh—Which is a very great number to be employed about two tribes and an half; when all the reſt of the tribes had only one thouſand and ſeven hundred. But the reaſon is, becauſe the tribes without Jordan being more remote from the place of public worſhip, needed more than ordinary help to inſtruct and keep them in the practice of the true religion and the worſhip of God, and in obedience to the laws.

CHAP. XXVIII.

V. 2. David the king stood up upon his feet—Out of reverence to God and his word, which was the matter of the following discourse, and out of respect to this great and honourable assembly. Hear me, my brethren—So he calls the princes and chief rulers, both because they had a share with him, though under him, in the government; and in compliance with the divine command, that the king should not be lifted up above his brethren, (Deut. xvii. 20.) I had in mine heart to build an house of rest for the ark—A place where it might be fixed, and no more removed from place to place.

V. 5. The Lord hath chosen Solomon my son—It is not my affection, but God's express will, that Solomon should be preferred before his elder brethren; and therefore all of you are obliged to submit to him, and accept of him as your king by divine appointment.

V. 7. I will establish his kingdom, if he be constant to do my commandments, as at this day—If he continues as faithfully to obey my will, according to his knowledge of it, as he does at present, the power and prosperity I intend him shall surely be continued to him. And thus shall it be with all that worship God in spirit and in truth, and do his will from the heart, according to their knowledge of it; whatever it may expose them to lose or to suffer among men, they shall be established in the kingdom of the grace of God, they shall be heard of God in all their requests, and they shall have power given them to overcome and resist all evil, till they are delivered from it for ever.

V. 8. In the sight of all Israel, and in the audience of our God—(i. e.) I do here exhort and charge you every one, calling God, who is here present, and this congregation, wherein all Israel are present by their representatives, for witness against you if you do not follow my counsel. Keep and seek for all the commandments of the Lord—Keep those commands which you know, and seek for, or search into, what you are yet ignorant of, that you may distinctly understand the whole will of God, and all the parts of your duty, and seriously give up yourselves to the practice thereof.

V. 9. Solomon my son, know thou God—Know him so as to love him and serve him. With a perfect heart, and with a willing mind: for the Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts—If thou dost only put on a profession of religion to please me, and secure thy hopes of the kingdom, or if thy obedience to God be insincere, thou mayest indeed deceive me, but thou canst not deceive him, for he searcheth thy inward thoughts and the motions of thy heart. If thou seek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him—If, when I am dead and gone, and thou art perfectly at thy own disposal, thou shalt cast off that religion and fear of God, of which thou now makest profession, and shalt continue to do so without true repentance. He will cast thee off for ever—Notwithstanding all his promises made

V. 12. The pattern of all that he had by the spirit—All the particulars were suggested to him by God's spirit.

V. 18. The chariot of the cherubims—A chariot is made to carry a person from place to place; this may be to intimate, that God was not so fixed to them by the building of this temple, but that he both could and would remove from them if they forsook him. And when they did so, God did make use of the chariot of his cherubims to convey himself away from them, as is noted Ezek. x. 15, &c.

V. 19. This, said David, the Lord made me understand in writing by his hand upon me—God did as it were by his own hand and finger, wherewith he wrote the ten commandments, write these things upon the table of my mind, which now I deliver to thee. And nothing is to be received into the worship of God, or into any one's practice in common life, which is not plainly and clearly to be understood to be agreeable to the will of God, according to his written word.

V. 4. To overlay the walls of the houses withal—The walls of the temple with gold, and of the rooms adjoining to it with silver, beaten out into plates, and put upon the other materials.

V. 5. Who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord—As David, by the grace of God, hath been enabled to do.

V. 9. Then the people rejoiced—Because this was both an effect of God's grace in them, and an eminent token of God's favour and goodness to be continued to them, and a good pledge that this great and long-desired work of the building of the temple would receive a certain and a speedy accomplishment.

V. 11. Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power—Thou art great and powerful. O Lord, thou art exalted as head above all—As the sovereign Lord and owner of all persons and things.

V. 12. Riches and honour come of thee, and thou reignest over all—Thou disposest of riches and honour as thou pleasest. And to give strength unto all—Even to the weakest, whom thou canst make strong, and to the strongest, who are weak without thy help.

V. 14. Who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly——i. e. That thou shouldest give us both such riches out of which we should be able to make such an offering, and such a willing and free heart to offer them; both which are thy gifts, and the fruits of thy grace and mercy to us. Of thine own have we given thee—We return only what we have received, and therefore we pay a debt to thee, and do not hereby deserve any thing from thee.

V. 15. Our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding—We only give to thee what we must shortly leave, and what we cannot keep to ourselves: And therefore it is a great favour that thou wilt accept such offerings; we are not possessors of this land and the fruits of it, but only pilgrims and passengers through it.

V. 17. Now have I seen with joy, thy people which are present here, to offer willingly unto thee—By the largeness of their offering I discern the sincerity, willingness, and generosity of their hearts towards thee: For David judged, as in reason and charity he ought, of the tree by its fruit, and of their hearts by their actions.

V. 18. Keep this for ever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people—Since it is from thy grace that thy people have such willing minds to thy service, as was before acknowledged, I beg the continuance of that grace to them, that they may persist in the same generous and pious disposition towards thee and thy worship. Prepare their heart unto thee—Thou who hast begun a good work, confirm and carry it on by thy grace, otherwise it will languish, and this very people will prove degenerate.

II. CHRONICLES.

THIS Book contains thirty-ſix chapters.—CHAP. I. The ſolemn offering of Solomon at Gibeon. Solomon's choice of wiſdom, is bleſſed by God. Solomon's power and wealth.—CHAP. II. Solomon's labourers for the building of the temple: his embaſſage to Huram for workmen, and proviſion for ſtuff. Huram ſendeth him a kind anſwer.—CHAP. III. The place and time of building the temple. The meaſure and ornaments of the houſe. The cherubims. The vail and pillars.—CHAP. IV. The altar of braſs. The molten ſea upon twelve oxen. The ten lavers, candleſticks, and tables. The court, and the inſtruments of braſs. The inſtruments of gold.—CHAP. V. The dedicated treaſures. The ſolemn induction of the ark into the oracle. God being praiſed, giveth a viſible ſign of his favour.—CHAP. VI. Solomon having bleſſed the people, bleſſeth God. Solomon's prayer at the conſecration of the temple, upon the braſen ſcaffold.—CHAP. VII. God having given teſtimony to Solomon's prayer by fire from heaven, and glory in the temple, the people worſhip God. Solomon's ſolemn ſacrifice. Solomon having kept the feaſt of the tabernacle, and the feaſt of the dedication of the altar, diſmiſſeth the people. God appearing to Solomon, giveth him promiſes conditionally.—CHAP. VIII. Solomon's buildings. The Gentiles which were left, Solomon maketh tributaries; but the Iſraelites, rulers. Pharaoh's daughter removeth to her houſe. Solomon's yearly ſolemn ſacrifices: he appointeth the prieſts and Levites to their places. The navy fetcheth gold from Ophir.—CHAP. IX. The queen of Sheba admireth the wiſdom of Solomon. Solomon's gold: his targets. The throne of ivory: his veſſels: his preſents: his chariots and horſes: his tributes: his reign and death.—CHAP. X. The Iſraelites aſſembled at Shechem to crown Rehoboam, by Jeroboam make a ſuit of relaxation of the taxes to him. Rehoboam refuſing the old men's counſel, by the advice of young men, anſwereth them roughly. Ten tribes revolting, kill Hadoram, and make Rehoboam to flee.—CHAP. XI. Rehoboam raiſing an army to ſubdue Iſrael, is forbidden by Shemaiah: he ſtrengtheneth his kingdom. The prieſts and Levites, and ſuch as feared God, forſaken by Jeroboam, ſtrengthen the kingdom of Judah. The wives and children of Rehoboam.—CHAP. XII. Rehoboam forſaking the Lord, is puniſhed by Shiſhak: he and the princes repenting at the preaching of Shemaiah, are delivered from deſtruction, but not from ſpoil. The reign and death of Rehoboam.—CHAP. XIII. Abijah ſucceeding, maketh war againſt Jeroboam: he declareth the right of his cauſe: Truſting in God, he overcometh Jeroboam. The wives and children of Abijah.—CHAP. XIV. Aſa ſucceeding, deſtroyeth idolatry: having peace, he ſtrengtheneth his kingdom with forts and armies, calling on God, he overthroweth Zerah, and ſpoileth the Ethiopians.—CHAP. XV. Aſa, with Judah and many of Iſrael, moved by the prophecy of Azariah, the ſon of Oded, make a ſolemn covenant with God: he putteth down Maachah his mother for her idolatry: he bringeth dedicated things into the houſe of God, and enjoyeth a long peace.—CHAP. XVI. Aſa, by the aid of the Syrians, diverteth Baaſha from building of Ramah. Being reproved thereof by Hanani, he putteth him in priſon. Among his other acts, in his diſeaſe he ſeeketh not to God, but to the phyſicians: his death and burial.—CHAP. XVII. Jehoſhaphat ſucceeding Aſa, reigneth well, and proſpereth: he ſendeth Levites with the princes to teach Judah: his enemies being terrified by God, ſome of them bring him preſents and tribute: his greatneſs, captains, and armies.—CHAP. XVIII. Jehoſhaphat, joined in affinity with Ahab, is perſuaded to go with him againſt Ramoth-gilead. Ahab, ſeduced by falſe prophets, according to the word of Micaiah, is ſlain there.—CHAP. XIX. Jehoſhaphat, reproved by Jehu, viſiteth his kingdom: his inſtructions to the judges, to the prieſts and Levites.—CHAP. XX. Jehoſhaphat in his fear proclaimeth a faſt: his prayer. The prophecy of Jahaziel. Jehoſhaphat exhorteth the people, and ſetteth ſingers to praiſe the Lord. The great overthrow of the enemies. The people having bleſſed God at Berachah, return in triumph. Jehoſhaphat's reign: his convoy of ſhips which he made with Ahaziah, according to the prophecy of Eliezer, they are deſtroyed.—CHAP. XXI. Jehoram, ſucceeding Jehoſhaphat, ſlayeth his brethren: his wicked reign. Edom and Libnah revolt. The prophecy of Elijah againſt him in writing: The Philiſtines and Arabians oppreſs him: his incurable diſeaſe, his death, and burial.—CHAP. XXII. Ahaziah ſucceeding, reigneth wickedly. In his confederacy with Joram the ſon of Ahab, he is ſlain by Jehu. Athaliah deſtroying all the ſeed royal, ſave Joaſh, whom Jehoſhabeath his aunt hid: Athaliah uſurpeth the kingdom.—CHAP. XXIII. Jehoiada having ſet things in order, maketh Joaſh king. Athaliah is ſlain. Jehoiada reſtoreth the worſhip of God.—CHAP. XXIV. Joaſh reigneth well all the days of Jehoiada: he giveth order for the repair of the temple. Jehoiada, his death and honourable burial. Joaſh falling to idolatry, ſlayeth Zechariah the ſon of Jehoiada. Joaſh is ſpoiled by the Syrians, and ſlain by Zabad and Jehozabad. Amaziah ſucceedeth him.—CHAP. XXV. Amaziah beginneth to reign well: he executeth juſtice on the traitors: having hired an army of Iſraelites againſt the Edomites, at the word of a prophet he loſeth the hundred talents, and diſmiſſeth them: he overthroweth the Edomites. The Iſraelites diſcontented with their diſmiſſion, ſpoil as they return home. Amaziah, proud of his victory, ſerveth the gods of Edom, and deſpiſeth the admonitions of the prophet: his overthrow: his reign: he is ſlain by conſpiracy.—CHAP. XXVI. Uzziah ſucceeding, and reigning well in the days of Zechariah, proſpereth: waxing proud, he invadeth the prieſt's office, and is ſmitten with leproſy: he dieth, and Jotham ſucceedeth him.—CHAP. XXVII. Jotham reigning well, proſpereth: he ſubdueth the Amorites: his reign: Ahaz ſucceedeth him.—CHAP. XXVIII. Ahaz reigning very wickedly, is greatly afflicted by the Syrians. Judah being captivated by the Iſraelites, is ſent home by the counſel of Oded the prophet. Ahaz ſending for aid to Aſſyria, is not helped thereby: in his diſtreſs he groweth more idolatrous: he dying, Hezekiah ſucceedeth him.—CHAP. XXIX. Hezekiah his good reign: he reſtoreth religion: he exhorteth the Levites. They ſanctify themſelves, and cleanſe the houſe of God. Hezekiah offereth ſolemn ſacrifices, wherein the Levites were more forward than the prieſts.—CHAP. XXX. Hezekiah proclaimeth a ſolemn paſſover on the ſecond month for Judah and Iſrael. The aſſembly having deſtroyed the altars of idolatry, keep the feaſt fourteen days. The prieſts and Levites bleſs the people.—CHAP. XXXI. The people are forward in deſtroying idolatry. Hezekiah ordereth the courſes of the prieſts and Levites, and provideth for their work and maintenance. The people's forwardneſs in offerings and tithes. Hezekiah appointeth officers to diſpoſe of the tithes. The ſincerity of Hezekiah.—CHAP. XXXII. Senacherib invading Judah. Hezekiah fortifieth himſelf, and encourageth his people.

Againſt the blaſphemies of Senacherib by meſſage and letters. Hezekiah and Iſaiah pray. An angel deſtroyeth the hoſt of the Aſſyrians, to the glory of Hezekiah. Hezekiah praying in his ſickneſs, God giveth him a ſign of recovery: he waxing proud, is humbled by God: his wealth and works: his error in the ambaſſage of Babylon: he dying, Manaſſeh ſucceedeth him.—CHAP. XXXIII. Manaſſeh his wicked reign: he ſetteth up idolatry, and will not be admoniſhed: he is carried into Babylon. Upon his prayer to God he is releaſed, and putteth down idolatry: his acts: he dying, Amnon reigning wickedly, is ſlain by his ſervants. The murderers being ſlain, Joſiah ſucceedeth him.——CHAP. XXXIV. Joſiah his good reign: he deſtroyeth idolatry: he taketh order for the repair of the temple. Hilkiah having found a book of the law, Joſiah ſendeth to Huldah to inquire of the Lord. Huldah propheſieth the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, but reſpite thereof in Joſiah's time. Joſiah cauſing it to be read in a ſolemn aſſembly, reneweth the covenant with God.—CHAP. XXXV. Joſiah keepeth a moſt ſolemn paſſover: he, provoking Pharaoh-necho, is ſlain at Megiddo. Lamentations for Joſiah.—CHAP. XXXVI. Jehoahaz ſucceeding, is depoſed by Pharaoh, and carried into Egypt. Jehoiakim reigning ill, is carried bound into Babylon. Jehoiachin ſucceeding, reigneth ill, and is brought into Babylon. Zedekiah ſucceeding, reigneth ill, and deſpiſeth the prophets, and rebelleth againſt Nebuchadnezzar. Jeruſalem, for the ſins of the prieſts and people, is wholly deſtroyed. The proclamation of Cyrus.

[a] 1 Kings 2. 46.

AND [a] Solomon the ſon of David was ſtrengthened in his kingdom, and the Lord his God was with him, and magnified him exceedingly.

2 Then Solomon ſpake unto all Iſrael, to the captains of thouſands and of hundreds, and to the judges, and to every governor in all Iſrael, the chief of the fathers.

3 So Solomon and all the congregation with him, went to the high place that was at [b] Gibeon, for there was the tabernacle of the congregation of God, which Moſes the ſervant of the Lord had made in the wilderneſs.

* Or, was there.

5 Moreover, [d] the braſen altar that [e] Bezaleel the ſon of Uri, the ſon of Hur, had made, * he put before the tabernacle of the Lord: and Solomon and the congregation ſought unto it.

6 And Solomon went up thither, to the braſen altar before the Lord, which was at the tabernacle of the congregation, and offered a thouſand burnt-offerings upon it. Before Chriſt 1015.

7 ¶ In that night did God appear unto Solomon, and ſaid unto him, Aſk what I ſhall give thee.

CHAP. I.

V. 1. Solomon was ſtrengthened—Eſtabliſhed, after his brother Adonijah and his partiſans were ſuppreſſed; he was then received with the univerſal conſent and joy of his princes and people.

V. 2. Solomon ſpake unto all Iſrael—Concerning his intention of going to Gibeon, and that they ſhould attend him thither.

V. 3. Solomon and all the congregation went to the high place—Upon which the tabernacle was placed; whence it is called the great High Place. (1 Kings iii. 4.)

V. 4. The ark of God, David had prepared a tent for it at Jeruſalem—He ſeparated the ark from the tabernacle, and brought it to Jeruſalem, becauſe there he intended to build a laſting habitation for it.

V. 5. Solomon and the congregation ſought unto it—Sought the Lord and his favour by hearty prayers and ſacrifices in the place which God had appointed for that work. (Levit. xvii. 3, 4.)

V. 6. Solomon went up before the Lord, at the tabernacle—Where the Lord was graciouſly preſent to hear their prayers.

V. 7. In that night—After thoſe ſacrifices were offered.

V. 9. O Lord God, let thy promiſe be eſtabliſhed—By this it appears to be the will of the Lord, that when his grace brings his holy promiſes to the minds of thoſe that hope in his mercy, that they ſhould inquire of him by earneſt prayer to fulfil the things which he hath promiſed; many of his bleſſings being withheld not from any want of willingneſs in God to beſtow them, but becauſe they are ſo little conſidered and regarded, as not to be aſked for by earneſt prayer. (Luke xi. 5, &c.)

V. 10. Who can judge this thy people, that is ſo great—What one man is ſufficient to govern ſo numerous a people?

V. 11. God ſaid to Solomon, Becauſe thou haſt aſked wiſdom and knowledge—By this we may not only underſtand Solomon aſked from God the ability to govern according to his holy will; but alſo that he aſked for that wiſdom which is deſcribed in the eighth chapter of Proverbs—The ſpiritual knowledge of God, as the Redeemer and Sanctifier of the ſoul—the kingdom of God within, which, when firſt ſought, God hath promiſed that all other things ſhall be added. V. 4. Behold, I build an house to the name of the Lord my God, to dedicate it to him—To his honour and worship. For the continual shew-bread—Because it was to be there continually, by a constant succession of new bread when the old was removed: Representing that spiritual bread of life which cometh down from heaven, and is continually ready to be communicated to all that are spiritually minded—who live by faith in Him who ever liveth to send down upon all, the Comforter which he hath promised. (John xvi. 7.)

V. 6. But who is able to build him an house, seeing the heaven, and heaven of heavens cannot contain him—When I speak of building a house for our God, let none think that I mean to comprehend God within it, for he is infinite. Save only to burn sacrifice before him—To worship him there where he is graciously present. To the end that all may learn how to worship the Great and Every-where-present God, by offering up by faith the Great sacrifice of his Son, slain by promise from the foundation of the world, to reconcile God and man by his death; and that for his sake, God might be present with all that worship him, in the habitation which he hath chosen wherein to record his name—in the temple of the human heart, renewing it by his grace, and making of it his blessed abode for ever.

Let them have cause of rejoicing and thanksgiving for the effects of thy goodness imparted unto them.

V. 42. O Lord God, turn not away the face of thine anointed—Of me, who, by thy command and appointment, was anointed the king and ruler of thy people: do not deny my present requests, nor send me from the throne of thy grace with a heart dejected. And thus may all say, that approach God in Christ Jesus—Turn not away from thine anointed, who ever liveth to make intercession for the whole human race; and whosoever thus cometh unto God, he will in no wise cast them out. Remember the mercies of David thy servant—Those which thou hast promised to David, and to his house for ever. Remember the mercies thou hast promised, to all them that pray to thee in the name of thy Beloved Son.

V. 10, 11. He sent the people away glad and merry in heart, for the goodness that the Lord had shewed unto David, and to Solomon, and to Israel his people: all that came into Solomon's heart he prosperously effected—The glory of God in his people's happiness, and that of all mankind being his only aim, and being in all things regulated by the word of God, and making all his requests known by prayer and supplication, God crowned all that Solomon intended with success; that all mankind might know the blessings that God will bestow on them that live for the same ends, and pursue them by the same means.

16 [v] And after them out of all the tribes of Israel, such as set their hearts to seek the Lord God of Israel, came to Jerusalem, to sacrifice unto the Lord God of their fathers.

17 So they strengthened the kingdom of Judah, and made Rehoboam the son of Solomon strong, three years: for three years they walked in the way of David and Solomon.

18 ¶ And Rehoboam took him Mahalath the daughter of Jerimoth the son of David to wife, and Abihail the daughter of Eliab the son of Jesse:

2 And it came to pass, that in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem ([c] because they had transgressed against the Lord)

c 1 Kings 14. 24, 25.

3 With twelve hundred chariots, and threescore thousand horsemen: and the people were without number that came with him out of Egypt; [d] the Lubims, the Sukkiims, and the Ethiopians.

d Chap. 16. 8.

4 And he took the fenced cities which pertained to Judah, and came to Jerusalem.

5 ¶ Then came Shemaiah the prophet to Rehoboam, and to the princes of Judah, that were gathered together to Jerusalem, because of Shishak, and said unto them, Thus saith the Lord, Ye have forsaken me, and therefore have I also left you in the hand of Shishak.

6 Whereupon the princes of Israel and the king humbled themselves, and they said, The Lord is righteous.

7 And when the Lord saw that they humbled themselves, the word of the Lord came to Shemaiah, saying, They have humbled themselves, nor to go up to Jerusalem to worship in their courses: and these priests would not join with them in the worship of the calves, as they were desired and commanded to do; and therefore they willingly forsook all their patrimonies and possessions for God's sake; rather choosing to suffer affliction and poverty in his service, than to have the gains and short-lived pleasures of sin, for the uncertain moments of a mortal life. Reader, are you yet of this mind? If not, be intreated in his dear name that died for you, to make a right estimate of the value of all the wages this world pays to those that are running the foremost in its ways; and then ask yourself, if you could gain their prize of honour, riches, or pleasures, how you would look upon these, at the cost of being refused the crown of eternal glory, for which every self-denied cross-bearer hath the sure promise of God?

V. 15. He ordained him priests for the devils, and for the calves—For the high places, both for the devils, (the baals, or false gods, which divers of his people worshipped, whom he permitted and encouraged to do so, giving them liberty to do any thing but to serve God at Jerusalem) and for the calves. They had leave to worship what they would, so as they did not devote themselves to God, to worship and obey him according to his holy word.

V. 16. All such as set their hearts to seek the Lord God of Israel— Such as loved and feared God, in truth, and with their whole heart.

V. 17. For three years they walked in the way of David and Solomon—This honourable mention of Solomon, as a pattern of piety, is a considerable evidence of true repentance having taken place in him.

CHAP. XII.

V. 2. Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, because they had transgressed against the Lord—So that national enemies are but public executioners of the divine displeasure against any people.

V. 3. The Lubims—A people of Africa bordering upon Egypt. The Sukkiims—A people living in tents, as the word signifies.

V. 5. Thus saith the Lord, Ye have forsaken me, and therefore have I also left you—To yourselves, without that wisdom and strength which you and your fathers had, when they walked in the ways of the Lord.

V. 7. When the Lord saw that they humbled themselves—He was pleased to mitigate their calamity. I will grant them some deliverance, and my wrath shall not be poured out—I will give some stop to the course of my wrath, which was ready to be poured forth upon them, to their utter destruction.

themſelves, therefore I will not deſtroy them, but I will grant them * ſome deliverance, and my wrath ſhall not be poured out upon Jeruſalem by the hand of Shiſhak.

8 Nevertheleſs, [e] they ſhall be his ſervants; that they may know my ſervice, and the ſervice of the kingdoms of the countries.

9 So Shiſhak king of Egypt came up againſt Jeruſalem, and took away the treaſures of the houſe of the Lord, and the treaſures of the king's houſe, he took all: he carried away alſo the ſhields of gold which Solomon had [i] made.

10 Inſtead of which, king Rehoboam made ſhields of braſs, and committed them [v] to the hands of the chief of the guard, that kept the entrance of the king's houſe.

11 And when the king entered into the houſe of the Lord, the guard came, and fetched them, and brought them again into the guard-chamber.

12 And when he humbled himſelf, the wrath of the Lord turned from him, that he would not deſtroy him altogether: † and alſo in Judah things went well.

13 ¶ So king Rehoboam ſtrengthened himſelf in Jeruſalem, and reigned: for [v] Rehoboam was one and forty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned ſeventeen years in Jeruſalem, [i] the city which the Lord had choſen out of all the tribes of Iſrael, to put his name there: and his mother's name was Naamah an Ammoniteſs.

14 And he did evil, becauſe he ‡ prepared not his heart to ſeek the Lord.

15 Now the acts of Rehoboam, firſt and laſt, are they not written in the § book of Shemaiah the prophet, [k] and of Iddo the ſeer, concerning genealogies? And there were wars between Rehoboam and Jeroboam continually.

16 And Rehoboam ſlept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David; and Abijah his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

14 And when Judah looked back, behold, the battle was before and behind: and they cried unto the Lord, and the priests sounded with the trumpets.

15 Then the men of Judah gave a shout: and as the men of Judah shouted, it came to pass, that God smote Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah.

16 And the children of Israel fled before Judah: and God delivered them into their hand.

17 And Abijah and his people slew them with a great slaughter: so there fell down slain of Israel, five hundred thousand chosen men. Before Christ 957.

18 Thus the children of Israel were brought under at that time, and the children of Judah prevailed, because they relied upon the Lord God of their fathers.

V. 11. Upon the pure table—So called, because it was made of pure gold. We keep the charge of the Lord our God—This he saith, either because he flattered himself that his keeping up the external worship of God would make full satisfaction for the errors of his life: Or, that he might hereby encourage his own soldiers, and terrify his enemies.

V. 12. God himself is with us, and his priests to cry alarm against you—Upon the sounding whereof God hath solemnly promised to assist his people. O children of Israel, fight ye not against the Lord God of your fathers—You have not only us for your enemies, but God, even the God whom your fathers honoured and served.

V. 13. Jeroboam caused an ambushment to come about behind them—Whilst Abijah was discoursing, Jeroboam lays an ambush.

V. 15. The men of Judah gave a shout: and God smote Jeroboam and all Israel—The king of Judah had before said, That God was with them, and his priests to cry an alarm, by which they expressed their faith in God's ancient promise of remembering and saving them. (Num. x 9.) They now gave a shout, and God was faithful to his word, and gave the victory to faith; and confounded the wisdom of the king of Israel, who thought to have surrounded the king of Judah's army, whilst he was speaking with him. How different the effects of faith, and of meer human policy? Conquest attends faith, whilst human wisdom leaves its possessors to perish.

V. 18. The children of Judah prevailed, because they relied upon the Lord—They put their trust in him, and confidently expected help from him. And what God did for them, he in mercy hath promised to do for all that truly rely upon him. The angel of the Lord shall encamp around them that fear him; and whatever their dangers or their difficulties are, and however near they may be, he is nearer still to all them that cast their care upon him; and God is not near to such as are an unconcerned observer of their fears, their difficulties, and their sufferings, but as an Almighty friend and Saviour, to all that hope in his mercy.

V. 20. The Lord struck him—Jeroboam, with some incurable disease. And he died—Not presently, but a year or two after this time.

V. 22. His ways, and his sayings, are written—And thus are all the ways and sayings of every rational soul of man, written in those books which shall be opened in the great day of the Lord; and according to which the dead shall be judged. (Rev. xx. 12.) Blessed are they whose ways and sayings are all in his fear, and in the spirit of that charity which shall endure when that life of faith, in which they lived, suffered, and died, shall be at an end.

CHAP. XIV.

V. 2—4. Asa commanded—By his royal edicts he required them to worship God and him only. He began his reign by shewing,

Before Christ cir. 951.

† Heb. sun-images.

6 ¶ And he built fenced cities in Judah: for the land had rest, and he had no war in those years; because the Lord had given him rest.

7 Therefore he said unto Judah, Let us build these cities, and make about them walls, and towers, gates, and bars, while the land is yet before us; because we have sought the Lord our God, we have sought him, and he hath given us rest on every side: so they built and prospered.

8 And Asa had an army of men that bare targets and spears, out of Judah three hundred thousand, and out of Benjamin, that bare shields and drew bows, two hundred and fourscore thousand: all these were mighty men of valour.

shewing, that the laws of God were to be made the rule of all their conduct.

V. 7. Let us build, while the land is yet before us—In our power. Let us work—live to the glory of God whilst it is to day, for the night cometh in which none can work.

V. 11. Lord, it is nothing with thee—With thee it is the same whether the means be small or great: If our end be but thy glory, thou canst help by those that have no power, as well as by the mighty and the wise; therefore, O Lord our God, who art thyself the governor of all things, we rest on thee against whom no wisdom or strength can prevail; and in thy name—By faith in our Advocate at the throne of grace, we go against this multitude—who are double our number. O Lord, thou art our God—Our head—in thee we live, and thy holy will is our work on earth, and therefore our cause is thine. Let not man—meer man—those that are unacquainted with thee, and neither acknowledge thee as their Creator, King, or Saviour, prevail against thee—Against us who regard thee in all the relations which thou hast graciously revealed thyself, as bearing to them that rest upon thee.

V. 12. So the Lord smote the Ethiopians—And thus will the Lord by his grace destroy and put to flight all that opposeth the peace, the purity, and the happiness of all that imitate Judah's faith in the Redeemer and Sanctifier of sinful men.

V. 13. They could not recover themselves—Yes, and hold fast that faith which is ever answered by all-sufficient grace, and pride, anger, self-will, and evil tempers and desires shall not recover themselves. The enemies thou hast seen, thou shalt see them no more again for ever. All power is to Jesus given, and he is unchangeably the same. Against him—against faith in him, shall not all that ever issued from the gates of hell prevail.

V. 14. The fear of the Lord came upon them—The sinful powers of darkness know and tremble at the fear of Him, that cast them down from that high glory in the heavens in which they dwelt, till they lifted up themselves against him. And when his holy Spirit falls on the most rebellious minds of sinful men, the tempting spirits fly at the Almighty Lord's approach, and those stand in the fear of God, who before were in rebellion against him.

V. 15. They carried away in abundance—Faith in the all-prevailing Mediator, not only brings deliverance from danger, and gives victory, but also enriches those that continue, by an humble reliance on God, to pursue the spiritual conquest. And as Judah returned with abundance, after their victory, to Jerusalem; so all that are faithful unto death—the redeemed of the Lord, shall return, and come with singing unto Zion above, the city of angels and God, and everlasting joy shall be upon their head: they shall obtain gladness, and joy, and sorrow, and mourning shall flee away. (Isai. li. 11.)

CHAP. XV.

V. 2. The Lord is with you—To defend you against all your enemies, as now you have seen, and you may hereafter expect, if you persist in that good course into which you are entered. But if ye forsake him, he will forsake you—But let not this victory make you presumptuous or self-confident; for if you leave God, he will leave you, and then you would fall before the feeblest of your spiritual foes; till at length left by that grace which gives desire after God, your fallen powers would deeper and deeper sink you into all the darkness, evil, and misery, which becomes the endless portion of souls, who have finally forsaken their proper end—Fellowship with the Father, and with his Son Christ Jesus. (1 John i. 3.)

V. 3. Without law—They have long lived without the knowledge and worship of the true God,—without looking unto him, who is the end of the law to all that Believe.

V. 4. But when they in their trouble sought him, he was found of them—Thus, whilst this life of trial lasts, troubles are made use of, as the merciful means of convincing sinners of the necessity, for their own sakes, of turning unto and seeking his favour, that they may be found of him.

V. 5. In those times—When Israel lived in the gross neglect and contempt of God, and his law and worship. There was no peace to him that went out, nor came in—Men could not go abroad without great danger.

V. 6. Nation was destroyed of nation—One part of the people of Israel destroyed the other by civil wars. Shewing, by the injuries which they did to one another, who were so nearly related, that natural bitterness and malice which there is in the minds of all mankind, till sovereign grace takes place, and creates them anew. God did vex them with all adversity—That as they would not obey his voice, and worship him as he required, they might be made examples to all the world of the truth of his word, which declares, There is no peace to the wicked.

V. 7. Be ye strong therefore—Go on therefore to maintain God's worship, as you have begun to do; for this is the only way to preserve yourselves from such calamities as your predecessors have felt. Let not your hands be weak—Be not discouraged with the opposition which you may meet with. Your work shall be rewarded—What you do for God, and for his honour and service, shall not go unrequited. God cannot deny himself; he will remain faithful to all that he hath promised to be and to do for them, who look to him through the God-man; and whatever struggles and temptations you may find within your own breasts, whilst your hearts are seeking him as a perfect Saviour, and devoting yourselves to his service, only go on to trust him, and you shall receive a full reward, in possessing the mind that was in him, which is the very nature of everlasting life begun on earth. (Phil. ii. 5. John xvii. 3.)

V. 8. Asa took courage—For it required great courage to put away all the idols, to which so great a number of his people were addicted, and among others, Maachah the queen, his mother, whom for this reason he deposed. He knew he must give no countenance to, but oppose those that were living in opposition to God, however great or near they were to him. And blessed are they who will accept and use that grace which gives humble, patient courage to the soul, and by which the world, the flesh, and the devil are overcome.

V. 9. They fell to him out of Israel in abundance, when they saw that the Lord his God was with him—Where the spirit of the Lord is with the head of any people, there is liberty, justice, power to protect, wisdom to advise, and a mind of compassion to do good to all; so that the Lord's being with any one, that is so exposed to the observation of all, hath for its certain consequence, the affectionate attachment of those, whose eyes the Lord hath opened to see the evidence of his presence.

V. 11. They offered unto the Lord—Thus expressing the sense they had of his unmerited goodness to them.

V. 12. They entered into a covenant—They engaged themselves by a solemn covenant before the Lord and this great assembly, To seek the Lord with all their heart, and with all their soul—As men convinced of the reality of those truths which God had revealed to them. And who that is wise would not imitate their example, and seek God with their whole heart and soul, if it was but known that there was so much as a possibility of obtaining the pardon of God—of being made a partaker of the holy and blessed communications of his Spirit, of being owned and favoured by him in this life, and before all the hosts of heaven, and be beloved as a Son of the adorable Father, Son and Spirit, for ever? (Rev. xxi. 7.)

V. 13. Whosoever would not seek the Lord God of Israel—Whosoever should obstinately refuse to pay unto God that solemn worship which he required at his temple in Jerusalem; or should disown God, or serve other gods. Should be put to death—By virtue of all those laws which command that such person should be cut off: and in pursuance of that law, that by this it might be shewn, that the wages of sin was death—death eternal, to disobey and dishonour God to the end of this state of trial. (Rom. vi. 23.)

Or, in the ways of David, and his fathers first ways: For the beginning of Asa's reign was laudable as we have seen, though he declined at last. For it seems more probable that this passage is a reflection upon Asa, whose last ways were much his worst, and of whose repentance we have no evidence, than upon David, who, though he fell dreadfully in the matter of Uriah, yet did manifestly repent of it, and return to his first and holy course of life, in which also he continued to his death; having this character given him by the Holy Ghost after his death, that he did right in all things, saving that of Uriah. V. 7. He sent to his princes, to teach in the cities of Judah—To inform the people of their duty, and of the king's pleasure, and to require them to observe and obey the laws of God, which were the municipal laws of that land: The particular explication whereof they left to the Levites and priests here following, who were sent for this end, and accordingly taught the people, verse 9.

V. 10. The fear of the Lord fell upon all the kingdoms round about Judah—Justly concluding from this singular piety, that God would eminently appear for him, and against all those who had ill will to him, which was their case. For even the heathens could not but observe that the kings of Judah were either prosperous or unhappy, accordingly as they served God or forsook him.

V. 13. He had much business in the cities of Judah—To repair and fortify them, and furnish them with all necessary provisions: and to purge out all the seeds of idolatry and injustice, which were more secretly managed in the cities than in the country, and which were first and most in the cities, and thence spread their infection into the country about them.

V. 7. There is no iniquity with the Lord our God, nor respect of persons—And therefore you are in God's stead, and do his work, and must give an account to him; must imitate God.

V. 8. Jehoshaphat set the chief of the fathers of Israel—Who were not priests and Levites, but such persons of other tribes as were most eminent for their dignity, ability, and integrity. For the judgment of the Lord—For sacred matters concerning the laws, and worship, and service of God. And for controversies—For matters of difference between man and man. When they returned to Jerusalem—When Jehoshaphat and his company were returned to Jerusalem, then he made this order concerning establishing judges there.

V. 9. Thus shall ye do in the fear of the Lord, faithfully, and with a perfect heart—Passing such sentences with your mouths, as your own minds and consciences, upon the hearing of the parties, shall judge to be just, and not acting against your own consciences, and against God's laws.

V. 10. Between law and commandment, statutes and judgments—When any differences shall arise about the meaning of any of God's laws, one party possibly putting this, and the other a different sense upon the same place, or one alledging one place, and the other another place, which may seem to clash with it. Ye shall even warn them that they trespass not against the Lord—Ye shall not only give a righteous sentence for what is past, but ye shall admonish the offender and others to take better heed to themselves for the future. This do, and ye shall not trespass—So you shall not bring guilt and wrath upon yourselves and others, which otherwise you will do.

V. 11. Amariah the chief priest is over you—Shall be your president to direct and assist you. In all matters of the Lord—In spiritual or ecclesiastical matters. For all the king's matters—For civil causes or controversies between the king and his people; or between subject and subject, which may be called the king's matters, because it was a principal part of his office to see them justly decided. The Levites shall be officers before you—They shall be at your command to see your just sentences executed. Deal courageously, and the Lord shall be with the good—Shall protect and bless you, in doing that which is just and good.

CHAP. XX.

V. 2. From beyond the sea—The dead sea.

V. 3. Jehoshaphat feared—From human frailty, and from the remembrance of his own guilt, and the wrath of God denounced against him for it, chap. xix. 2. And set himself to seek the Lord—The phrase notes his settled resolution, seriousness, and earnestness in it, and the preparing and fixing his heart for it. And proclaimed a fast—In token of his humiliation and penitence for his sins, and to make himself and his people more fervent in their prayers.

V. 4. Judah gathered themselves together, to ask help of the Lord—To ask wisdom as to the measures they should take, and then assistance in doing that which was agreeable to the will of God. They came to seek the Lord—Knowing that without him none were either wise or strong.

V. 5. Jehoshaphat stood before the new court—Which is called the new court, because it had been lately renewed when the altar was renewed, as the command of love is called a new command, (John xiii. 34. 1 John ii. 8.) because it was so solemnly renewed and reinforced by Christ.

V. 6. Judah, in seeking help from the Lord, begins with acknowledging his power to do whatever pleaseth him.

V. 7. They then lay claim to God as their God by his covenant with Abraham; and by this they shew, that they only hoped for the mercies of God, for the sake of the promised Seed and Saviour.

V. 9. As

9 [d] If when evil cometh upon us, as the sword, judgment, or peſtilence, or famine, we ſtand before this houſe, and in thy preſence, (for thy name is in this houſe) and cry unto thee in our affliction, then thou wilt hear and help.

10 And now, behold, the children of Ammon, and Moab, and mount Seir, whom thou [e] wouldeſt not let Iſrael invade, when they came out of the land of Egypt, but [f] they turned from them, and deſtroyed them not:

V. 9. As the ſword, judgment—Or, rather, the ſword of judgment, or of vengeance—War, whereby thou judgeſt and puniſheſt thy people for their ſins. (Lev. xxvi. 25.)

V. 12. We have no might againſt this great company that cometh againſt us—Thus he ſpeaks, becauſe he well knew, and piouſly and wiſely conſidered, that no human forces, though numerous and valiant, were able to defend him without God's aſſiſtance, which he feared by his ſins he had forfeited. Neither know we what to do—In our diſtreſs; for if we are forſaken of thee, what we judge our wiſeſt courſe may be made the moſt ſpeedy means of our own deſtruction. But our eyes are upon thee—Looking unto thee alone for help.

V. 13. All Judah ſtood before the Lord, with their little ones—Whom they uſed to preſent before the Lord in times of great diſtreſs, to ſtir up themſelves to more fervent and faithful prayers, that their eye being upon their harmleſs and tender children, might affect their heart with a greater ſenſe of their miſery: and partly to move God to compaſſion, not as if he were capable of paſſions or changes upon ſuch a ſight, but becauſe God hath declared himſelf, that he will be prevailed with by ſuch open acknowledgments of diſtreſs, and of their entire need of and dependance upon the Divine aſſiſtance.

V. 14. Then upon Jahaziel came the ſpirit of the Lord in the midſt of the congregation—He was ſuddenly inſpired by God with the following meſſage, in anſwer to their ſupplications.

V. 15. Thus ſaith the Lord, Be not afraid, for the battle is not yours, but God's—It belongeth unto him to give victory; and as public wars are his judgments upon the nations that are engaged in them, for their public offences againſt God, whenever any that are thus viſited, turn unto him by true repentance, and caſt themſelves upon the care of God, then to that nation the purpoſe for which God afflicted is anſwered, and he charges himſelf with all that concerns them, and the battle becomes the Lord's, that it may appear to all, though the nature of the Divine government is not the immediate object of ſight, but the ſubject of faith, that God is king for ever, and ruleth, by his infinite wiſdom, power, juſtice, and goodneſs, over all the kingdoms of the earth.

V. 17. The Lord will be with you—The whole of the anſwer from God to the prayers of the king and people of Judah, contained all, and perhaps much more than even any of them expected, whoſe hearts, by the grace of God, had the largeſt views of his mercy to all them that look to him as the God of Abraham—God in covenant with the whole human race for the ſake of the God-man Chriſt Jeſus. After being told the time and manner of their enemies approach, and then directed to ſtand ſtill—To watchfully obſerve the manifeſtation of God's faithfulneſs and power; the gracious anſwer concludes with the aſſurance, that God himſelf would be with them; and where he is with any perſon or people, there is more of ſafety, ſtrength, and of all that can help or bleſs, than can be aſked or even thought of, becauſe where God is, there is infinite wiſdom, power, and goodneſs.

V. 18. Jehoſhaphat bowed to the ground—In token of his reverence to God and his meſſage, his belief of the promiſe, and his thankfulneſs for ſo great a favour.

V. 19. The Levites ſtood up to praiſe the Lord with a loud voice on high—With heart and voice lifted up: whereby they ſhewed their full aſſurance of the victory, as if it were already accompliſhed.

V. 20. Jehoſhaphat ſtood and ſaid, Hear me, O Judah, Believe in the Lord your God; believe his prophets, ſo ſhall ye proſper—Take heed, leſt by your unbelief you fruſtrate God's promiſes, which are all made to faith, that all his goodneſs may evidently appear to be of grace—the free gift of God, for the ſake of the Son of his love—man's Mediator at the throne of grace; of the benefits of whoſe continual interceſſion, nothing but unbelief, and its ſinful conſequences, can deprive you. And in this exhortation of the king of Judah's, to his ſubjects, to believe in the Lord, that they might be eſtabliſhed and proſper, he does that which Moſes and all the prophets, the Lord himſelf, and all his apoſtles and meſſengers did, and in his word ever do declare as with one voice, ſaying, Hear, O ye inhabitants of the earth. Believe in the Lord your God, as ever preſent, willing, and able to ſave—Believe it according to his faithful word, containing thouſands of exceeding great and precious promiſes, accompanied with thouſands of examples

Before Christ 896. hites, stood up to praise the Lord God of Israel with a loud voice on high.

20 ¶ And they rose early in the morning, and went forth into the wilderness of Tekoa: and as they went forth, Jehoshaphat stood and said, Hear me, O Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, [v] Believe in the Lord your God, so shall you be established; believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper.

21 And when he had consulted with the people, he appointed singers unto the Lord, [n] and § that should praise the beauty of holiness, as they went out before the army, and to say, [o] Praise the Lord, [p] for his mercy endureth for ever.

22 ¶ ‖ And when they began * to sing and to praise, [q] the Lord set ambushments against the children of Ammon, Moab, and mount Seir, which were come against Judah, and † they were smitten.

23 For the children of Ammon and Moab, stood up against the inhabitants of mount Seir, utterly to slay and destroy them: and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped ‡ to destroy another.

24 And when Judah came toward the watch-tower in the wilderness, they looked unto the multitude, and behold, they were dead bodies fallen to the earth, and § none escaped.

25 And when Jehoshaphat and his people came to take away the spoil of them, they found among them in abundance both riches with the dead bodies, and precious jewels, (which they stript off for themselves) more than they could carry away: and they were three days in gathering of the spoil, it was so much. Before Christ 896.

26 ¶ And on the fourth day they assembled themselves in the valley of ‖ Berachah; for there they blessed the Lord: therefore the name of the same place was called, The valley of Berachah, unto this day.

27 Then they returned every man of Judah and Jerusalem, and Jehoshaphat in the * forefront of them, to go again to Jerusalem with joy: for the Lord had made them to rejoice over their enemies.

28 And they came to Jerusalem with psalteries, and harps, and trumpets, unto the house of the Lord.

29 And [r] the fear of God was on all the kingdoms of those countries, when they had heard that the Lord fought against the enemies of Israel.

30 So the realm of Jehoshaphat was quiet; for his God gave him rest round about.

31 ¶ [s] And Jehoshaphat reigned over Judah: he was thirty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and five years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Azubah the daughter of Shilhi.

32 And he walked in the way of Asa his father, and departed not from it, doing that which was right in the sight of the Lord:

33 Howbeit, [t] the high places were not taken away; for as yet the people had not prepared their hearts unto the God of their fathers.

amples to prove their truth in all the concerns of men like yourselves—Believe in the Lord according to his word, so shall your hearts be established with grace, so shall ye prosper, by possessing that kingdom which is not in word, but in power, and ever accompanied, in the minds of all that possess it, with peace, and joy, and love.

V. 21. When he had consulted with the people—With the elders or chief of the people, to take their advice about the expediency of the thing; and that they might excite and prepare themselves and the people under them to this great work of praising God. He appointed singers unto the Lord—To the honour and service of God. That should praise the beauty of holiness—Or, the glory or majesty of holiness, (i. e.) The holy majesty of God.

V. 22. And when they began to sing and to praise—Thus shewing their cheerful confidence in God, and going joyfully into that service, which the Lord had declared was his own. The Lord set ambushments against the children of Ammon, Moab, and mount Seir, and they were smitten—God having left them to themselves, and to the power of their own natural jealousies and passions, they first broke forth into secret ambushments, which one party laid for another, and then into open hostilities and outrages to their utter destruction. So vain are all men's attempts against God, who needs none to destroy his enemies but themselves, and their own mistakes and passions, which he can, when he pleaseth, arm against them.

V. 25. Jehoshaphat and his people found among them in abundance both riches and precious jewels—Which they brought with them, because they came as to a triumph, rather than to a fight, being secure and confident of the victory, because of their great numbers, and because they thought to surprize Jehoshaphat ere he could make any considerable preparations against them; God making them an example of that destruction, which, sooner or later, will befall the self-confident.

V. 26. They assembled themselves in the valley of Berachah—Of blessing; so called from their solemn blessings and praises given to God in it upon this occasion.

V. 28. They came to Jerusalem, unto the house of the Lord—To renew their praises in the court of the temple, the proper and usual place for it. And that all who had joined in prayer to God, that did not go with the army, might now unite in praising the Lord God of their salvation, and of their present deliverance.

V. 33. The high places were not taken away—Not fully nor universally. Some secret pride and self-pleasing still remained amongst them.

V. 35. After this did Jehoshaphat king of Judah join himself with Ahaziah king of Israel, who did very wickedly—This is mentioned as an aggravation of his sin, after so great a favour and obligation laid upon him by God; and after he had before been so sharply reproved by a prophet for the same thing, chap. xix. 2. yet he relapsed into the same sin; which proceeded partly from that near relation which was contracted between the two families, and partly from the sweetness and easiness of Jehoshaphat's temper, which could not resist the solicitations of others, in such things as might seem indifferent. For he did not join with him in a war, as he did with Ahab, but in a peaceable way only in a matter of trade and commerce. And yet God sharply reproves and punisheth him for it, verse 37. to shew his great dislike and detestation of all friendly and familiar conversation of his servants and people with professed enemies of God and of religion, as Ahaziah was, who is therefore thus stigmatized in the next words, who did very wickedly. Or, who did industriously, and maliciously, and constantly work wickedness, giving himself up to idolatry and all wickedness. For those that profess true religion, to enter into friendship with such as are known or believed to be at enmity with God, by the careless or wilful commission of sin, is to shew, whatever may be professed, that the mind hath forgot that God is of purer eyes than to behold sin in any with favour; and that all who do but so much as name his name are required by him to come from among the wicked—to depart from all iniquity themselves, and to keep at the greatest distance from those that work it.

CHAP. XXI.

V. 2. Azariah—Two sons called by the same name, though doubtless distinguished by some additional title.

V. 4. He strengthened himself—Not in the Lord, or that power which cometh from above, which ever sheweth itself in charity to all men, but he strengthened himself in that power which is from beneath, which ruleth in the children of disobedience, and is set on fire of hell, and sheweth itself in cruelty, and in every wicked work. And slew all his brethren, and divers also of the princes of Israel—The chief of those Israelites who, out of love to God and to the true religion, had forsaken their estates and worldly advantages in the kingdom of Israel, and were now incorporated with the kingdom of Judah. These he especially struck at, because he justly thought these would be most firm, and constant to, and zealous for that religion, which he was resolved to oppose.

V. 7. Because of the covenant that he had made with David, and as he promised—Not for David's merits, but for God's free promise and covenant.

V. 10. The same time also did Libnah revolt from under his hand: because he had forsaken the Lord God of his fathers—Because he had forsaken God: God raised up so many enemies against him, both from abroad and at home. His rebellion against God was the true cause of their rebellion against him.

V. 11. He was not contented with being a public example of wickedness, but he made use of force to prevail with his people to walk in his steps, and join with him in the service of satan. By the opposite characters that are placed before us in the Sacred History, the Spirit of the Lord and the nature of satan are made manifest; the Lord's, by producing whatever is just, true, good, and happy; satan's, by all that is the contrary.

887. AND [a] in the seventh year Jehoiada strengthened himself, and took the captains of hundreds, Azariah the son of Jeroham, and Ishmael the son of Jehohanan, and Azariah the son of Obed, and Maaseiah the son of Adaiah, and Elishaphat the son of Zichri, into covenant with him.

V. 17. The princes made obeisance to the king—Presenting their requests to him, that they might not be confined to unnecessary journies in coming to Jerusalem to worship, but might have the liberty, which their forefathers enjoyed, of worshipping God in the high places. Which liberty, when once they had obtained, they knew they could then worship idols, which was the thing at which they aimed. And for the prevention of such abuses, God obliged all to worship him in one place, in token of that spiritual worship which he requires of all—That they should bring all outward means and duties to the worship of the heart, and there sanctify their God and Saviour.

V. 19. He sent prophets to them—To call them to repentance, and to live to Him who made and died for them, and to their own present and endless peace and blessedness. But they would not give ear—Did not the Lord know this before he sent his servants? His word declares his great and gracious design in the salvation of all; but this neglected or refused, then all God's calls to sinful men, are to vindicate that justice, which, in the day of his wrath, will award the dreadful sentence. O reader, whoever you are, whatever you think you have to do in this world, slight not the messages, the calls of God to you; and look for these calls by ways and means which may be but little thought of by mankind in general, especially the wise, the rich, and the great, who of old looked upon the very prophets of God as men that were mad, and called the Saviour of the world, this fellow. (John ix. 29.)

V. 20. Thus saith God, Why transgress ye the commandments of the Lord, that ye cannot prosper—They being in their very nature the good of all that obey them, prosperity can never attend disobedience to the commands of God.

V. 21. They—The people to whom he preached, who were influenced by the examples of their apostate king and princes, as these again were influenced by satan, to destroy the faithful servant of God.

V. 22. The Lord look upon it, and require it—Make inquisition for my innocent blood. Which he did not wish from any desire of private revenge, with which so wise and good a man would never be willing to die; but from a zeal to public justice, and the punishment of such gross wickedness; and to deter them, if possible, from compleating their murderous intentions.

V. 23. It came to pass at the end of the year—So soon did God hear the cry of this holy prophet's blood, and revenge it. The host of Syria came, and destroyed all the princes from among the people—That it might appear they were sent and directed by God, to single out to destruction the first beginners and chief promoters of this general apostacy.

V. 24. When the kings and people of Judah were living to God, then they conquered many by few; but when they neglect God, and depart from his ways, a great host of Judah is delivered into the hand of a small company of the enemies, God armed with strength against them, to punish them for their contempt of all that power and goodness which God had given such proofs of, in every age of their forefathers.

V. 25. His own servants conspired against him, and slew him on his bed—Thus, by the wickedness of those that were about him, was he punished for his own wickedness. As a man soweth, so shall he reap. But who can estimate the greatness of God's severity? (Rev. xxi. 8.)

V. 27. Concerning the greatness of the burdens laid upon him—Either the severe prophecies against him, which are called burdens; or the great judgments of God upon him.

CHAP. XXV.

V. 2. He did that which was right, but not with a perfect heart—He had a divided heart. This may be that state of mind, which thinks God's laws the wisest and the holiest, and a regard to them the best policy; but which in regarding them hath some end in view besides that of the glory of God; and when the eye ceases to be single, the mind that thinks God does not see, will soon be in darkness too thick to see God, either as Father, Redeemer, Sanctifier, Judge, or King. And by not serving God with a perfect heart, may be understood, that state of mind which divides God's great salvation between him and itself; the refined pride of the soul being deceived into the belief, that in its usefulness, piety, or merciful deeds in some degree or other, a foundation may be laid for the mercy and favour of God, besides that which he himself hath laid in the one Mediator between God and man, and the only Redeemer of all that are saved. If my soul doth not rest upon the blood and righteousness of Christ Jesus, as the sole meritorious cause of my present, future, and eternal salvation, (1 Cor. iii. 11.) I am not building upon that rock against which the gates of hell shall not prevail, but upon that sand, which the fierce winds of temptation, and the rushing torrents of corruption will one day sweep away, and leave all that was built upon the false foundation to sink, and fall, and perish.

V. 7. The Lord is not with Israel—He hath forsaken them, and, for their sakes, will curse thy forces if thou joinest thyself with them.

V. 8. God shall make thee fall before the enemy—If thou wilt proceed any farther in thy expectation of being saved or supported by any other than the Lord alone. For God hath power to help all that trust in him, and to cast down—All who put their trust in any thing that is not God.

V. 9. But what shall we do for the hundred talents—Must all that I have done go for nothing? Yes, and you must hold it of the mercy of the Lord that you are not consumed, if ever you would join the Redeemed of the Lord, to praise God and the Lamb for ever. And the man of God answered, The Lord is able to give thee much more than this—Thy Father and Redeemer, by the Holy Spirit, can give thee a better righteousness than any that thou canst make for thyself; for separate from his grace received through faith, all is sin, and therefore as much to be parted with and for ever shunned, as that eternal death to which all sin leads.

V. 10. Amaziah separated them—As the truly believing mind separates faith, and what are so often and so mistakenly called good works; but not otherwise are they separated than the tree and the fruit it leaves, and which, nourished from the Rock on which it grows, it continues to bear in greater plenty and perfection, till it is transplanted to bear immortal fruit in his presence who made it what it is. They returned home in great anger—Though they had got the hundred talents. Why then angry? Why are proud, self-righteous, mistaken sinners angry, with such as only trust for salvation to the unmerited love of God to man, for the sake of his Son—Jesus, the sinner's advocate and friend? Israel could not bear, without anger, to be looked upon as dangerous allies to Judah, as those that would ruin their cause with God, as much as every self-confident principle does in the soul that entertains it.

V. 13. The

The king thought he had a right to enter into the holy place, and to appear before the altar of the Lord, though he was not consecrated to the service of the sanctuary. And it is in this spirit souls are led to think, that of themselves they have a right to enter into that holy place, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, in an unsanctified state of mind. This example is doubtless to shew us the danger of this presumption.

* Heb was right in the eyes of the king.

5 So they established a decree, to make proclamation throughout all Israel, from Beer-sheba even to Dan, that they should come to keep the passover unto the Lord God of Israel at Jerusalem: for they had not done it of a long time in such sort as it was written.

6 So the posts went with the letters [†] from the king and his princes throughout all Israel and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, saying, Ye children of Israel, turn again unto the Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and he will return to the remnant of you, that are escaped out of the hand of [d] the kings of Assyria.

V. 34. The Levites were more upright in heart, to sanctify themselves, than the priests—And God makes use of those in his sacred service, whose hearts are devoted to his holy will. They who, for the very short and uncertain remains of this life, give themselves to God to do and suffer his will, shall soon, without respect of persons, receive all that God hath promised—They shall be kings and priests unto God, and go no more out of his presence for ever.

V. 36. The thing was done suddenly—It was, as a very great, so a sudden change that the people, who but the other day were so ready to comply with wicked Ahaz in his idolatrous and impious prescriptions, were now so free and forward in God's service: Whereby it plainly appeared to be the work of the Almighty God changing their hearts by his Holy Spirit. Hezekiah's reformation was begun with cleaning the temple, and by offering sacrifice, and dedicating himself and his people to the Lord; and with the temple of the heart must all begin that reformation, which prepares them to offer by faith the great sacrifice, and to give themselves to God.

CHAP. XXX.

V. 1. Hezekiah sent to all Israel and Judah, that they should come to the house of the Lord—Thus imitating and shewing to all, the nature of God's gracious dealings with mankind: Willing all to be saved, he includes the whole in the compassionate invitation—Look unto me all ye ends of the earth, and be ye saved—Come unto me all ye that are weary of nature's sinful load, and be freely saved by grace. They shall call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins. The highest and the lowest of the human race, that will but owe the mighty obligation to the man of sorrows, may by him be saved from the effects of their fall and the wrath due to their sins.

V. 2. The king had taken counsel—Though the grace that suggested the first great design might in one moment enter the mind of the king, but going on by faith from grace to grace, he deliberately perseveres in promoting the glory of God, and all his people's good. For these ends he took counsel. And from this part of the Sacred word, may we not raise our minds to the throne of grace which it describes, and humbly and thankfully adore that counsel, which said, Let us make man? and with the full knowledge of the abuse of all his noblest powers, and of all that sin into which the soul of man hath sunk by its fall, then to take counsel by what means to redeem and to make it known to all that will hear—This is my beloved Son, hear ye him; for whose sake ye shall have mercy, for whose sake ye shall have grace to restore you to the nature in which the first man was made, and in which ye shall dwell in endless glory.

V. 4. The thing pleased the king—God was pleased with all the works he had made when he created the world in which we live; but all that concerns the salvation of precious and immortal souls, is ever spoken of as God's glory and delight: And as all the congregation of Israel and Judah were pleased with the thing the king did, so is there joy in the presence of the angels of God, in the church triumphant above, over even one sinner that repenteth, that forsakes sin and turns unto God. (Luke xv. 10.)

V. 5. For they had not done it of a long time in such sort as it was written—So as God had commanded them to do it, That all the males in Israel should do it: Which express command of God they ought to have obeyed, rather than the wicked commands of men to the contrary.

V. 8. Yield yourselves—Give yourselves to him by obeying his command, and renew your covenant with him. Enter into his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for ever—Not for a transient and temporary use, but as long as the state and church of Israel had a being.

V. 9. The Lord your God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him—And will God again receive me, and be reconciled to me, saith the self-condemned sinner against light and truth? Yes, saith that word, which is more to be regarded for stability than the everlasting mountains, The Lord your God is gracious—It is his nature to shew mercy, to

Before Christ 726.

9 For if ye turn again unto the Lord, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, so that they shall come again into this land: [e] for the Lord your God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him.

[e] Exod. 34. 6.

10 So the posts passed from city to city, through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh, even unto Zebulun: but they laughed them to scorn, and mocked them.

[*] 2 So Chap. 11. 16 Ver. 18.

11 Nevertheless, [i] divers of Asher and Manasseh, and of Zebulun, humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem.

12 Also in Judah the hand of God was to give them one heart, to do the commandment [r] Chap. 29. 25. of the king and of the princes, [r] by the word of the Lord.

13 ¶ And there assembled at Jerusalem much people, to keep the feast of unleavened bread in the second month, a very great congregation.

[s] Chap. 28. 24.

14 And they arose, and took away the [s] altars that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into the brook Kidron.

15 Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month: and the priests and the Levites were ashamed, and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt-offerings into the house of the Lord. Before Christ 726.

16 And they stood in § their place after their manner, according to the law of Moses the man of God: the priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites. § Heb. their standing.

17 For there were many in the congregation that were not sanctified: [i] therefore the Levites had the charge of the killing of the passovers, for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto the Lord. i Chap. 29. 34.

18 For a multitude of the people, even many of Ephraim, and Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, had not cleansed themselves, [l] yet did they eat the passover, otherwise than it was written: but Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, The good Lord pardon every one [k] Ver. 11. [l] Exod. 12. 43, &c.

19 That prepareth his heart to seek God, the Lord God of his fathers, though he be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary.

forgive and save. Had not this been the mind of our God, he need only have left us without the Son of his love in our nature, to atone for our sins to his justice, and then the whole of Adam's race would have stood exposed to his wrath, as to a consuming fire; but grace and peace is intended the chief of sinners from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ, who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this world of sin within and without, and this is the will of God and of our Father for Christ's sake; (Gal. i.) once more therefore believe that God will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him—Believe in the Lord your God, so shall you again be established; believe his word, so shall ye prosper in power over sin, peace in believing, and in joy in the Holy Ghost.

V. 10. They laughed them to scorn, and mocked them—(i. e.) The generality of the ten tribes, who, by long want, had now lost all their appetite to God's ordinances, and from a neglect were now fallen into a contempt and derision of them. This laughing and mocking at the king's messengers, is a discovery of the enmity of the human heart in its natural state against God and the things of God. Though the invitation to join in the public worship came from the king, they despised it. And in general they remained in the same state of mind, till their whole nation was led away into captivity. (2 Kings xviii. 10.)

V. 11. Nevertheless, divers humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem—So that this invitation was not altogether in vain. Some saw the need they were in of obtaining the mercy of God, and humbled themselves under a sense of their sins, and bearing the reproach of those that mocked the messengers that came to them, they went up to Jerusalem to worship God. It appears by the contempt which many shewed on this occasion, that wherever the spirit of true religion is, though a king is at the head of it, and the place to which all are invited is the national church, the messengers of it will be despised.

V. 12. In Judah the hand of God was to give them one heart, by the word of the Lord—God, by the power of his grace, inclined their hearts to an unanimous compliance with God's will. And this is mentioned as the reason of this wonderful change wrought in these men, who had lately been utterly averse from God's worship, and wholly given up to idolatry.

V. 15. The priests and the Levites were ashamed—Their negligence and remissness being upbraided by the great and general alacrity and forwardness of the people.

V. 16. The priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites—Who killed the sacrifices which the priests, if they had been sanctified, should have done. The priesthood under the law was but the type of the Mediator's everlasting priesthood; but both the priests and kings, though they were the best types of the Lord, yet in many things they shewed how little they regarded the souls for which their Saviour died; and in their offices and stations dishonoured him by their negligence and their misconduct, whom in all things they were required to represent to the people by their lives: but however those that were charged with the duties of these offices, might at any time be unconcerned as to the true worship of God, and the happiness of the people, there never was, nor never is, a moment in which mankind have not an high priest in the person of the Messiah of the Jews, and in Jesus the Saviour of the world, and never a moment in which he does not feel their infirmities, (Heb. iv. 15.) and wait to be gracious to all that fear him, look to him, or hope in his mercy.

V. 18. Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, The good Lord pardon every one—That comes as he is, and ventures upon thee for mercy. And thus the sinner's Advocate with the Father prays for all the fallen race.

V. 19. Though he be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary—With that ceremonial purification which was required of them that came into God's sanctuary. So he calls it to distinguish from moral and internal purity. The same as if the king had said, Good Lord, pardon every one, that now seeks to be reconciled to thee, though he appears before thee in a state in which thy justice, and according to thy holy law, he might be rejected and sent away with a curse instead of thy blessing.

V. 20. The Lord hearkened to Hezekiah, and healed the people—By pardoning their sin, and accepting them and their services as if they had been clean. They now worshipped him by faith in the Redeemer, whom they saw in their sacrifice, as the sole cause of their pardon and acceptance; and they that do so have the benefits of that atonement which Jesus made to the justice of God. Sin is not then imputed to them for his sake in whom they believe, and he with the pardon communicates the grace that converts the soul. But surely all these thousands of Israel and Judah were not brought to the knowledge of the pardoning love of God together. Hezekiah their king, and the type of the Messiah, prayed that God would pardon every one; and the Lord hearkened and healed the people. And supposing a nation was born unto God in a day, shall the narrow unbelieving mind, say, This is too much for infinite love to do for souls who must be miserable for ever, if not saved by his grace before the last moment of their life of trial arrives?

V. 22. Hezekiah spake comfortably unto all the Levites—Encouraged them to a cheerful and diligent attendance upon their holy ministrations by the promise of his favour and utmost care for them, which he faithfully performed, chap. xxxi. 4. That taught the good knowledge of the Lord—Who, by their office, were to instruct and build up the people in their most holy faith: Which is mentioned as the cause of his respect and kindness to them, which was for their works sake. And they made confession of their sins unto the Lord; God's dealings with penitent minds being ever the same, and to them that confess their sins, he is faithful and just to forgive them their sins, and to do that further gracious work of cleansing them from all unrighteousness. (1 John i. 9.)

V. 23. They kept other seven days with gladness—As earnest worshippers, unwilling to part till they had received the full assurance of faith, and till they, in obedience to the great command, loved the Lord their God with all their heart.

V. 24. Hezekiah did give to the congregation a thousand bullocks—First to God, to whom the parts appointed were offered, and then to the people. Hezekiah, who was the offerer, gave away his right in the remains of the sacrifices to the people. And by a part of the sacrifice being given to God and consumed upon the altar, and the other part made use of by the worshippers, that truth is represented which is the end of all worship—Being joined in one Spirit to the Lord; meeting him by faith in the person of the God-man, having fellowship with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ. (1 John i. 3.)

V. 9. Hezekiah questioned with the priests—How it came to pass that no more of their provision was spent, and that there yet remained such great heaps of it.

V. 18. Their little ones, their wives, and their sons, and their daughters, through all the congregation—This is alledged as a reason why their wives and children were provided for out of the holy things, because they sequestered themselves from worldly affairs, by which they might otherwise have provided for their families, and intirely devoted themselves to the service of God in sacred things; and on this account God would have them supported out of the gifts and offerings that were made by the pious worshippers, whom the Lord blessed, and as he hath declared, ever does bless, all that aid and forward whatever concerns or belongs to his spiritual kingdom. Two mites or a cup of cold water given by faith—with an eye to please God, to any that belong to God, is noticed by him. Let others do as they may, blessed will they be who labour, save, and cheerfully give, according to the ability which God hath given them, to maintain his public service, and the helpless members of his living church on earth. And thrice blessed are they, who, with his public servants of old, sanctify themselves in holiness, to spread the knowledge of his holy will, and his praise below, and who do, with them, cast their little ones, wives, sons, daughters upon his gracious care, who careth for them; and this with a full persuasion that God, by his compassione care, and holy consolations in this life, and by his favour for ever, will richly recompense all, who willingly become poor, that they may be the means, in their blessed Master's hands, of making many wise unto salvation.

V. 20, 21. Thus did Hezekiah, in every work to seek his God—This was the end he had in view in all he did, to seek to know more of his God, to see more of his wise, just, and good government in the world, and of his gracious dealings with all that worshipped

Small things done to God, are returned with hundred-fold blessings. This is the day of salvation. This night the moment may come, when crosses small or great, or acts of self-denial, can no more be performed to please him on whose favour rests eternal glory. What would not the world be for justice, mercy, truth, peace, and charity, if all in their several stations from this day begun and continued in the spirit of king Hezekiah's example, living with a whole heart to please Him whose nature is holiness, justice, mercy, truth, peace, and love? Why should I wait for the dearest friend I have, to set out in his service of perfect freedom before me? The best proof of friendship to all the world, is to enter into the way, and to walk in the very footsteps of that example which Jesus, as very man, gave to all mankind, that every immortal soul might see how God himself would live the life of man on earth, till he again ascended to his own glory.

CHAP. XXXII.

V. 1. After these things and the establishment thereof—An emphatical preface, signifying, that notwithstanding all his pious care and zeal for God, yet God saw fit to exercise him with a sore trial and calamity; which yet he turned to his great honour and advantage. And thought to win them for himself—He designed and bragged that he would win them: but there was one above him, whom he did not know, and without whose leave, mighty as he was, he could do nothing.

V. 4. Why should the kings of Assyria come, and find much water—Which was scarce in this country, and the want of it might much annoy the Assyrian army. And is it not thus with those that are not of the number of the spiritual Israel?—Are not all the waters—the pure streams and rivers of grace stopped to them that do not worship God in spirit and truth, though they are in the very midst of his people, as the Assyrians were in the land of Judah?

V. 8. The people rested themselves upon the words of Hezekiah king of Judah—And these are the words of the Redeemer of Israel, the God of the whole earth, who saith to all his spiritual subjects—Only remain within the walls and strong towers of faith, and the approaching boasting enemy shall not hurt you; for the LORD Jehovah, your God, in covenant with you by his sacred promise to his Son your Saviour, shall help you, and fight your battles: And to which, faith answers—I rest myself upon the word of my God. This do, and continue so to do, and then see the sure token of your present, future, and everlasting safety in the sacred history of the inhabitants of Jerusalem; which is not of private interpretation, but written for our instruction, and publicly belongs, by the faithful promise of their heavenly Father, to all that stay themselves upon him as their Redeemer and Deliverer.

V. 10. Thus saith Sennacherib king of Assyria, Whereon do ye trust—And thus does satan address himself, as a spirit, to the spirits of them that are humbly resting themselves upon the word of God, saying, Hath God said so?—It is not his word; or, if it is, it belongs not to you to rest upon it.

Before Christ 710. have done unto all the people of other lands? were the gods of the nations of those lands any ways able to deliver their lands out of mine hand?

14 Who was there among all the gods of those nations, that my fathers utterly destroyed, that could deliver his people out of mine hand, that your God should be able to deliver you out of mine hand?

15 Now therefore let not Hezekiah deceive you, nor persuade you on this manner, neither yet believe him: for no god of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people out of mine hand, and out of the hand of my fathers: how much less shall your God deliver you out of mine hand?

16 And his servants spake yet more against the Lord God, and against his servant Hezekiah.

h 2 Kings 19. 9. 17 h He wrote also letters to rail on the Lord God of Israel, and to speak against him, saying, As the gods of the nations of other lands have not delivered their people out of mine hand, so shall not the God of Hezekiah deliver his people out of mine hand.

V. 15. How shall your God deliver you—Seeing I have destroyed so many nations, and some of them stronger than you, in spite of all their gods; it is not probable that your God should defend you, which none of the rest could do for their people.

V. 18. They cried in the Jews speech, to affright them, and to trouble them—The boasting language he had used, agrees with that which satan used to the Lord in his temptation; (Luke iv. 6.) and the language in which the tempter speaks to the mind by his spirit, is that which is as well understood as the Jews did their own language, though it is always the design of satan to hide himself from the knowledge of all he tempts: he sends by some to speak his language of unbelief, like the Assyrian king; but as the voice of the holy Spirit is ever to be known by its speaking assurance of God's favour and peace to the humble believing mind, so is satan's tempting voice to be known by its suggesting distrust of God, doubts and unbelief, and always tending to affright and trouble.

V. 19. The Assyrian monarch would exalt himself above all, and so would he who wanted to reign on the sides of the north, and all that are yet in his spirit. This is that spirit of Antichrist of which the visible figure is still shewn to the world in papal Rome, but which is also in every human heart, till convincing grace casts down every high thought—every proud self-confident imagination.

V. 20, 21. Hezekiah the king, and the prophet Isaiah, prayed and cried to heaven. And the Lord sent an angel which cut off all the mighty men, and the leaders and captains of the king of Assyria: so he returned with shame—And is not satan thus sent away, when the spirit of the Believer's king and prophet cries to heaven, where the head of his people ever appears before the throne of grace, to receive gifts for men, and send deliverance down? When the boasting king returned, those that came forth of his own bowels slew him—That he might be an example how much all boasting is to be excluded from the earth; and also an example of the increasing misery and ruin of those spirits which presume to lift themselves up against God, and all that put their trust in him; and that the destruction of the wicked proceed from themselves.

V. 22. Thus the Lord saved Hezekiah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and guided them on every side—The king exhorted them to trust in the Lord, and the people rested themselves upon his word, and thus were they delivered, saved, and shut in by the Lord on every side.

V. 23. Hezekiah was magnified in the sight of all nations—And thus is the truth of that word proved, which saith—They that honour the Lord shall be honoured by him.

V. 24. Hezekiah was sick, and prayed unto the Lord: and he gave him a sign—To assure him that he heard and would answer his prayer under his personal affliction, as before he had done, during the public danger he and his subjects were in, from the invasion of the king of Assyria.

V. 25. Hezekiah rendered not again, according to the benefit done unto him—He did not acknowledge the unmerited goodness of God to him, nor praise him for his mercy. 2 But from God, and to him all the honour and the praise belongs: To me only shame and confusion of face, and before now I must have been driven from his favour and presence for ever, if his infinite mercy had not kept back, what infinite justice must otherwise have inflicted on me for want of love, gratitude, and devotion to the will of God. His heart was lifted up—For that prodigious victory over the Assyrians, and for his miraculous restoration from sickness, and the confirmation of that work, by a strange and supernatural motion of the sun; and by the honour since done him by an embassy from the great king of Babylon. All which raised in him too great an opinion of himself, as if these things were done, if not by his power, yet, at least, for his piety and virtues. And instead of walking humbly with God, and giving the glory of all intirely to him, he took the honour to himself, and vain-gloriously shewed his riches to the Babylonish ambassadors, as persons in common life may discover what they possess, whether in their understandings, their persons, or their circumstances. And to bring souls into this vain glorious spirit, must be as certainly the very business with which satan goeth about, as that self-exaltation is the nature of the apostate spirit of satan and his angels, who were driven from the glory for which they were made, for lifting themselves up in his presence, who made them capable of that everlasting blessedness for which men are made, and which is of course in most danger of being lost for ever in this life of trial, by being lifted up into the same spirit, in which the angels, that kept not their first estate, lost heaven. (Jude vi.) For this self-flattering spirit in Hezekiah, There was wrath upon him—From God, after all the great things God had done for him in delivering him out of his distress, making of him a king, and what was more, in making of him the instrument of a great reformation in a nation from general impiety to true religion. And by this it appears, that God considereth all his gifts to his creatures, as obligations, proportioned to their greatness, of devotion to his holy will, and to an humble thankfulness of mind before him; and that instead of past mercies, or the length of time they have been possessed, being any excuse for allowing the spirit of self-exaltation to have any place in the mind, it is altogether the contrary, and that where God hath given much of the wisdom and power of his grace, and rendered any of his creatures more honourable and useful amongst their fellow-creatures, the more doth God require to be honoured, feared, and devoutly obeyed by such to the last moment of their lives; the crown of eternal glory being only promised to faithfulness unto death.

V. 26. Hezekiah humbled himself for the pride of his heart, both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem—Who had been guilty of giving a place in their minds, to the same spirit in which the king had brought upon himself the wrath of God.

V. 31. God left him—To himself, and his own impotency and corruption. To try him, that he might know all that was in his heart—That Hezekiah might know that the great mercies which he had received were not the effects of his own goodness, but of God's free grace. Great in experience and in wisdom as Hezekiah was, when left of God, like a building on removing its foundation, it continues to fall, as that on which it stood is taken away, till the costly pile becomes an heap of ruins. But who can tell how great the fall of an immortal soul, who having known God by his Spirit, and yields to satan and sin, till finally left of God? Well may all that know the least of themselves say, with that experienced man of old—Take not thy Holy Spirit from me. But doth the Father of mercies frequently leave those that have fled to him, that he may try them? The Lord trieth man every moment, (Job vii. 18.) and every day some—many of the moments may bring trials of this nature, to that faith and patience of the soul, that saith, Though thou, my Lord, should slay me, yet will I trust in thee—So long as thought and memory shall remain, that my Maker is my Redeemer, shall be the Rock by which I will hold, amidst all that God may suffer me to be tried with, from men, devils, or my own heart, and all that I may feel in the moments in which I am left of God, my sufferings shall remind me of what God my Saviour suffered in my place and stead, especially in that hour when he cried, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? And on his death, bereaved of every comfort, I will cast my ransomed soul.

CHAP. XXXIII.

V. 1. Manasseh reigned fifty and five years—This king's life is to be read, 1. As an example, from the real conduct of a man, of the depths of wickedness which there is in the human soul; and of the danger to which all, from themselves, are exposed, for the hearts of all men are alike. 2. To shew the obligation all are under for that preventing grace, which hath preserved them from those

2 But did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, like unto the [b] abominations of the heathen, whom the Lord had cast out before the children of Israel.

3 ¶ For [a] he built again the high places which Hezekiah his father had [c] broken down, and he reared up altars for Baalim, and [d] made groves, and worshipped [e] all the host of heaven, and served them.

4 Also he built altars in the house of the Lord, whereof the Lord had said, [i] In Jerusalem shall my name be for ever.

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven, [v] in the two courts of the house of the Lord.

6 [v] And he caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom: also he observed times, and used inchantments, and used witchcraft, and [i] dealt with a familiar spirit, and with wizards: he wrought much evil in the sight of the Lord, to provoke him to anger.

7 And [k] he set a carved image (the idol which he had made) in the house of God, of which God had said to David, and to Solomon his son, In [l] this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen before all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever.

8 [v] Neither will I any more remove the foot of Israel from out of the land which I have appointed for your fathers; so that they will take heed to do all that I have commanded them according to the whole law, and the statutes and the ordinances by the hand of Moses.

9 So Manasseh made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err, and to do worse than the heathen whom the Lord had destroyed before the children of Israel.

14 Now after this he built a wall without the city of David, on the west side of Gihon, in the valley, even to the entering in at the fish-gate, and compassed [o] about § Ophel, and raised it up a very great height, and put captains of war in all the fenced cities of Judah.

those lengths of wickedness, to which otherwise their own passions and desires would have led them. 3. Of the greatness of the long-suffering and patience of God, in bearing with the wilful continuance of any person in any sin, for in his sight hatred is murder, (1 John iii. 15.) covetousness is idolatry, evil desire is adultery. 4. Of God's willingness to save all from the eternal shame and misery due to their sins, who do at last accept of his grace, humble themselves, and truly turn unto him.

V. 11. The king of Assyria took Manasseh among the thorns—In some thicket where he thought to hide himself from the Assyrians till he could escape. But it was the offended justice of God which sent them, and from this no secret place can hide, and from which there is no way to escape, but by turning unto God himself by true repentance, and faith in the great sacrifice made for sin, in the person of the God-man Christ Jesus. And carried him to Babylon—The king of Babylon is here called the king of Assyria, because by this time he had added Assyria to his empire, who having been informed by his ambassadors of the great riches which were in Hezekiah's treasures at Jerusalem, which he was desirous to enjoy; and withal being assured of the degeneracy of Manasseh, from the piety of his father, and from that God whose power alone made Hezekiah formidable, he thought this a fit season to invade Manasseh's kingdom, which he did with success.

V. 13. Then Manasseh knew that the Lord he was God—He knew the Lord by the Holy Spirit, which alone reveals him to the human heart; which to transform into his own blessed image and likeness, is that work of God in this life, for which he will be adored by all the Redeemed for ever. And as God brought Manasseh back to the kingdom of his Father, so doth God, for Christ's sake, restore every penitent believing mind, to all that kingdom of grace, which the common Father of mankind was blessed with before his fall. And at the resurrection of the just, the body which is now doomed to death, and therefore to sufferings in this life, shall also be restored to all that Adam had when God made him good—free from pain, weakness, and all infirmity, as well as free from the least stain of evil. (1 Cor. xv.)

V. 15. Hilkiah said, I have found the book—They that are doing any work faithfully to the Lord, are in the way of finding an increase of mercies from God. They who only go on to read and dig in God's written word, from a sense of duty, in obedience to his universal command to search the Scriptures, will find the living word, which will make the whole book of the Old and New Testament spirit and life to them, and of more value than the whole world beside.

V. 9. Jehoiachin was eight years old, and he did that which was evil—As soon as the mind can express what it feels by any rational action, so soon is it capable of obeying that light of God's grace, which is given to every soul that cometh into the world; and though it is in the conduct of a child, he that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him is sin. And with all the tenderness and indulgent allowances that are to be made for the weakness and ignorance of youth, as God himself chargeth sin against children, as we see by this instance, children are given to understand, that God requires them to remember him in the days of their youth, and to do and say that which is right, as soon as they are capable of doing and saying that which is wrong.

V. 12. And humbled not himself—By repentance for his past errors, and disobedience to God's express commands, which he would not yield to through the pride of his heart, when the prophet was sent to him from God to call him to repentance.

V. 14. All the chief of the priests and the people transgressed very much—They were universally corrupt, and God brought upon them a general destruction.

V. 15. The Lord God sent to them by his messengers, rising up betimes, and sending—Sending them early and diligently, as a careful householder who riseth betimes about his business. God sent them many prophets and messages, some at the very beginning of their apostacy, and others afterward, as they proceeded in their impiety, until the very day of their captivity.

V. 16. They mocked the messengers of God—They laughed them to scorn, they treated them as foolish men, for concerning themselves so much as they did about preparing for the life to come; and for not living for this world. And with God's messengers, they despised his words—And then to this contempt in their hearts, of God's calls to break off their sins by repentance; and being earnestly pressed to do it by the faithful servants God sent amongst them; to mockery and contempt they added ill treatment, and misused his prophets—And thus they went on to do, till all the calls to mercy, and all the offers of pardon and salvation were finally despised; and then the wrath of the Lord arose against his people—Mercy being rejected, justice must take place; and there was then no remedy—They would not accept of grace, and by it cease to do evil; and the wilfully impenitent God could not pardon, therefore there was no remedy against their being driven from the presence of the Lord.

V. 17. He had no compassion upon young man or maiden, old man, or him that stooped for age—Their day of trial hath now been passed and gone for many ages; but with the living it yet endures, and what is it that God hath not done to warn the whole world of the

Account of the LIVES of the KINGS of ISRAEL and JUDAH,

In the Order in which they reigned.

THE kings of Iſrael and Judah, having the poſſeſſion of the entire power to govern their ſubjects in all things agreeable to the will of God, whoſe written laws were the immediate laws of the land, and having all thoſe aſſurances of the divine ſupport and protection which were made to them (and through them to all that have the chief authority given them in every age and nation) on their governing in the fear of God, a collective view of their conduct, and the uſe they made of the power that was given them, may afford uſeful reflections to every one that is ſeriouſly inquiring into the nature of the human mind, and the courſes it is inclined to take of itſelf, when poſſeſſed of all the power and freedom the heart of man can wiſh for.

I. SAUL—Was anointed king over the twelve tribes, by the prophet Samuel, at the command of God, 1095 years before Chriſt. When he was firſt advanced to this dignity, he thought himſelf unworthy of it, and while he continued little in his own eyes, and acted with an humble regard to the laws of God, he proſpered: but when he gave way to the impatience of his own will, and began to live for himſelf, and not to the honour of God, then he was not honoured by him; and when it was made known to him, that, for his preſumption and diſobedience, God had rejected him from being king, he then ſet himſelf to oppoſe the appointment of God, by repeated attempts to kill David. Saul was wounded in a battle with the Philiſtines, and, fearful of falling into their hands, he put an end to his own life, after having reigned forty years. (1 Sam. 31.)

II. DAVID—Was made king in the year before Chriſt 1056. (2 Sam. 2.) In his public character he was an eminent type of the Lord Jeſus; he was a man of eminent faith, and devoted himſelf to the will of God with a warm integrity of ſoul, which made him run all hazards in obeying his will; but when he came into eaſy and proſperous circumſtances, he grievouſly offended God, and highly favoured as he had been, and notwithſtanding his great penitence and humiliation, and the ſincerity of his repentance, yet God inflicted great and ſevere judgments upon him, which occaſioned his going through ſuch a variety of ſufferings, as to make his experience, recorded in his life and in the Pſalms of his writing, full of inſtruction and of comfort to all that are truly turning unto God, and living by faith in his mercy through a Mediator, which, at the cloſe of David's life, was all his ſalvation, and all his deſire; on which account the Holy Spirit ſheweth, in the Scriptures, that it was the mind of God the Father and the Son, that David's name ſhould be repeated by the ſacred writers for ſucceeding ages, as the man after God's own heart. David died in peace, or rather fell aſleep, after having reigned forty years. (1 Kings 2.)

III. SOLOMON—Succeeded David his father in the year before Chriſt 1015. He firſt ſought heavenly wiſdom—the kingdom of God and his righteouſneſs; and infinite goodneſs, to ſhew that this is the one thing needful to the happineſs of every ſoul of man, and therefore moſt pleaſing in the ſight of God, not only gave unto Solomon the kingdom of his grace, but alſo gave him greater wiſdom, riches, and honour than any other ever poſſeſſed; and as a part of his ſpiritual bleſſings, he had given him a largeneſs of heart which embraced with good-will the whole human race, as appears by his prayer on the dedication of the temple. But his higheſt honour was in being, as a king, an eminent type of the promiſed Seed and Son of David—the Meſſiah of the Jews, the Saviour of the world. But at the ſame time that God made Solomon ſo great, he made himſelf an example of the depth of the depravity of the human mind, and ſhewed that the wiſeſt man in the world, turning from faith in God, and looking for happineſs in the things of earth, and ſenſe would become weak enough to be led from the temple, where the LORD of glory had manifeſted himſelf, to hills and groves, to pay divine honours to images made with men's hands, in oppoſition to the declared law of God. His departure from the Lord being againſt ſo much knowledge, it was puniſhed by God with great ſeverity. After many troubles from thoſe the Lord ſtirred up againſt him, he died in peace, having reigned forty years.

IV. REHOBOAM—Succeeded Solomon his father, as king over all Iſrael, but anſwering the ſuit of his ſubjects to relieve them in the public taxes, with declaring he would increaſe them, ten tribes revolted from him, and God would not allow him ſo much as to go to war with them to bring them back. He obeyed the command of God by the prophet, and his government was then ſettled over the tribe of Judah. But after this, when he had ſtrengthened himſelf, he forſook the law of the LORD; and in the fifth year of his reign, the king of Egypt invaded his country, and took away the treaſures out of the temple, and the king's treaſures, and laid him and his ſubjects under tribute; and for this calamity, this reaſon is given—Becauſe they—the king and his people, had tranſgreſſed againſt the LORD. Under their ſufferings they humbled themſelves; and then the Lord, to ſhew his readineſs to forgive all that turn unto him by true repentance, commanded Shemaiah the prophet to make it known to Rehoboam and his ſubjects, that he would grant them ſome deliverance from thoſe greater judgments which otherwiſe would have been inflicted. Rehoboam reigned ſeventeen years over Judah in Jeruſalem. The laſt notice that is taken of his character, is, That he did evil, becauſe he prepared not his heart to ſeek the Lord. (2 Chron. xii. 14.)

THE KINGS OVER THE TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

I. ISHBOSHETH—The ſon of Saul was made king over all the tribes, except Judah, which clave unto David. But Abner, who had made Iſhboſheth king, taking offence at him, forſook him, and went over to David, and was killed by Joab; as was alſo Iſhboſheth by two of his captains, after he had reigned about ſeven years, and they carrying his head to David, he puniſhed their treachery with death. (2 Sam. iv.)

II. JEROBOAM—Was promoted by Solomon for his induſtry, and, when Solomon departed from the Lord, the prophet Ahijah met Jeroboam, and told him, The Lord would rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, becauſe he had forſaken him; and that Jeroboam ſhould be king over ten tribes, promiſing him, If he would hearken unto all the commands of the Lord, and walk in his ways, and do that which was right in his ſight, and keep his ſtatutes, and commandments, as David had done, that the Lord would be with him, and build him a ſure houſe, and give Iſrael to him as his kingdom. (1 Kings xi.) But Jeroboam turned away from God immediately after he was made king of Iſrael, deceiving himſelf, or allowing himſelf to be deceived by the devices of ſatan, he excuſes his ſinful conduct in eſtabliſhing the worſhip of idols,

idols, amongſt his ſubjects, with this reaſon—That if they were to go up to Jeruſalem to the temple, they would return to Rehoboam, concluding in his unbelief, That the ſame God who made him king over the ten tribes of Iſrael, could not preſerve them in their allegiance to him: His ſelfiſh fears of being injured by his obedience, led him to do evil, that good might come of it; a principle into which all are in equal danger of falling, and then of breaking any of the commands of God, as the means of ſecuring themſelves againſt thoſe unbelieving fears which tell them, That the ways of obedience to God are the ways of danger to themſelves. Jeroboam continued, under repeated calls from God, both by his judgments and mercy, till at length a dreadful ſentence was pronounced againſt him and the people of Iſrael, who had obeyed in general the wicked commands and example of their king. Jeroboam reigned twenty-two years over Iſrael. And God, in order to ſhew how highly he is offended with thoſe that do evil, that good may ariſe from it; or who fear to obey what he hath required, leſt they ſhould not find it for their greateſt good, hath cauſed the crimes that proceeded from this unbelief of Jeroboam's, to be very many times repeated, as the ſins of Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat who made Iſrael to ſin. To conclude from any appearances that God hath not required that which is beſt; or that he cannot, or will not, perform what he hath promiſed to thoſe that put their truſt in him, is that fearful unbelieving ſtate of mind againſt which the final judgments of God are ſo often declared. (Mark xvi. 16. Heb. iii. 19. Rev. xxi. 8.)

III. NADAB—The ſon of Jeroboam reigned in his ſtead, and he did evil in the ſight of the Lord, and walked in the ways of his father. He reigned but two years, when he was killed by Baaſha, of the houſe of Iſſachar, who ſucceeded him in the government. (1 Kings xv.)

IV. BAASHA—Put to death all that deſcended from Jeroboam, he left not one—Becauſe of the ſins wherewith he provoked the Lord God of Iſrael to anger; yet this very Baaſha, after he had executed the ſentence of God againſt the whole houſe of Jeroboam, did himſelf walk in his ways, and in his ſin, which drew after it the ſame puniſhment: The prophet of the Lord was ſent to declare, in ſubſtance, the ſame ſentence againſt him which he had but juſt executed; telling him, that the Lord had exalted him out of the duſt, and made him to reign as king over Iſrael; but as he had betrayed his truſt, and abuſed his mercies, and diſhonoured God by diſtruſting and diſobeying him, the dogs and fowls of the air ſhould eat all that belonged to him. (1 Kings xv.)

V. ELAH—His ſon, reigned in his ſtead for two years, when he was ſlain by Zimri (captain of half his chariots) as he was drinking himſelf drunk in the houſe of his ſteward (1 Kings xvi. 9.)

VI. ZIMRI—Reigned but for ſeven days after Elah, in which time he deſtroyed the whole family of Baaſha. Many of the people of Iſrael met together, and made Omri king, he was captain of the army of Iſrael, and he went and took the city where Zimri was; and when he ſaw the city was taken, he went into the king's palace, and burnt it with fire over him, and died. (1 Kings xvi. 18.)

VII. OMRI—Reigned twelve years over Iſrael. He wrought evil in the eyes of the Lord to a greater degree than all that were before him. He was followed by his ſon.

VIII. AHAB—Who again exceeded his father in his diſregard of God, and of all that he had declared by Moſes and the prophets. God in mercy, to counteract the dangerous influence of Ahab's unbelief, and conſequent wicked example, ſent the prophet Elijah, with his heavenly faith and zeal, in this king's reign, to call him and his people back to the LORD, againſt whom they offended with ſo high an hand. But Ahab, and Jezebel his queen, hardened their hearts againſt miracles both of mercy and ſeverity. His laſt determination was to go to war, in oppoſition to what was declared to him by Micaiah the prophet of the Lord, whom he ſent to priſon before he went to the battle, in which he fought in diſguiſe; but a certain man drew a bow at a venture, and ſmote him between the joints of the harneſs, he died, and the dogs licked his blood, as had been foretold; and his obſtinately impenitent queen was thrown out of a window by her attendants, and trodden to death under the horſes feet that were entering the city, under the command of Jehu, and ſhe was eaten by the dogs. (2 Kings ix.)

IX. AHAZIAH—Succeeded Ahab his father. He did evil in the ſight of the LORD. He it was that ſent an armed force to bring the prophet Elijah to him. Who, when he came, told him, he ſhould die, for having ſent, in his ſickneſs, to inquire of an idol god if he ſhould recover: He died according to the word of the Lord, and had no ſon.

X. JORAM—The ſon of Ahab, began to reign over Iſrael. He did evil in the ſight of the Lord. Jehu was anointed king over Iſrael in his ſtead, and went againſt Joram, who inquiring of Jehu if it was peace, was anſwered, What peace could he expect, whilſt he ſuffered all the wickedneſs of his mother Jezebel to be continued? Joram turning his chariot to eſcape, Jehu drew a bow with his full ſtrength, and ſmote him, and the arrow went through his heart, and he ſunk down in his chariot. (2 Kings iii.)

XI. JEHU—Succeeded Joram king of Iſrael, and, at his deſire, the elders of Iſrael put to death ſeventy of the ſons of Ahab who were with them; and ſent their heads to Jehu, who alſo ſlew all that remained of the houſe of Ahab, and meeting with many of the brethren of Ahaziah king of Judah, Jehu alſo put them to death. He gathered all the prophets of Baal together, under pretence of eſtabliſhing his worſhip, and, when they were aſſembled, he cauſed them all to be put to death. But Jehu took no heed to walk in the law of the Lord God of Iſrael with all his heart: For he departed not from the ſins of Jeroboam, which made Iſrael to ſin. He reigned twenty eight years, and was ſucceeded by his ſon. (2 Kings x.)

XII. JEHOAHAZ—Began to reign over Iſrael in the twenty-third year of Joaſh king of Judah. And Jehoahaz did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD; and the nation in general following the example of his impiety, the anger of the LORD was kindled againſt Iſrael, and the LORD delivered them into the hand of Hazael king of Syria. In his diſtreſs Jehoahaz beſought the Lord, and the Lord hearkened unto him: for he ſaw the oppreſſion of Iſrael, for the king of Syria oppreſſed them. Nevertheleſs they departed not from their ſins.

XIII. JOASH—The ſon of the laſt king, ſucceeded him: He reigned ſixteen years, and did evil in the ſight of the LORD. He lived in the time of Amaziah king of Judah, and in his reign the prophet Eliſha died. (2 Kings xiii.)

XIV. JEROBOAM—The ſon of Joaſh, the laſt king, ſucceeded him. He did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD; he departed not from all the ſins of Jeroboam, the ſon of Nebat, who made Iſrael to ſin. (2 Kings xiv.)

XV. ZACHARIAH—Succeeded his father, the late king, and did evil in the ſight of the Lord; and not departing from the ſins of Jeroboam, he was ſuffered to live but ſix months after he became king of Iſrael, when Shallum conſpired againſt him, and ſmote him before the people, and reigned in his ſtead. Zachariah was the fourth king of Iſrael after Jehu, and deſcended from him: this fulfilled what the Lord had foretold to Jehu, That his children of the fourth generation ſhould ſit on the throne of Iſrael. (2 Kings x. and xv.)

XVI. SHALLUM—Reigned but one month after his conſpiracy and murder of the laſt king. He was ſlain by

XVII. MENAHEM—Who reigned in his ſtead, ten years in the time of Azariah king of Judah: he did evil in the ſight of the LORD. The people of Tirzah refuſing to open their gates to him; when he had obliged them to do it, with the cruelty of a monſter, he ript up all the women that were with child in the city; and with

with his other wickedneſs, he continued in the impious ſins of Jeroboam. The king of Aſſyria came, and Menahem gave him a large ſum that he might confirm the kingdom in his hand. (2 Kings xv.)

XVIII. PEKAHIAH—The ſon of Menahem, reigned in his ſtead; which he only continued to do two years, doing evil in the ſight of the LORD, till Pekah, a captain of his, killed him, and reigned in his ſtead. (2 Kings xv.)

XIX. PEKAH—Reigned twenty years, and he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD, and departed not from the ſins of Jeroboam, but lived in the ſame unbelief, bringing forth the fruits of it. In his time the king of Aſſyria carried away many of the people of Iſrael into captivity. Hoſhea, the ſon of Elah, ſlew him, and reigned in his ſtead. (2 Kings xv.)

XX. HOSHEA—Began to reign over Iſrael in the twelfth year of Ahaz, king of Judah: He reigned nine years, and did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD. Shalmaneſer the king of Aſſyria came, and laid him under a yearly tribute; but Hoſhea entering into a league with So king of Egypt, againſt the king of Aſſyria, and then with-holding the tribute he had agreed to pay, the king of Aſſyria came and took him and all Iſrael away captive, and peopled the country of Canaan with his own ſubjects. Thus did the Lord remove them out of his ſight, who would, againſt all his mercies, all his judgments, and againſt all the calls he gave them by the prophets, continue in their ſinful unbelief of all that Moſes and the prophets had declared. This was 721 years before the Lord Jeſus came, and 730 years from the death of Moſes. The crimes that occaſioned this final removal of the ten tribes, are ſummed up with ſaying, They would not hear, but hardened their necks like to the neck of their fathers, that did not believe in the LORD their God. (2 Kings xvii. 14.)

THE KINGS OF JUDAH.

I. REHOBOAM—Was king over the twelve tribes for a ſhort time after he ſucceeded his father, and the account of him is given after that of Solomon; but as he was the firſt king of Judah, after the ſeparation of the ten tribes, his name is included among thoſe of the kings of Judah. The diviſion of the tribes into two kingdoms was 975 years before the coming of the Lord Jeſus.

II. ABIJAH—The ſon of Rehoboam, ſucceeded his father as the ſecond king of Judah; and of him it is ſaid, He walked in the ſins of his father, which he had done before him: And his heart was not perfect with the LORD his God, as the heart of David his father, who did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, and turned not aſide from any thing that he commanded him all the days of his life, ſave only in the matter of Uriah. (1 Kings xv.) Abijah lived but three years to do wickedly, before he was called to give an account of himſelf to God. (Rom. xiv. 12.)

III. ASA—Reigned forty-one years in Jeruſalem over Judah, and did that which was right in the eyes of the LORD, as did David his father: He put his truſt in the living God, and the Redeemer of Iſrael, the effect of which was righteouſneſs and peace. (Iſa. xxxii. 17.) His heart was perfect with the Lord all his days. (1 Kings xv. 14.)

IV. JEHOSHAPHAT—Succeeded his father Aſa, (1 Kings xv. 24.) and the Lord was with him, becauſe he walked in the firſt ways of his father David, and ſought to the LORD God of his father, and walked in his commandments: And in his reign the joyful days of David were reſtored to the faithful worſhippers of God their Redeemer. (Iſa. xli. 14.)

V. JEHORAM—The ſon of Jehoſhaphat, began to reign over Judah. The daughter of Ahab was his wife, and he did evil in the ſight of the LORD. (2 Kings viii. 18.) He put all his brethren to death, and many of the princes: And he reaped the fruit of his own doings, in having his children and his wives carried away into captivity, and he was ſtruck with an incurable diſeaſe, which continued till his bowels fell out: When it is ſaid of him, he departed without being deſired. (2 Chron. xxi. 20.) He was ſucceeded by his ſon.

VI. AHAZIAH—Began to reign in the twelfth year of Joram, the ſon of Ahab, king of Iſrael: He reigned one year in Jeruſalem, and did evil in the ſight of the LORD. (2 Kings viii. 27.) This king was with Joram, king of Iſrael, when Jehu killed him; and Jehu put him alſo to death; and of Ahaziah it is ſaid, His deſtruction was of God. (2 Chron. xxii. 7.) And when his mother Athaliah ſaw that he was dead, ſhe deſtroyed all the ſeed royal, (2 Kings xi.) ſave Joaſh, who was hid from her in the temple.

VII. ATHALIAH—The mother of Ahaziah, reigned ſix years in Jeruſalem, and in the ſeventh year Jehoiada cauſed her to be put to death, at the time he and the elders were making Joaſh king in the temple. Thus did ſhe reap as ſhe had ſown.

VIII. JOASH—Reigned well all the days of Jehoiada the prieſt, who inſtructed him in the law of the Lord; but after Jehoiada's death, at the deſire of his princes, he allowed them to return to their idol worſhip; and on their leaving the ways of God, wrath came upon Judah and Jeruſalem; and Zechariah the ſon of Jehoiada the prieſt, who had made Joaſh king, was ſent by the Lord to ſay to him and his princes, Why tranſgreſs ye the commandments of the Lord, that ye cannot proſper? Becauſe ye have forſaken the Lord, he hath alſo forſaken you. (2 Chron. xxiv. 20.) For delivering this meſſage from the Lord, Zechariah was ſtoned to death in the court of the houſe of the Lord, at the command of Joaſh: And the Holy Spirit, to ſhew that he was no leſs without gratitude than he was without piety and the fear of God, ſays Joaſh, the king, remembered not the kindneſs which Jehoiada, the father of Zechariah, had done to him, but ſlew his ſon. At the end of that year, a ſmall company of the Syrians came up againſt Joaſh, and the Lord delivered a very great hoſt of Judah into the hands of the Syrians, becauſe they had forſaken the Lord God of their fathers: So they executed judgment againſt Joaſh. And when the Syrians were departed from him, leaving him in great diſtreſs, his ſervants conſpired againſt him, and ſlew him on his bed.

IX. AMAZIAH—The ſon of Joaſh, ſucceeded his father in the throne of Judah: He reigned twenty-nine years in Jeruſalem: He did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD, but not with a perfect heart. (2 Chron. xxv. 2.) He ſlew his ſervants that killed the king his father. After this, God delivered him and his ſubjects into the hand of their enemies, who greatly oppreſſed them, becauſe they ſought after idols: And when Amaziah had turned away from following the LORD, his ſubjects made a conſpiracy againſt him in Jeruſalem, and he fled to Lachiſh, and they ſent after him and ſlew him, there. (2 Chron. xxv. 28.)

X. AZARIAH, or UZZIAH—Was made king by the people, in the place of Amaziah his father. Uzziah did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD, and God helped him: But when he was ſtrong, he was liſted up to his deſtruction; for he tranſgreſſed againſt the Lord his God, by going into the temple to burn incenſe: He was ſtruck with the leproſy before the altar, and was confined as a leper to the day of his death, when he was ſucceeded by his ſon. (2 Chron. xxvi. 21.)

XI. JOTHAM—Did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD, and became mighty, becauſe he prepared his ways before the LORD his God: He died in peace after a reign of ſixteen years. (2 Chron. xxvii.)

XII. AHAZ—Succeeded his father Jotham. But he did not that which was right in the ſight of the LORD; wherefore the Lord delivered his kingdom into the hand of the king of Syria, and he carried away a great multitude of his people into captivity: And again he was delivered into the hand of the king of Iſrael, who ſmote his ſubjects with a great ſlaughter, becauſe they had forſaken the Lord God of their fathers; and inſtead of being humbled under his ſufferings, and the calamities of his people, in his diſtreſs he treſpaſſed yet more againſt the Lord. He died, and was ſucceeded by his ſon.

XIII. HEZEKIAH—Truſt in God, is the character of Hezekiah. His trials were great, but his faith in God his Redeemer was greater ſtill; and his prayers were anſwered by deliverances from difficulties, and with bleſſings from God, far above all he aſked. But in his great proſperity he gave way to pride, and grieved the ſpirit of the Lord, and brought upon himſelf a ſevere judgment: but, when the wrath of God was upon him, and upon Judah and Jeruſalem, Hezekiah humbled himſelf for the pride of his heart, both he and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, ſo that the wrath of the Lord came not upon them in his days. He died in peace.

XIV. MANASSEH—The ſon of Hezekiah, no ſooner began to reign, than he ſhewed how near the human mind was capable of approaching to all that can be conceived of the nature of fiends for impiety, and of ſavage beaſts for cruelty. He filled the city in which he lived with innocent blood; and his princes and chief ſubjects ſiding with him, or contenting themſelves with being idle ſpectators of his wickedneſs, the Almighty brought againſt them the hoſt of the king of Aſſyria, which took Manaſſeh, and bound him with chains, and carried him to Babylon, where he became a monument to mankind of that mercy, which God, for the ſake of his beloved Son, is ever willing to ſhew to all that truly turn unto him. Manaſſeh, in his affliction, beſought the Lord his God, and humbled himſelf greatly before God, and prayed unto him: and God was intreated of him, and heard his ſupplication, and brought him again to Jeruſalem, and to his kingdom. He died in peace, and was ſucceeded by his ſon. (2 Chron. xxxiii.)

XV. AMON—After he was king, only lived to do wickedly; and humbled not himſelf, but treſpaſſed more and more, till his ſervants conſpired againſt him, and ſlew him in his own houſe. (2 Chron. xxxiii. 24.)

XVI. JOSIAH—Was made king by the people, and ſlew thoſe that had conſpired againſt Amon his father. Joſiah, in the eighth year of his reign, and in the ſixteenth year of his age, began to ſeek after God. And in him was eminently fulfilled that promiſe which ſaith, Seek and ye ſhall find. (Matth. vii. 7.) He gave command that the temple ſhould be cleaned and repaired, and in doing this, the book of the law given by Moſes, was found and brought to the king; who humbled himſelf, under the fear of the penalties which he ſaw were pronounced by God, againſt all unrighteouſneſs of men. And on receiving a gracious anſwer from God, by Huldah the propheteſs, he devoted himſelf to the will of God in all things: God's worſhip was eſtabliſhed, and the people were governed agreeable to his laws; and the bleſſings of God were poured out upon him and his kingdom, over which he reigned one and thirty years. He took part in a war againſt the king of Egypt, contrary to the will of God, and died of a wound he received in battle, by which the diſpleaſure of God is expreſſed againſt this action, and from which we are ſhewn, that part obedience, however uniform and long continued, does not excuſe one act of diſobedience, but that whoſoever goes contrary to the will of God, if it be but in a ſingle inſtance, muſt either ſuffer for his offence, or turn unto God by true repentance and faith in the Mediator; and though God doth ſo freely pardon all that do ſo, receiving them into his everlaſting favour, yet to ſhew his hatred of all ſin in all men, he many times cuts them off by ſudden death for one offence, who, for years together, have lived as Joſiah did, humble, believing, and obedient lives. The prophet Jeremiah lived in the reign of Joſiah, and lamented his death, as thoſe that are moſt earneſtly concerned for the intereſts of religion muſt do, when thoſe die who were eminent for their piety, and eſpecially when their latter end is attended, as Joſiah's was, with any thing contrary to the character of a ſervant of the Lord's. But the love of God to individuals being accompanied with love to the whole human race, he is not ſparing in his ſeverity to his moſt favourite ſervants, when they offend againſt his holy will, to the end that mankind may never be betrayed into that dangerous error of thinking, that God will grant indulgence to ſin, becauſe he is ſo infinitely willing to pardon all that truly come unto him for mercy, through the Son of his love.

XVII. JEHOAHAZ—Was made king by the people ſoon after the death of his father Joſiah. He had only reigned three months, to do evil in the ſight of the LORD, (2 Kings xxiii. 32.) till the king of Egypt came and took him, and carried him away captive into Egypt, making Eiakim his brother king, giving him the name of

XVIII. JEHOIAKIM—Who did evil in the ſight of the LORD, and the Lord ſent againſt him the Chaldees and the Syrians, to puniſh him and his people for their impiety, and for the innocent blood that was ſhed in Jeruſalem, which the Lord would not pardon. (2 Kings xxiv. 4.) He died, and his ſon

XIX. JEHOIACHIN—Reigned in his ſtead; and he did evil in the ſight of the LORD. In the eighth year of his reign, the king of Babylon's army took him, his mother, his ſervants, and his princes, and many thouſands of his ſubjects, and carried them away to Babylon, and with them all the treaſures and veſſels found in the temple. And the king of Babylon made Mattaniah, his father's brother, king in his ſtead, and changed his name to

XX. ZEDEKIAH—Who did evil in the ſight of the LORD, and by the anger of the Lord againſt him, and the people that were left with him, the Lord caſt them out of his preſence: Zedekiah rebelled againſt the king of Babylon, who came with his army, took him, killed his ſons before him, and then putting out his eyes, took him to Babylon in fetters: and the king of Babylon ſent and burnt the temple, and every great man's houſe, and took all away into captivity, but the poor of the land, which were left to be vine-dreſſers and huſbandmen. (2 Kings xxv. 12.) The rich and great being foremoſt in the public impiety and wickedneſs, were made, by God, examples of his wrath, whilſt the poor were left to live in peace in their native land. (2 Kings xxv.)

THE kings of Iſrael and Judah are forty three in number—three over the twelve tribes, and twenty over Iſrael, and twenty over Judah, after their diviſion: the Sacred Hiſtory which includes the lives of theſe kings, from Saul the firſt to Zedekiah the laſt, takes in a period of more than five hundred years; in which the affairs of the people of the Jews are connected with the nations about them, then the greateſt empires in the world, and both by the events which took place among the Jews, and by their various tranſactions with other nations, it is made to appear that GOD is the governor of the world, and that the ſafety and proſperity of nations, or their ſufferings or ruin, depend immediately upon his will. And the Hiſtory of the lives of theſe kings, contains a great variety of proofs of the truth of that declaration made by one of the prophets to king Aſa—That the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to ſhew himſelf ſtrong in the behalf of them, whoſe heart is perfect towards him. (2 Chron. xvi.) And there are alſo many facts, and real events in the courſe of theſe lives, which prove it to be equally true, what is ſaid by the ſame king, when an enemy of more than double the number of his forces was coming againſt him—That it is nothing with God to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power. (2 Chron. xiv.) And it is equally proved, that all the precautions of human wiſdom, and any ſuperiority of ſtrength availed nothing, when oppoſed to thoſe whom it pleaſed GOD to take under his protection: This is made to appear on many occaſions when the Jewiſh nation was the weaker ſide, and were defended; and upon as many occaſions, when to all appearance they were the ſtronger ſide, or as able to defend themſelves, and were overcome.

AGAIN it further appears by the Sacred Hiſtory of the lives of theſe kings as individuals, that when they were the objects of the Divine favour, that the protection they received, and the ſafety and happineſs they enjoyed, became publicly known to be of God, amongſt their ſubjects and in other nations. And on the other hand, when they were the objects of the Divine diſpleaſure, their ſufferings ſufferings were as evidently from God. And theſe kings being at the head of the people, of whom the Almighty hath given mankind a full and ſatisfactory hiſtory, to make known to all ages and nations the nature of his government of the world, whether we are acting immediately for ourſelves, or are ſeeking the welfare of the community to which we belong, it becomes no leſs our duty, than it is our intereſt and happineſs to inquire, Why it was, that ſome of thoſe kings were objects of the Divine favour, and they and their ſubjects taken under the protection of God; and on the other hand, why it was, that ſo many more of them were the objects of the Divine diſpleaſure, and left under difficulties, ſufferings, and ruin that overtook them as individuals, and befel the community of which they were the head?

The anſwer that appears to this inquiry is, That all thoſe kings, who, in their perſons, and in their affairs, received the Divine protection, are uniformly ſaid to have done that which was right in the ſight of the Lord; and on the other hand, thoſe that ſuffered under the Divine diſpleaſure, are as uniformly charged with doing that which was evil in the ſight of the Lord. And what makes the information more clear and certain, is the lives of thoſe kings, who, for a part of their reign, did that which is ſaid to have been right, and whilſt they did ſo received the Divine protection; and then doing evil, falling under the Divine diſpleaſure, and receiving the expreſſions of it in their own, and in the public diſtreſs or ruin: and further by the lives of thoſe kings, who, for a part of their reign, are ſaid, To have done evil, and in conſequence of it, ſuffered under the Divine diſpleaſure; and afterwards ceaſing to do ſo, and doing that which was right in the ſight of the Lord, became eminent witneſſes and examples of his care and goodneſs.

The Almighty diſcovering himſelf then through the Sacred Hiſtory, to be the immediate governor of all human affairs, and giving ſupport, deliverances from difficulties, and beſtowing public and evident marks of his favour, on all that are ſaid, To do that which is right in his ſight, What is it, that appears to be common to all the kings that did ſo, during all, or any part of their lives? And on the other hand, What is it that appears to be common to all the kings that are ſaid to have done evil in the ſight of the Lord, throughout their whole, or for any part of their reign?

Some ages before theſe kings began to reign, God, in ſight of their whole nation, revealed his will to Moſes, when they were going under his direction from Egypt, to inhabit the country where the events took place, which are given in the Hiſtory of thoſe kings: what God commanded Moſes wrote, and theſe writings were in the poſſeſſion of the nations of Iſrael and Judah, during the reigns of all theſe kings, and by theſe writings, God made it known how he required them to worſhip him; and then when they became his worſhippers, and acknowledged themſelves to be his ſubjects and ſervants, God alſo informed them how they were to obey him. Their hiſtory then ſhews us, that whenever any of them did worſhip God as he required, they became the objects of his favour; and ſo long as they continued ſo to worſhip him, and to regulate their conduct by the laws God had given them, they had his protection as their king, their maſter, and their parent; and God, by their hiſtory, diſcovers by a great variety of ways, under different circumſtances, and by the actual events that took place, that in their perſonal concerns as men, and in their affairs as kings, he charged himſelf with all that belonged to them, their ſafety and happineſs: So that worſhipping God as he required, and obeying him as he had commanded, was that which is ſaid to be doing right in the ſight of the Lord.

On the other hand it appears, that doing evil in the ſight of the Lord, was not worſhipping God as he required; and by not doing ſo, they were in the condition of ſubjects in a ſtate of rebellion againſt the laws of the government under which they lived; and being ſo, though they might do many things in common with the other kings, yet not being within their allegiance to God, by a due regard to the firſt duties that were required of them, they wilfully deprived themſelves of the Divine protection; and the infinite compaſſion appears by the meſſages that were continually ſent from God by his prophets to the kings that were neglecting, diſregarding, or acting more or leſs contrary to what God required. And it is added immediately after the captivity of the laſt of the kings of Judah and of the nation, That the Lord God of their fathers ſent to them by his meſſengers, riſing up continually and ſending; becauſe he had compaſſion on his people: But they mocked the meſſengers of God, and deſpiſed his words, and miſuſed his prophets, until the wrath of the Lord aroſe againſt his people, till there was no remedy: Whatever they did beſides, they would not worſhip God as he required; ſome of them careleſsly, and others of them wilfully, went on, truſting to their own judgment of the manner in which they ought to worſhip God, neglecting the writings of Moſes, and refuſing to hear the meſſages of the prophets, till there was no remedy for their deſtruction: They would not come unto God as he required, and as he could not do that which was more gracious or worthy of himſelf at one time than another, when they outlived the laſt offers of the deſigns of his mercy or rejected them, then, like ſubjects that would not come in and ſubmit themſelves to the laws, they ſtood expoſed to the Divine juſtice which took place in the various ways that appears in their lives.

How far that which was required of them was peculiar to the Jewiſh nation; or, was in ſubſtance the ſame thing that God from the beginning required of all mankind, and ſtill requires, is the next conſideration.

In the writings of Moſes, a ſhort Hiſtory is given of the creation of the world, of the firſt of the human race, and of all the great events which had taken place between God and man from the beginning.—That the mind, or ſpirit of the firſt parents of mankind, were communicated to them from God, and by their ſpirits, thus proceeding from the Divine mind itſelf, they were not only immortal or incapable of death, but in their ſpiritual nature like God, holy, juſt, and good, and, in conſequence of being ſo, happy: but as creatures, they had a law to keep, which breaking, they drew upon themſelves the penalty which God had annexed to it.—This was the loſs of that likeneſs in their immortal nature to God: the conſequence of which was, that their tempers, paſſions, and deſires, became unholy, unjuſt, and wicked, ſo that they were at once miſerable and mortal.

In this ſtate they were, when God made known to them, the way by which his infinite compaſſion would make an atonement to his juſtice for their diſobedience, and place them, and all that ſhould ever proceed from them, in a condition to receive his favour, and be reſtored to his image; and that this ſhould be done by one that ſhould proceed from them: that this promiſed Mediator was made more fully known to the firſt parents of mankind, than is expreſſed in the Sacred Hiſtory, appears from what is briefly related of the two firſt ſons of Adam, in their worſhipping God: one of them did it as God required, and was accepted of him; the other did not, and therefore remained under the condition of thoſe kings of Iſrael, who ſuffered under the Divine diſpleaſure, and finally were deſtroyed of the Lord.

Again we find in the life of Noah, the ſecond father of mankind, that he ſacrificed unto the Lord; or worſhipped, as it was then underſtood he required; in conſequence of which he and his family were preſerved, as the kings were, who worſhipped as God required, whilſt the whole of mankind who did not ſo worſhip, had, like the other kings, their deſtruction from the Lord by the flood.

By this it appears, that God had made it known to Adam and to Noah, the one, the firſt natural parent of the ancient world, the other, the natural parent of the preſent world, in what manner he required to be worſhipped by all mankind; or how they might come unto him, by the Mediator he had promiſed.

Near

NEAR the time that Noah died, Abraham was born, and his example of worſhipping God is added to the former; and from the greatneſs and ſtedfaſtneſs of his perſuaſion of the mercy and grace of God, through the promiſed Saviour, he is called the father of the faithful: from him, through his ſon Iſaac, and his grand-ſon Jacob, called Iſrael, for his confidence in God through the ſame Mediator, the Jews are all deſcended.

WITHIN an hundred and twenty years from the death of Jacob, Moſes was born; and God by him eſtabliſhed a variety of ways by which it was to be kept in continual remembrance, that he required to be worſhipped as their Redeemer, and by whoſe atonement they could only be received into the Divine favour: Whilſt the nation of the Jews did ſo worſhip, they were preſerved from the judgments of God, which befel thoſe by whom they were ſurrounded, who, like Cain and the world that God deſtroyed, did not do that which was right in the ſight of God: The Red Sea was made to part and ſtand as a wall on either hand, whilſt all the people of Iſrael paſſed through.—In the wilderneſs they were fed with manna from heaven; they were followed by water to quench their thirſt;—a paſſage was made for them through the river, that divided the wilderneſs from the country God had promiſed Abraham, as a public mark of his favour on account of his faith; and after many of this nation had thus continued to worſhip God, Solomon built that temple next in fame to himſelf, as if it was to draw the attention of all mankind to the object of their worſhip.

THE concluſion therefore that is to be drawn from the lives of the kings of Iſrael and Judah, is the ſame that is to be drawn from the whole hiſtory of the Divine dealings with mankind from the beginning.—That all who came unto God, approached or worſhipped him, or who expected him to be gracious to their unrighteouſneſs only, for the ſake of that Mediator whoſe atonement was repreſented by all their ſacrifices, found he was able and willing to deliver them from the evil of their nature, and the effects of it in their lives; and that with pardon for paſt offences, and the communications of his grace, they were favoured with the bleſſings of his providence; and all theſe with a faithfulneſs in God which never varied, and without a ſingle exception. As on the other hand, thoſe that did not regard or believe the record which God had given of himſelf, as the Redeemer of the world, in the writings of Moſes and the prophets, but careleſsly or wilfully followed their own conjectures, or the advice or example of the world about them, who equally neglected to inform themſelves, or refuſed to comply with what God had made known to mankind from the beginning—theſe are as uniformly preſented to our view, as examples of the Divine diſpleaſure; which continued to be mixed with frequent meſſages and diſcoveries of mercy, till they became altogether ſelf-confident in their own notions of that which was for their ſafety and happineſs, and till finally refuſing to take God's declared will for their guide, they were at length left without remedy: There was but ONE Mediator between God and Man; God had provided no other way but through faith in him for all the ſinful race of fallen Adam to receive mercy and grace: To that Mediator they would not come: Many thought themſelves too good to ſtand in need of ſo great a ſacrifice for their ſin, and rejected the counſel of God againſt themſelves: The cares of this momentary life, the deceitfulneſs of riches, the love of fame, and the love of pleaſure carried others away; and more deceived by ſatan into the full confidence, that they could not be deceived at all, were enraged at being thought or treated as men in danger, till the moment that their deſtruction overtook them. If they, for their tranſgreſſion and diſobedience, received a juſt recompence of reward, How ſhall we eſcape if we neglect ſo great ſalvation as is now more fully and finally brought to light by the Goſpel.

V. 1. In the firſt year of Cyrus king of Perſia—Of his empire, or reign in Babylon: For he had now been king of Perſia for many years. The Lord ſtirred up the ſpirit of Cyrus—Put into him a mind and will to this work.

V. 2. The Lord God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth—All that vaſt empire formerly under the Aſſyrians and Babylonians. The gift of which he aſcribes to God.

V. 3. His God be with him—Let his God help him, as I alſo ſhall do. In Jeruſalem—The place where he requires them to build it.

V. 4. And whoſoever remaineth, let the men of his place help him—Becauſe it was for the houſe of that God to whom they all owed their preſent peace and great felicity.

V. 5. All whoſe ſpirit God had raiſed to go up—To whom God had given that pious diſpoſition, and that fortitude and reſolution which it required to break through their difficulties, which were great and many; ſuch as their preſent penury; the length, and hazards, and coſtlineſs of the journey; their ſettlements in comfortable habitations; their diſperſion in ſeveral and diſtant places, which hindered the conjunction of their counſels and actions; the multitude of their enemies; the actual poſſeſſion of their country by others; and the great backwardneſs of many of their own brethren to go with them.

V. 8. The prince of Judah—And the captain and governor of theſe returning Jews. So the ſceptre is not yet departed from Judah.

danger than another, because satan is going about seeking whom he may devour by deceiving, availing himself of the natural tempers of mankind, and of their ordinary professions and employments, to lead them first to neglect, and then to oppose every work of God in the soul, as he now stirred up these people to oppose the building of the temple: there being but two spirits in the world, every man, in every design and deed, is either yielding to, and obeying one or the other: he is either doing that which is evil in itself, and opposing the work of God; or he is doing that which is right in his sight, by yielding an heart-felt obedience to His Holy Spirit of justice, goodness, mercy, and truth; and every man is as much bound to consider who it is he obeys, and from what motives and principles he acts, as his own happiness or misery are realities which concern him: there being no way of avoiding misery, if that which is evil is continued; nor any certainty of happiness, but in possessing and obeying the spirit of God. (1 John iii. 10.)

V. 6. In the reign of Ahasuerus, wrote they unto him an accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem—Those that unite themselves together to carry on the designs and work of God on earth, are properly the servants or children of God, and it is a mark by which they have been known in all ages, whether they were called Israelites or Christians: whatever name they were known by, they were known by being spoken evil of as the Jews now were. Satan being the constant accuser of those that truly fear and obey God, he does not fail to suggest all that is evil, against such as are opposing his kingdom; whilst those that are crowding in the ways of folly and vice, are allowed to sport and play, and sin away their time, without a single idea being suggested by him, that there is any thing in this the least blameworthy: they that advance his work, by giving words to his wicked suggestions, may learn to know his voice who wants to deceive them into eternal misery, by comparing the emotions that are raised in their own breasts, with the nature of the spirit of charity, which so far from speaking evil, or accusing any one, that which enters the mind from God, does not so much as lead to the thinking of evil. (1 Cor. xiii. 5.)

V. 7. The letter was written in the Syrian tongue, and interpreted in the Syrian tongue—The sense is, It was written in the Chaldee or Syrian language, and in the Syrian character: for sometimes the Chaldee or Syrian words are written in the Hebrew character, as Hebrew words are often written in an English character. The accuser of the spiritual worshippers of God, addresses the mind in language as familiar, as the language of any country is to the people of it: and the less the mind distinguishes satan's suggestions from its own thoughts, the better is his purposes answered, because he then winds himself about the soul's self-love, and makes it to the last degree unwilling to give up its own thoughts, however groundless, unjust, or wicked they may be.

V. 9. The Elamites—Several people thus called from the several places of that vast Assyrian empire from whence they were fetched, and who were united together into one body, and sent as one colony by the Assyrian monarchs into these parts.

V. 10. And at such a time—The date of the epistle was particularly expressed in the epistle, but here it was sufficient to note it in the general.

V. 14. It was not meet for us to see the king's dishonour—Thus they pretend the king's service to their own malicious designs and private interests.

V. 15. That search may be made in the book of the records of thy fathers—Thy predecessors, the former emperors of this empire, in the Assyrian and Babylonish records, which, together with the empire, were now in the hands of the Persian kings, to be searched or read.

V. 1. Then the prophets propheſied, in the name of the God of Iſrael—Commanding them from God to return to the work of building the temple, with promiſe of his favour and aſſiſtance.

V. 2. With them were the prophets of God helping them—Encouraging the people to work, by their preſence and aſſurance of ſucceſs. They ſay nothing againſt the king's perſon, or his authority; but they knew what they had to do when their work was before them, and the time come for doing it, and God's directions as plain to them as they are to all that will obey them:—they knew then that their ſelfiſh fears muſt give place to the will of God; and of this mind were the prophets, the apoſtles, the martyrs, and all that have been devoted to God, who lived in thoſe times when the apoſtate ſpirit of ſatan got the influence over human authority: they durſt bring no railing accuſation, but they durſt not betray their truſt by obeying thoſe that commanded that not to be done which God required to be done for the common good of mankind. And had not God, by his grace, raiſed up men of this ſpirit of obedience to himſelf, which deſpiſed the fear of death, life and immortality would not to us have been brought to light, either in our native language, or in any other; and dark Pagan worſhip would have at this day been held, where God's holy and bleſſed ordinances are frequented, and inſtead of ſongs of praiſe to the Prince of peace, and God of holineſs and love, we might, with the ancient inhabitants of the country we live in, have been dancing to the cries of human ſacrifices to devil-gods.

V. 4. Then ſaid we—Then we told them, according to what they aſked, what were the names of the men that made this building, who were the chief undertakers and encouragers of this work.

V. 5. The eye of their God was upon the elders of the Jews—It is always ſo upon all mankind; but they were conſcious of it; and they placed the Lord before them, not as an hard maſter, but as one good and gracious, and who required them not to raiſe an hand, or to ſuffer a ſingle fear, but with a deſign as much for their preſent good, as could poſſibly conſiſt with his own deſigns of love and good-will to all mankind, which may often require individuals to be expoſed to dangers and to undergo difficulties. They could not cauſe them to ceaſe—Becauſe God over-ruled their hearts and hands, that they did not hinder them by force, as they could have done.

V. 6. The Apharſachites—A people ſo called, ſent hither as a colony. Which were on this ſide the river—Whereby they are diſtinguiſhed from thoſe of their brethren, who yet continued in their native country beyond the river, and were not tranſplanted hither.

V. 8. We went into the province of Judea, to the house of the great God—Whom the Jews account the great God, the God of gods, esteeming all others to be but little and false gods.

V. 11. We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth—And is not this title the glory of the highest of the angels in everlasting blessedness, and of all who, from bodies like our own, have gone through great sufferings in the way to that glory; and who one day began upon earth to bear the high and honourable title of servants of God, by ceasing to do evil; determining, by his holy Spirit's aid, to depart from every false and wicked way, resolving, by his power strengthening them, rather to die than wilfully again to do evil in God's sight? Where live the determined servants of God, and do not know that they are such? If with pliant minds we by turns serve the world, our sensual desires, and satanical tempers, though we daily enter the courts of the Lord, and talk about his worship, his works, and his ways, in that state, is it the answer of our hearts—We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth? If not, whose are we? We are the servants of him whom we obey. (1 John iii. 8.)

V. 12—16. These servants of God used no worldly policy to forward the work of God; but when they were questioned for what they were doing, they say who they are, they ascribe the ruined state of the temple and their nation to the justice of God; and then, with the honest simplicity of children of the light, they tell all that had been done for them, but say nothing of what had been done against them.

V. 2. At Achmetha—The royal city of the Medes and Persians.

V. 3. Cyrus the king made a decree concerning the house of God, the place where they offered sacrifices—Thus was the purpose for which the temple was first built made known to the kings of Persia and Babylon, and published in their decrees, which became the means of leading those that heard of them, to inquire into the design of those sacrifices, and so be informed of the blessings the God of heaven hath promised to mankind through the Mediator, whose atonement was represented by those sacrifices. So that the captivity of Judah and Israel was made the means of spreading the knowledge of the love of God. And had the pious Jews, who, in their captivity, could not sing the Lord's songs, but known that their sufferings were to be over-ruled, by Mercy's strange power, for the good of mankind, how much would it have reconciled them to the will of God, and to all they suffered in their captivity?

V. 14. The elders of the Jews builded, and prospered through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet, and Zechariah—This is a seasonable intimation, that this great and unexpected success was not to be ascribed to chance, nor to the kindness or good humour of Darius, but unto God only, who, by his prophets, had required and encouraged them to proceed in the work, and by his mighty power disposed Darius's heart to such kind and noble purposes and actions. Thus it appears, that God only requires to be trusted or believed in, by those that humbly walk in his ways, and they will sooner or later, when God sees it will be best, receive the end of their faith.

V. 16. The children of the captivity kept the dedication of this house of God with joy—With that joy which all the servants of the Lord shall have, when they are assured of his acceptance of them into his favour.

V. 9. According to the good hand of his God upon him—The king's favour, his prosperous journey, all the good that is done to him, is ascribed to God, by whom all the help that is given to every one on earth, is given by himself alone; and to him alone the praise belongs for every danger and evil that is avoided, and for all the good that is received.

V. 10. Ezra had prepared his heart—(i. e.) C H A P. VIII.

THESE are now the chief of their fathers, and this is the genealogy of them that went cir. 457.

V. 18. That do after the will of your God—Whose holy laws shew, that he always willeth that which is the wisest and the best.

V. 20. Whatsoever more shall be needful for the house of thy God—Towards the reparation, or adorning, or compleating of it. Bestow it out of the king's treasure—Thus does God make the king to represent the nature of his own dealings with those he favours; he not only gives them what they now require, but he opens to them the treasures of his grace, and the blessings of his providence: he that hath not spared his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things? (Rom. viii. 32.)

V. 21. I Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers, that whatsoever Ezra shall require of you, it be done speedily—Thus does the king open all the treasures of the land to Ezra, as if they were his own, so far as the design of God required: And the same thing doth God do as to the better riches of his grace, when he saith to the soul—Be thou the possessor of the Spirit of meekness: with it he bestows all that the world can give (Matth. v. 5.)

V. 23. Why should there be wrath against the realm of the king and his sons—For the omission of any part of his worship, occasioned by my neglect. He had learnt that which the prophets in vain endeavoured to inculcate upon the minds of the later kings of Israel and Judah—That they that neglected God's worship, despised the Divine wisdom, love, and power, and therefore stood exposed to the wrath of God, which had taken place to such a severe degree upon the last king of Judah, that was led away into this king's dominions, after having had his sons killed before him, his eyes put out, and then bound with fetters of brass, that by him the wondering heathens might be led to inquire the true cause of his sufferings, and so be brought to the faith of their common father Noah.

V. 25. The laws of thy God, teach ye them that know them not—This command to Ezra shews, that the king had the work of God at heart: it resembles the gracious commission of the Prince of peace to his highly-favoured Apostle to the Gentiles—I send thee to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them that are sanctified by faith that is in me. (Acts xxvi. 17, 18.)

V. 26. The law of thy God, and the law of the king—Which law of God is now become my law also, to which I expect their punctual and ready obedience.

V. 27. Blessed be the Lord God of our fathers, which hath put such a thing as this in the king's heart—Unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy, and therefore thou didst it.

V. 28. I was strengthened as the hand of the Lord my God was upon me, and I gathered together out of Israel—Ezra, alive unto God, and satisfied with his loving kindness, was desirous that others should partake with him of the benefits and happiness which arose from the good hand of his God being upon him.

V. 16. Then ſent I for Eliezer—To come to me, and go along with me to Jeruſalem. Alſo for Joiarib and for Elnathan, men of underſtanding—Whoſe aſſiſtance, Ezra's pious zeal ſhewed him, would be highly uſeful in the work of God.

V. 21. I proclaimed a faſt, that we might afflict ourſelves before our God, to ſeek of him a right way—And ſhall this ever be done in vain by any, who are conſtantly ſetting out again, as they at firſt began to enter upon the way that leadeth to life, and to the heavenly Jeruſalem above?

V. 22. I was aſhamed to require of the king a band of ſoldiers, becauſe we had ſpoken unto the king, ſaying, The hand of our God is upon all them for good that ſeek him—This ſhews what kind of converſation it was which paſſed between Ezra and the king; and Ezra having told the king that God was a preſent help in trouble, and that he would preſerve all them from evil that put their truſt in him with a ſingle intention to do his will, and now when they had to venture on their long journey, as a man, he felt for the dangers to which he and his company might be expoſed; but calling to mind the confeſſion of his faith, he was aſhamed to ſhew the king, that he thought his God was not practically to be believed in and truſted, whatever were the dangers that laid in the ways of his duty.

V. 23. He was intreated of us—He gave us aſſurance of his gracious anſwer to our requeſt. And doth God acquaint them, before they take one ſtep forward in their journey to Zion, that it ſhall go well with them to the very place where they would be? Let the experience of Ezra, and all that were with him, ſpeak for itſelf, and it is enough to ſatisfy all that ſet their faces to Jeruſalem above, that if they ſeek their God in his appointed way, they ſhall find he will be intreated of them, and that before they have time to perform a ſingle duty more in obedience to his will,

24 ¶ Then I ſeparated twelve of the chief of the prieſts, Sherebiah, Haſhabiah, and ten of their brethren with them, v Chap. 7. 15. 16.

25 And weighed unto them v the ſilver, and the gold, and the veſſels, even the offering of the houſe of our God, which the king, and his counſellors, and his lords, and all Iſrael there preſent, had offered.

26 I even weighed unto their hand, ſix hundred and fifty talents of ſilver, and ſilver veſſels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents:

‖ Heb. yellow, or, ſhining braſs. * Heb. deſirable.

27 Alſo twenty baſons of gold, of a thouſand drams, and two veſſels of ‖ fine copper, * precious as gold.

28 And I ſaid unto them, Ye are holy unto the Lord, the veſſels are holy alſo, and the ſilver and the gold are a free-will-offering unto the Lord God of your fathers.

29 Watch ye, and keep them, until ye weigh them before the chief of the prieſts, and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Iſrael at Jeruſalem, in the chambers of the houſe of the Lord.

30 So took the prieſts and the Levites the weight of the ſilver and the gold, and the veſſels, to bring them to Jeruſalem unto the houſe of our God.

31 ¶ Then we departed from the river of Ahava, on the twelfth day of the firſt month, to go unto Jeruſalem; and v the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of ſuch as lay in wait by the way.

33 ¶ Now on the fourth day was the ſilver and the gold, and the veſſels weighed in the houſe of our God, by the hand of Meri-moth the ſon of Uriah the prieſt, and with him was Eleazar the ſon of Phinehas, and with them was Jozabad the ſon of Jeſhua, and Noadiah the ſon of Binnui, Levites:

34 By number and by weight of every one: and all the weight was written at that time.

35 Alſo the children of thoſe that had been carried away which were come out of the captivity, k offered burnt-offerings unto the God of Iſrael, twelve bullocks for all Iſrael, ninety and ſix rams, ſeventy and ſeven lambs, twelve he-goats for a ſin-offering: all this was a burnt-offering unto the Lord.

k So Chap. 6. 17.

36 ¶ And they delivered the king's commiſſions unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors on this ſide the river, and they furthered the people, and the houſe of God.

C H A P. IX.

NOW when theſe things were done, the princes came to me, ſaying, The people of Iſrael, and the prieſts, and the Levites have will, they ſhall know that they are neither following cunningly deviſed fables, nor going a warfare at their own coſt, but that the ways of God's worſhip and ſervice, by which ſouls return unto him, through this life of trial, are both the ways of ſafety, of pleaſantneſs, and of peace, let thoſe that know them not ſpeak of them as they may.

V. 27. Fine copper, precious as gold—Not that it was of equal price and worth with it, but for its incomparable excellency in its kind, and for its great rarity, for which cauſe there were only two veſſels of that ſort.

V. 29. Watch ye, until ye weigh them, in the chambers of the houſe of the Lord—And what Ezra ſaid unto them that carried the ſacred veſſels, may be ſaid unto every one, as to all that God hath committed to their care—Time, talents, children, duties, of all it may be ſaid, Watch over them, till you ſhall appear before your great High Prieſt in Jeruſalem above; all will be weighed there from your hands; and he that in this life hath been faithful over the little that was committed to his ſtewardſhip by the Lord of all, ſhall hear him ſay, Come, ye bleſſed of the Lord, inherit the place prepared for you—prepared for you at the expence of his death, for whom you lived.

V. 31. The hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of ſuch as lay in wait by the way—By this it would appear, that they had thoſe who both openly oppoſed them, and ſuch as lay concealed to fall upon them; but his good hand, his guardian care ſhewed them the way to eſcape unhurt from both, and brought them ſafely to the place where they would be.

V. 35. The children which were come out of the captivity—Whom God had ſafely conducted to Jeruſalem. And out of how great captivity doth every ſoul come, that arrives at the heavenly Jeruſalem? How little is the moſt miſerable bondage the Jews were ever in, to be compared to that bondage of corruption in which every ſoul is held, till it is by grace delivered from it, and adopted a child of God, and eſtabliſhed in the kingdom of his dear Son.

V. 36. They delivered the king's commiſſions unto the king's lieutenants, and they furthered the people, and the houſe of God—And when the King of kings gives commiſſion for thoſe to aid his ſervants and his cauſe, who before oppoſed, they feel themſelves conſtrained by his mild and gracious command to further his holy will.

C H A P. IX.

V. 1. The princes came to me—Who feared God, and underſtood that Ezra was come with commiſſion from the king, to reform all diſorders. The people of Iſrael have not ſeparated themſelves from the people of the lands—From the heathen nations round about them, which God had expreſly commanded them to do. The children of Iſrael being required to live as the redeemed of the Lord, walking by his laws, they were not to contract marriages with thoſe who did not ſee themſelves ſinners, and in need of a Redeemer to ſave them from the wrath to come; as ſuch could not but think it loſt labour to worſhip God as the Jews were required to do, and unneceſſary to regard the commands of a lawgiver, whom they neither knew nor feared. Theſe unequal marriages were therefore forbid; and the miſery and danger that attended them is written for the inſtruction of the real Iſrael of God in all ages.

V. 2. The princes and rulers hath been chief in this trespass—Who should have restrained the people from this sin, by their authority and example, and by doing otherwise, made the sin more general, and involved themselves and the nation in the guilt of it.

V. 3. I rent my garment, and sat down astonished—For grief and shame at the sin; and for fear of some great and dreadful judgment which he expected and feared for it.

V. 4. Then were assembled unto me—To join with me both in lamenting the sin, and in endeavouring the redress of it. Every one that trembled at the words of the God of Israel—Who stood in awe of God, and of his word, and durst not violate his commands, or who feared his threatenings against those that did so, and trembled for fear of God's judgments upon them, and upon the whole land for their sakes.

V. 5. At the evening sacrifice I arose from my heaviness—Having mourned for the sin, I considered that was not sufficient, and that God expected the confession and amendment of it, and therefore I fell to prayer.

V. 6. O my God, I am ashamed for our iniquities—He includes himself in the number of the transgressors, because so many of the people having done this, the guilt was now become national.

V. 7. Since the days of our fathers, have we been in a great trespass unto this day—We are not purged from the guilt of our fathers sins, but we are still feeling the sad effects of their sins, in the continuing captivity of a great number of our brethren; and we are still repeating the same sins.

V. 8. Now for a little space—We have enjoyed this favour but a little while, and now we are sinning it away, and shortening our own happiness. To leave us a remnant to escape—That by his favour many of us should escape out of captivity, whom he calls but a remnant, because the far greatest part of the Israelitish nation were yet in captivity. To give us a nail—Some kind of settlement. In his holy place—The temple, which was the nail which fastened their tents, and gave them some ground of hopes to continue in their land. That our God may lighten our eyes—That he might revive and comfort our hearts. For as darkness is often put for a state of sorrow and affliction, so light is put for joy and comfort. And give us a little reviving in our bondage—For we are not quite delivered, but still wear our fetters upon us, being even here in subjection to our former lords.

V. 10. And now, O our God, what shall we say after this—What apology can we make for ourselves after thou hast conferred such great and high favours upon us, and we have so grossly abused them?

V. 11. The land is unclean—Polluted by its inhabitants.

14 Should we again break thy commandments, and join in affinity with the people of these abominations? wouldest not thou be angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be no remnant nor escaping?

15 O Lord God of Israel, thou art righteous, for we remain yet escaped, as it is this day: behold, we are before thee in our trespasses: for we cannot stand before thee, because of this.

sudden, and unexpected and amazing, not only to our enemies, but also to ourselves. Such deliverance as this—Great above our power to express.

V. 14. Should we again break thy commandments—Can we reasonably expect any thing from thee less than utter ruin?

V. 15. O Lord God of Israel, thou art righteous—Faithful to thy promise, in forgiving all them that truly repent; and just art thou in forgiving us sinful men, for the sake of the atonement made by thy beloved Son; by whose intercession we remain yet escaped—from entire destruction, which in ourselves we justly deserve. We are before thee in our trespasses—Our guilt is upon our heads, and we cannot stand before thee—To justify ourselves because of this—Even this single breach of thy law would expose us to the penalty of eternal death, had we in all things besides done thy will.

CHAP. X.

V. 1. There assembled unto him out of Israel, a very great congregation—Awakened by his words and example. So inexpressible is the good, which is done by good example, and the evil, which is done by bad example: The fame of his great passion of grief, and of his many and public expressions thereof in the court before the temple, being dispersed over all the city, brought a great company together. The people wept very sore—Being greatly affected with Ezra's prayer, and with the common sin and danger.

V. 2. Shechaniah answered and said unto Ezra, We have trespassed—This man's name is not in the following catalogue, but we have his father, Jehiel, and his father's brethren, five other sons of his grandfather Elam, ver. 26. It was therefore an evidence of his great courage, and good conscience, that he durst so freely and fully discharge his duty, whereby he shewed, that he honoured God more than his nearest and dearest relations. Yet now there is hope in Israel—In case of our repentance. Therefore let us not sorrow, like persons without hope, nor sit down in despair, but let us fall upon action and amend our errors, and then trust to the boundless goodness of our God, whose promises of mercy are made to all them that truly turn unto him.

V. 3. Let it be done according to the law—Let them be put away, according to the rules of God's law. Let us not presume to follow our own reason, or natural inclination, in opposition to what God hath required: we deserve more than all we shall suffer by obeying him, for having presumed to make those our nearest kindred who were strangers to God; who himself hath a right, and does require that entire and devout love which we have withheld from him. Let us therefore part with those who must be witnesses of our continuing in rebellion against the will of God, so long as they remain with us.

V. 4. Arise: for this matter belongeth unto thee—Because thou hast both skill to manage it, and authority from God to do it.

V. 8. Whosoever would not come, should be separated from the congregation—And they who will not come unto God as their Redeemer, must, after their appointed time of trial is over, be separated from his dwelling-place; and they who, in heart, will not forsake all for the love of him that died for them, are unworthy of him; and not being united by that faith to God which makes him the object of the soul's love, they, with those that would not come, must be separated from the church of the first-born above.

NEHEMIAH.

THIS is the laſt hiſtorical book of the Old Teſtament; it bears date 446 years before the coming of the Lord. It contains thirteen chapters.

CHAP. I. Nehemiah, underſtanding the miſery of Jeruſalem, mourneth, faſteth, and prayeth: his prayer.—CHAP. II. Artaxerxes, underſtanding the cauſe of Nehemiah's ſadneſs, ſendeth him with letters and commiſſion to Jeruſalem. Nehemiah, to the grief of the enemies, cometh to Jeruſalem: he vieweth ſecretly the ruins of the walls: he inciteth the Jews to build, in deſpite of the enemies.—CHAP. III. The names and order of them that builded the wall.—CHAP. IV. While the enemies ſcoff, Nehemiah prayeth, and continueth the work: Underſtanding the wrath and ſecrets of the enemy, he ſetteth a watch: he armeth the labourers, and giveth military precepts.—CHAP. V. The Jews complain of their debt, mortgage, and bondage. Nehemiah rebuketh the uſurers, and cauſeth them to make a covenaat of reſtitution: he forbeareth his own allowance, and keepeth hoſpitality.—CHAP. VI. Sanballet practiſeth by craft, by rumours, by hired prophecies, to terrify Nehemiah. The work is finiſhed to the terror of the enemies. Secret intelligence paſſeth between the enemies and the nobles of Judah.—CHAP. VII. Nehemiah committeth the charge of Jeruſalem to Hanani and Hananiah. A regiſter of the genealogy of them which came at the firſt out of Babylon, of the people, of the prieſts, of the Levites, of the Nethimims; of Solomon's ſervants, and of the prieſts which could not find their pedigree. The whole number of them with their ſubſtance. Their oblations.—CHAP. VIII. The religious manner of reading and hearing the law. They comfort the people. The forwardneſs of them to hear, and be inſtructed. They keep the feaſt of tabernacles.—CHAP. IX. A ſolemn faſt, and repentance of the people. The Levites make a religious confeſſion of God's goodneſs, and their wickedneſs.—CHAP. X. The names of them that ſealed the covenant. The points of the covenant.—CHAP. XI. The ruler's voluntary men, and the tenth men choſen by lot, dwell at Jeruſalem. A catalogue of their names. The reſidue dwell in other cities.—CHAP. XII. The prieſts, and the Levites which came up with Zerubbabel. The ſucceſſion of high prieſts, certain chief Levites. The ſolemnity of the dedication of the walls. The offices of prieſts and Levites appointed in the temple.—CHAP. XIII. Upon the reading of the law, ſeparation is made from the mixed multitude. Nehemiah, at his return, cauſeth the chambers to be cleanſed: he reformeth the offices in the houſe of God, the violation of the Sabbath, and the marriages with ſtrange wives.

6 Let thine ear now be attentive, and [i] thine eyes open, that thou mayest hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, day and night, for the children of Israel thy servants, and confess the sins of the children of Israel, which we have sinned against thee: both I and my father's house have sinned.

i 1 Kings 8. 29.

7 We have dealt very corruptly against thee, and have not kept the commandments, nor the statutes, nor the judgments, which thou commandedst thy servant Moses.

cir. 445.

AND it came to pass in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year of [a] Artaxerxes the king, that wine was before him: and I took up the wine, and gave it unto the king. Now I had not been beforetime sad in his presence.

a Ezra 7. 1.

2 Wherefore the king said unto me, Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? this is nothing else but sorrow of heart. Then I was very sore afraid,

3 And said unto the king, [b] Let the king live for ever: why should not my countenance be sad, when the city, the place of my fathers sepulchres lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?

b 1 Kings 1. 31. Dan. 2. 4. and 5. 10. and 6. 6, 21.

4 Then

not being yet in a condition to rebuild them, nor having commission from the kings of Persia to do so, but only to build the temple, and their own private houses. And this made their enemies scorn them; who also would have ruined them, but for fear of offending the Persian king.

V. 4. I sat down and wept, and mourned, and prayed before the God of heaven—Thus did this servant of God begin to seek him with penitent grief, and earnest prayer long continued.

V. 5. O Lord God of heaven, the great and terrible God—To all that neglect or despise thy mercy, after having offended against thy purity and justice. But that keepeth covenant, and mercy for them that love him, and observe his commandments—Without respect of persons, or change or discontinuance.

V. 7. We have dealt very corruptly—We have wholly corrupted ourselves, and our ways, and thy worship: We have not looked to the Lord our Maker, nor had respect to the Holy One of Israel. We have not considered ourselves as bought with a price. God, for the sake of the promised Saviour, gave his grace to our fathers, and offered the same unto us, but we would not obey his voice; purity, justice, mercy, and truth we put far from us, and followed our own vain imaginations, and corrupt desires, till all these evils have come upon us from the Lord; that by the example of our sufferings, mankind may be taught to believe in God their Redeemer, and worship and obey him in spirit and in truth.

V. 8. If ye transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the nations—How is this word fulfilled—this prophecy accomplished in the state of the Jews in the world at this day? They are scattered among the nations of the earth. And is this nothing to me, if I have not respect to that Redeemer whom they are thus scattered for not regarding, and who was, according to Moses and the prophets, lifted up in vain to so many thousands of their forefathers, who would not believe all the proofs they had from the immediate hand of God, that Jesus was his beloved Son, the promised Saviour of the world?

V. 9. If ye turn unto me—By ceasing every one from the evil you are convinced of, and looking for forgiveness and grace through the Mediator, then though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of heaven, yet will I gather them from thence—To the knowledge of myself, and each for himself shall be a soul blessed of the Lord, with pardon and grace in this life, and with endless glory in the world to come.

V. 11. Grant him mercy in the sight of this man—For the hearts of all are in thy hands, and all things are made to serve thy gracious designs for the salvation of lost mankind.

CHAP. II.

V. 2. Why is thy countenance sad—His fasting, joined with inward grief, had made a sensible change in his very countenance. Then I was very sore afraid—Being daunted by the suddenness and sharpness of his question. And thus it often with those who, with godly sorrow, are seeking the favour of him in whose sight they have sinned; when, by the spirit of his grace, the conscience finds itself called upon to say, What is the cause of its sorrow? It is sore afraid even at receiving the answer to its own prayers long and earnestly offered up: but to all he says, It is I, be not afraid; turn not with dread away from thy Redeemer, who is about to make known to thee, how much he delighteth to shew mercy, and to forgive, and the greatness of his power to save from all adversity.

V. 3. Let the king live for ever—My sadness comes not from any discontent with my own condition, or any disaffection to the

Before Christ 446.

4 Then the king said unto me, for what dost thou make request? So I prayed to the God of heaven.

5 And I said unto the king, If it please the king, and if thy servant have found favour in thy sight, that thou wouldest send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers sepulchres, that I may build it.

* Heb. wife.

6 And the king said unto me, (the * queen also sitting by him) For how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? So it pleased the king to send me, and I set him a time.

c Chap. 5. 14. and 13. 6.

7 Moreover, I said unto the king, If it please the king, let letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that they may convey me over till I come into Judah;

8 And a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which appertained [d] to the house, and for the wall of the city, and for the house that I shall enter into. And the king granted me, [e] according to the good hand of my God upon me.

e Ezra 5. 5. and 7. 6 9. 28. Verse 18.

9 ¶ Then I came to the governors beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. (Now the king had sent captains of the army, and horsemen with me)

Before Christ 446.

10 When Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant the Ammonite, heard of it, it grieved them exceedingly that there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel.

11 So I [i] came to Jerusalem, and was there three days.

i Ezra 8. 32.

12 ¶ And I arose in the night, I and some few men with me, neither told I any man what my God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem: neither was there any beast with me, save the beast that I rode upon.

13 And I went out by night, [v] by the gate of the valley, even before the dragon-well, and to the dung-port, and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire.

v 2 Chro. 26. 9. Chap. 3. 13.

14 Then I went on to the gate of the fountain, and to the king's pool: but there was no place for the beast that was under me to pass.

15 Then went I up in the night by the brook, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entered by the gate of the valley, and so returned.

king, for whom my hearty prayers are, that he may live for ever, but from another cause. The place of my fathers sepulchres lieth waste—Which, by all nations, are esteemed sacred.

V. 4. So I prayed to the God of heaven—To direct my thoughts and words, and to incline the king's heart to grant my request. And happy are they that have learnt to pray always, and to speak and answer in the fear of God; and as those that must one day give an account even for every idle word. (Mat. xii. 36.)

V. 5. If it please the king—My request I humbly submit to the king. If thy servant have found favour in thy sight—I pretend no merit, but am an humble suppliant for thy grace and favour, whereof having received some tokens, I am thereby emboldened to make this further request.

V. 6. When wilt thou return—This question shewed the king's respect and affection to him, and that he was not willing to want his attendance longer than was necessary.

V. 8. The king granted me, according to the good hand of my God upon me—According to the favour which God was pleased to give me in his sight, and for which I had sought the Lord by earnest prayer: thus proving the truth of what the Lord hath, for the sake of the Redeemer, said unto all—Ye shall not seek my face—mercy or grace, in vain.

V. 9. Now the king had sent captains of the army, and horsemen with me—He did more for him than all he desired: and thus are the dealings of the Lord of all represented to us—God constantly giving unto all that come unto him in the name of his beloved Son, more than they ask, or even think. Who then, in this world of sorrow and death, are so much to be pitied, as they who are deluded into a belief, that the knowledge of the true God and of Jesus Christ, in this life, is a dream? It is a reality; it is heaven begun on earth; all besides is but a dream, which death will wake the soul from into endless misery, that departs this life without believing the evidence, the world, and the word of God are filled with—That God is loving to every man, and to them that put their trust in him, he will freely give them all things, because he has not spared his only Son from the death of the cross for their sakes. (Rom. viii. 32. John xvii. 3. Job xxii. 21.)

V. 10. It grieved them exceedingly that there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel—Why were they grieved that any one should truly seek to promote the welfare of this people? It convinced them of sin—of want of charity—they were the children of the wicked one, to whom all that proceeds from God is hateful.

V. 11. I was there three days—Inquiring into the state of the city.

V. 12. I arose in the night—Concealing both his intentions and actions, as far and as long as he could, as knowing that the life of his business lay in secrecy and expedition. Neither told I any man what God had put in my heart—How many may be called to act from God and for him, who, by consulting with flesh and blood, they advise away with human reason, the immediate dictates of the grace of God, and frustrate his designs of love and goodness to themselves, and those for whose benefit he would have employed them. (Gal. ii. 21.)

V. 14. But there was no place for the beast to pass—The way being obstructed with rubbish.

V. 15. And so returned—Having gone round about the city: they that go about to repair the walls of Jerusalem—to make up the breaches—they shall be blessed as the children of God. (Matth. v. 9.) For no work of peace or charity shall return unanswered to those that would heal divisions, and imitate the Prince of peace in repairing the injuries that are done by the malice of satan and the deceitfulness of sin, rebuilding the walls, and setting up the gates of the spiritual Jerusalem. And he that deviseth and stedfastly executeth liberal things, by liberal things shall he be again blessed of the Lord, whom he loveth to please.

V. 19. Geshem

Before Christ 445.

16 And the rulers knew not whither I went, or what I did, neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers, nor to the rest that did the work.

17 ¶ Then said I unto them, Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burnt with fire: come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproach.

v Ver. 8.

18 Then I told them of [v] the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let us rise up and build. So they strengthened their hands for this good work.

19 But when Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant the Ammonite, and Geshem the Arabian heard it, they laughed us to scorn, and despised us, and said, What is

V. 19. Geshem the Arabian—It seems probable that both he, and Sanballat, and Tobiah, were chief men or governors among the Samaritans, or in their army. Will ye rebel against the king—Do you design to fortify this city against the king?

V. 20. The God of heaven, he will prosper us—And our dependance is on him, therefore we will arise and build—without any fear of your opposition; for ye have no portion, nor right—You have no authority over us, nor interest in our church or state, but are aliens from the commonwealth of Israel. And you have nothing to do to inquire into, or meddle with our concerns, or to hinder us in our present undertaking.

CHAP. III.

V. 1. The high priest rose up—Began the work; and all the work that is done in building the walls of the spiritual Jerusalem, is begun by the Great High-Priest: he is the Great master-builder. They sanctified it—By solemn prayer and sacrifice, whereby it was dedicated to God's service.

V. 2. The men of Jericho—The posterity of the ancient inhabitants of Jericho.

V. 5. Their nobles put not their necks to the work of their Lord—Did not submit to it, would not further it, either through pride, or sloth, or carelessness, or covetousness, or secret compliance with the enemies of the Jews; they are branded therefore to all posterity, for the neglect of so great and pious a work. When riches, worldly honours, or fulness of bread, are added to the natural unwillingness of the mind of man, to do any work for God, or to engage in religious duties, it is no wonder that so few of the noble and mighty should appear on the side of real piety in all ages. And how much is it to be regretted, that the service of the King of kings should be slighted and neglected, by those his providence hath placed at the head of the human race, and that they who are most highly favoured, and have the greatest advantages, should so generally be found most backward, in open public returns of gratitude and devotion to God: what dangerous temptations do the bulk of mankind escape, by the circumstances in which it has pleased God to place them, and which, instead of leading them to repine at a life of labour, demands their constant thankfulness, that they are not in those situations which expose all that are in them to that most dangerous state of thinking, and, in consequence of it, of acting as if they owed God nothing, who gave, and every moment gives, life to all the living, with all that they possess.

V. 7. Unto the throne of the governor—Unto the place where the governor of the country on this side Euphrates, under the Persian kings, sometimes had a palace or throne, to which all persons living in the adjacent parts were to resort for judgment.

V. 12. He and his daughters—Who were either heireſſes or widows, and cauſed part to be done at their charges. By this it appears, that the daughters of Jeruſalem took part in the public work of the Lord.

V. 16. After him repaired Nehemiah the ruler againſt the ſepulchres of David—The place which David appointed for his own ſepulchre, and the ſepulchres of his ſucceſſors, the kings of Iſrael and Judah. Thus did he perform that of which he ſpake to the king, when he firſt named his deſire of coming to Jeruſalem, to execute the pious and public-ſpirited deſign which God had put into his heart, and given him to do for the generation in which he lived. The houſe of the mighty—Which poſſibly was formerly appointed for the receipt of thoſe chief captains that ſhould attend upon the king, or of other valiant commanders who ſhould, upon occaſion, reſort to Jeruſalem.

V. 20. Baruch earneſtly repaired the other piece—Did his work with eminent diligence and fervency.

V. 22. The men of the plain—From whence they came to Jeruſalem, when the ſervice of the temple required it.

V. 27. The Tekoites—The ſame ſpoken of before, v. 5. who, having diſpatched their firſt ſhare ſooner than their brethren had done theirs, freely offered their help to ſupply the defects of others. And this, their double diligence, is noted both for the greater ſhame of their nobles, who would not do any part of it, and for their own greater honour, who were ſo far from being corrupted by the bad example, that they were rather quickened and enflamed to greater zeal and induſtry in this public and pious work.

V. 28. Every one over againſt his houſe—Did the work that was appointed them; and by ſo doing ſet an example to every father of a family, and maſter of an houſe, whoſe work it is to take charge of all that belong to it, with a view to their being built up in the knowledge and love of God; and proceeding as conſtantly, as now they went on with the work of building and repairing the walls of the place, where God had required his people of old to worſhip him, and to call upon him in the ſight of all mankind.

V. 30. Over againſt his chamber—He that had an houſe did the repairs which came againſt it; and they that had but chambers did a Chap. 2. 10.

BUT it came to pass, [a] that when Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he was wroth, and took great indignation, and mocked the Jews.

2 And he spake before his brethren, and the army of Samaria, and said, What do these feeble Jews? will they † fortify themselves? will they sacrifice? will they make an end in a day? will they revive the stones out of the heaps of the rubbish, which are burnt?

† Heb. leave to themselves.

3 Now Tobiah the Ammonite was by him, and he said, Even that which they build, if a fox go up, he shall even break down their stone-wall.

* Heb. despite.

4 Hear, O our God, for we are * despised: and turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity:

b Psal. 69. 27, 28. and 109. 14, 15. Jer. 18. 23.

5 And [b] cover not their iniquity, and let not their sin be blotted out from before thee: for they have provoked thee to anger before the builders.

Before Christ 445.

6 So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof: for the people had a mind to work.

7 ¶ But it came to pass that when Sanballat and Tobiah, and the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites, heard that the walls of Jerusalem † were made up, and that the breaches began to be stopped, then they were very wroth, † Heb. ascended.

8 And conspired all of them together, to come and to fight against Jerusalem, and § to hinder it.

§ Heb. to make an error to it.

9 Nevertheless, we made our prayer unto our God, and set a watch against them day and night, because of them.

10 And Judah said, The strength of the bearers of burdens is decayed, and there is much rubbish, so that we are not able to build the wall.

11 And our adversaries said, They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease.

12 And it came to pass that when the Jews which dwelt by them, came, they said unto us ten times, ‖ From all places, whence ye shall return unto us, they will be upon you.

‖ Or, That from all places ye must return to us.

13 ¶ Therefore did the same: And thus is it required of all that would inhabit the heavenly Jerusalem, to do the work of the Lord wherever they live.

CHAP. IV.

V. 1. When Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he was wroth, took great indignation, and mocked the Jews—Grief and vexation are the miserable emotions of those minds who do not wish well to the works of real religion, and contempt is the language of their lips.

V. 3. If a fox go up, he shall even break down their stone-wall—Their work is so slightly done, that any thing will destroy it: and thus have the enemies of God and of his people often thought, and as often have they found themselves mistaken: That which is opposed to the nature and will of God, shall come to nothing, though it had all the support that the united power of devils and wicked men could give it; but that which belongs to God is like himself, and will never be destroyed, but shall even prosper most when most opposed.

V. 4. Turn their reproach upon their own head—This, and the following requests, may seem harsh, but they were both just, as being directed against such malicious, inveterate, and implacable enemies to God, and to his people, and necessary for the vindication and defence of God's honour, and worship, and people. Give them for a prey in the land of captivity—Give them for a prey to their enemies, and let these carry them into the land of captivity.

V. 5. Let not their sin be blotted out from before thee—Let their wickedness be in thy sight, so as to bring down deserved judgments upon them, that either they may be convinced and reformed, or others may be warned by their example. God is said to cover or hide sin when he forbears to punish it. For they have provoked thee to anger before the builders—They have not only provoked us builders, but thee also: And as they thus set themselves against thee, it is they themselves that call for these judgments to be inflicted upon them, they being no other than the natural and necessary consequence of their sin.

V. 6. So built we the wall, unto the half thereof—In height: For the whole circumference of the wall was distributed among the builders. For the people had a mind to work—And feeble handed as the Jews were now thought to be by their enemies, their hearts and minds were in the work, and the good hand of their God being upon them, their labour was soon attended with great success. The feeblest hands, with the heart in the work, we see, by this, can do great things in the work of the Lord.

V. 10. The Jews now dwelling in Judah, to wit, some of them being partly terrified by their enemies, and partly wearied with hard and continual labours, more than they were able suddenly to remove, being forced to spend their time in removing the rubbish, and other works imposed upon them; and therefore they must desist, at least for a season.

V. 11. They shall not know, till we come and slay them—We will come secretly, and unexpectedly upon them, so as they shall neither foresee their danger, nor be able to prevent it. Thus has it often been intended by the adversary of the church of God, and those he stirred up to oppose it; and chiefly so at the beginning of every revival of real religion, before all the walls of the spiritual Jerusalem were built, and before there was the appearance of numbers sufficient to resist them; as, on the other hand, when the numbers are greatly increased, instead of attempting to crush them by outward enemies, the adversary has been more successful by inward divisions

V. 12. When the Jews which dwelt by them——Among them; whereby they came to the knowledge of their counsels. They said unto us ten times—Very often. A certain number for an uncertain. They will be upon you—They will invade you every way, by which

* Heb. from the lower parts of the place, &c.

14 And I looked, and rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, Be not ye afraid of them: remember the Lord which is great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons and your daughters, your wives and your houses.

15 And it came to pass when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, [c] and God had brought their counsel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work.

c Job 5. 12.

16 And it came to pass from that time forth, that the half of my servants wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons; and the rulers were behind all the house of Judah.

17 They which builded on the wall, and they that bare burdens, with those that laded, every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon.

Before Christ 445.

18 For the builders, every one had his sword girded † by his side, and so builded: and he that sounded the trumpet was by me.

† Heb. on his loins.

19 ¶ And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the wall, one far from another.

20 In what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us: [d] our God shall fight for us.

d Exod. 14. 14, 25. Deut. 1. 30.

21 So we laboured in the work: and half of them held the spears, from the rising of the morning, till the stars appeared.

22 Likewise at the same time said I unto the people, Let every one with his servant lodge within Jerusalem, that in the night they may be a guard to us, and labour on the day.

23 So neither I, nor my brethren, nor my servants, nor the men of the guard which followed we can come to you, or you to us; and therefore do you keep watches on every side. Their adversaries had intended to come upon them unawares, but God, to whom they had prayed, ver. 9. graciously took care that his servants should be made acquainted with their danger.

V. 13. Thus did the prophet guard against the danger of which he was informed: he provided for the defence both for the higher places, and those that were yet lower: and thus do they who keep their hearts with all diligence; they are not unmindful of the danger they are made acquainted with by the word of God, and they have no unguarded part; but equally provide for the defence of the lowest as well as of the highest passion or desire of their souls; and this they do by constantly looking to Him, who never slumbereth or sleepeth, but whose compassionate mind is always attentive to his feeble creatures, and ever ready to send deliverance, protection, and support to all who feel their own weakness, and call upon him continually for that aid, without which the watchmen are placed but in vain.

V. 14. I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, Be not ye afraid of them: remember the Lord—All of you call to mind what you have heard and read of the mighty power of the Lord, to save and defend all them that put their trust in him.

V. 15. God had brought their counsel to nought—Thus in times of difficulty do the children and servants of the Lord, evidently see how graciously he conducts all that concerns them; and they often lament that they are not always equally careful to observe the discoveries of his goodness to them, which, on God's part, is invariably the same, whether those that fear him and hope in his mercy are suffering under trials and difficulties, or they are receiving his consolations, all which equally flow from the same love, and equally intended to lead all to love him, and be blessed in himself for ever.

V. 16. It came to pass from that time forth—Lest our enemies should repeat their enterprize. That the half of my servants—Of my domestic servants. Wrought in the work, and the other half of them held the spears, the shields, and the bows—The work of the wall was for their future safety, and their weapons were for their present defence; and the one part could not say to the other, We have no need of you: and thus does the head and governor of his church variously employ his servants, but equally with a view to the safety and the happiness of the whole.

V. 17. Every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon—This is not to be taken properly, but figuratively: They were no less prepared to defend themselves from danger, than they were to go on with their work: And thus is it with all that are engaged in the Lord's spiritual work; they are industriously employed in what their Lord calls them to do, and whilst they are engaged in it, they are mindful that their spiritual enemies do not break in upon them, and wound or destroy them, and defeat the gracious designs of the Lord by their means.

V. 18. He that sounded the trumpet was by me—That they all might be informed from the prophet, what was the work of the moment; to whom their ear was attentive, whilst their hands were employed: And thus is it with all that are engaged in the work of the Lord, their hearts are attentive to his voice and to his call, whilst they are labouring to do his will.

V. 20 Our God shall fight for us——We have only to put our trust in him, and to be doing the work he hath given us to do, and then he, in whom we believe, and to whom we live, will charge himself with our safety; and the battle will be the Lord's, not ours.

V. 21. So we laboured—Working very early, and very late.

V. 22. Let every one with his servant lodge within Jerusalem—That they may be safe themselves, and assist to defend all the other servants of the Lord. And thus do all, that are living watchfullives, keep within the walls of the spiritual Jerusalem, by never going where duty does not call them, which would, by their example, weaken their brethren, and expose themselves to the adversary of their peace, who is always going about seeking whom he may devour, by finding them without the bounds of the promises of God, which do not include those, who, themselves, carelessly or wilfully expose themselves.

V. 23. None of us put off our clothes—Neither day nor night; they constantly kept themselves in readiness for fighting. And thus, though not literally, yet spiritually, do they live, who are acquainted with the greatness of those powers of darkness, who are followed me, none of us put off our clothes, ‡ saving that every one put them off for washing.

‡ Or, every one went with his weapon for water. See Judg. 5. 11.

are constantly bent on the destruction of every soul of man: They know not how soon and suddenly they may be called to the last conflict with satan, and to experience the final and utmost power of their Redeemer to save, before he takes them to himself for ever.

CHAP. V.

V. 1. There was a cry of the people against their brethren the Jews—The great and rich ones who had oppressed their brethren.

V. 2. We, our sons, and our daughters are many—Which is in itself a blessing, but to us is turned into a curse. We take up corn for them—We are forced by our and their necessities to take up corn upon their own unreasonable terms.

V. 4. We have borrowed money for the king's tribute—Which was laid upon them all. This was a part of the affliction sent upon the Jews for their impiety, that their civil governors exacted more from them than they could pay by their labour, and maintain themselves.

V. 5. Our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren—We are of the same nature, and nation, and religion with them, although they treat us as if we were their slaves, forgetting both humanity and God's law. (Deut. xv. 7.) We bring into bondage our sons and our daughters—We are compelled to sell them for our subsistance, which was an evidence of their great necessity. Neither is it in our power to redeem them—Which we are allowed to do, but have not wherewith to do it.

V. 7. Then I consulted with myself—What I should do against this breach of God's law, and for the relief of his people, for whose protection the Lord sent me among them. I rebuked the nobles, and the rulers, and I set a great assembly against them—I called a public congregation, both of the rulers and people, the greatest part whereof were free from this guilt, and therefore more impartial judges of the matter, and represented it to them, that the offenders might be convinced, and reform this abuse. Thus does God, by the conduct of the prophet, make known how hateful oppression is in his sight.

V. 8. We, after our ability, have redeemed our brethren which were sold unto the heathen—I, and my brethren, and predecessors, have used our utmost interest and power, both with the kings of Persia, that our brethren might be redeemed from that bondage into which God had sold them for their sins; and with particular persons in Babylon, and Persia, and the adjacent parts, whose bond-slaves the Jews were, and who would not part with them without a price, which we paid for them. Shall they be sold unto us?—Do you expect that we should pay you a price for them, as we did to the Babylonians? Or, must we use as much importunity to solicit you for their redemption, as we did to their enemies?

V. 9. I said, It is not good—It is a very bad and wicked thing: A common figure by which more is understood than is expressed. Ought ye not to walk in the fear of our God—From whose righteous judgment you will receive the reward of your own injustice and severe dealings, if you do not, before God calls you to judgment, truly reform your conduct. And this you are also bound to do to prevent. The reproach of the heathen our enemies—Who are round about you, and observe all your actions, and will loath and reproach both you for such barbarous usage of your brethren, and religion, for your sakes: Which if you have any love or respect either to God, or to yourselves, you will prevent.

V. 10. I likewise, and my brethren—Those who are employed with me in the government of this people. And my servants—In my name, and for my use. Might exact of them money and corn—As a just recompence for our pains and care for the public good, to which we wholly devote ourselves, even to the neglect of all our private concerns. But I will not rigorously exact, but do freely remit, my own right, which, in those circumstances, it is my duty to do: This was the consequence of his being under the influence of the fear of God, and a due conviction that he was soon to give an account to him, for the very spirit in which he went through all his administrations: He durst not therefore, in a time of general distress, allow himself to exact even what would have been allowed him for the support of his dignity; he knew he should have more of the honour that cometh of God, by doing his utmost for the people's ease under their burdens, as well as for their safety against their public enemies.

V. 11. Restore them the hundredth part—Which they required every month, for the use of their monies or goods, according to the custom then used, and afterwards by the Romans.

V. 12. Such

V. 12. Such were the effects of this example of godly generoſity, the nobles and principal men ſeeing the reality of this diſintereſted ſpirit, could no longer continue a conduct which placed them in ſo unworthy a light in the eyes of all the people.

V. 13. And all the congregation ſaid, Amen, and praiſed the Lord—For that grace which he had been pleaſed to give to their chief governor, and to all their nobles and rulers, by which they were delivered from the miſerable effects of the ſpirit of ſelfiſhneſs and avarice, under which they had long laboured.

God being the univerſal governor and benefactor of mankind, all that forward his gracious deſigns with a view to pleaſe him, only do ſo in any degree becauſe the ſpirit of the Lord hath become the principle from which their conduct ſprings; and no certainty proceeding from the nature of things, can equal that of the bleſſedneſs that will be returned from God to all, who truly fall in with his conſtant, invariable deſigns of love and goodwill to all mankind, and ſtudy and labour to give them their utmoſt and moſt immediate effects.

10 Afterward I came unto the house of Shemaiah the son of Delaiah, the son of Mehetabeel, who was shut up; and he said, Let us meet together in the house of God, within the temple, and let us shut the doors of the temple; for they will come to slay thee, yea, in the night will they come to slay thee. Before Christ 445.

11 And I said, Should such a man as I flee? and who is there that being as I am, would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in.

12 And lo, I perceived that God had not sent him, but that he pronounced this prophecy against me: for Tobiah and Sanballat had hired him.

13 Therefore was he hired, that I should be afraid, and do so, and sin, and that they might have matter for an evil report, that they might reproach me.

14 [e] My God, think thou upon Tobiah and Sanballat, according to these their works, and on the prophetess Noadiah, and the rest of the prophets, that would have put me in fear. e Chap. 13 29.

15 ¶ So the wall was finished, in the twenty and fifth day of the month Elul, in fifty and two days. cir. 445.

mating that he would do that by force, which he had intended to do by sudden surprise.

V. 6. According to these words—According to these reports.

V. 7. Thou hast also appointed prophets to preach, saying, There is a king in Judah—Thus is it indirectly discovered, that Nehemiah had a greater work in view than that of building walls of stone, and setting up gates of wood and iron: the heathen indeed understood, that he appointed prophets to preach of himself as the king of Judah, but this character Nehemiah never took upon him; his Saviour was the subject of the public discourses of the prophets—The Lord, merciful and gracious, receiving returning penitent sinners into his favour, pardoning their iniquities, transgression, and sin, binding up the broken-hearted, and by his Spirit giving the liberty of the children of God, to those that were fast bound in darkness and misery.

V. 9. They all made us afraid—(i. e.) They endeavoured to do so, and did terrify some persons.

V. 10. I came unto the house of Shemaiah, who was shut up—In his chamber adjoining to the temple, upon pretence that they could be safe no where but in the temple, which the very heathens owned for a sanctuary, which they might not violate. And he said, Let us meet together in the house of God, within the temple—For the danger is so near, that we cannot safely remain here so long as to consult what to do in this juncture. His design was to discourage and disgrace Nehemiah, and thereby to strike a dread into all the people, and give a speedy and full stop to the work: and to prepare the way for the enemies to assault and take the city, whilst Nehemiah was shut up, and unable to give them any opposition: and to justify their accusation of Nehemiah to the king, by his flight.

V. 11. And I said—To those that wanted to make me afraid, should such a man as I flee—From his duty, and betray his trust, at the report of any danger that may attend the discharge of it? Who is there that being employed in the service of God as I am, would go into the temple under any pretence to save his life, at the expence of becoming conscious of his unfaithfulness, and against all his own experience, shew his distrust of God's care and goodness? No, I will not go in—but die in the very act of doing what God hath called me to, if it be his will to suffer my life to be required of me: it may be my duty to die, but it is not my duty to leave the work of God undone, for fear of a man that shall die; this would be to sin against the Lord my maker, who stretched forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth, and before whose almighty power the sons of men are but as the grass of the field. (Isa. li. 12.)

V. 12. I perceived that God had not sent him—By considering the nature and pernicious consequence of this counsel; by the suggestion of God's spirit, whose counsel and help I sought: and by the event which discovered that there was no such danger from the approach of the enemy, as was pretended.

V. 13. That I should be afraid, and do so, and sin—By obeying man rather than God, by setting an example of distrust, and by shewing by my conduct, after all I had done, that I thought God either could not, or would not, take care of them that believed in him, and did his will on earth, as it is done by the angels of heaven, against all the opposition that is made to their ministry to mankind by the powers of darkness.

V. 14. My God, think thou upon these their works—Shew, O Lord, by the returns they shall meet with, that thou rewardest every man according to his work, that others may be taught to fear thy wrath, and not do the will of satan, by endeavouring to discourage those that are employed in the work of the Lord.

V. 15. So the wall was finished—By the prophet's faithful dependance on God, they were safely brought to the conclusion of the work the Lord had given them to do; in the course of which, an exact account was taken of the work that was done, and by whom it was done. And is it not thus in every age of the church of God? When the work of that age is done, it is known to the Great Master builder the part that is done by each, that every one may receive his due reward. Happy will it then be for those that faithfully finished the work which God, in their day of trial, gave them to do; and to whom he will say, Well done, good and faithful servants, enter ye into the joy of your Lord.

Before Christ cir. 445.

16 And it came to pass that when all our enemies heard thereof, and all the heathen that were about us saw these things, they were much cast down in their own eyes: for they perceived that this work was wrought of our God.

17 ¶ Moreover, in those days the nobles of Judah † sent many letters unto Tobiah, and the letters of Tobiah came unto them.

† Heb. multiplied their letters passing to Tobiah.

18 For there were many in Judah sworn unto him, because he was the son in law of Shechaniah the son of Arah; and his son Johanan had taken the daughter of Meshullam, the son of Berechiah.

3 And I said unto them, Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened, until the sun be hot; and while they stand by, let them shut the doors, and bar them: and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one in his watch, and every one to be over against his house.

V. 16. They perceived that this work was wrought of our God—Thus do the servants of the wicked one understand the work of God, and therefore their condemnation will be from themselves; who first opposed, and then were cast down at the success of the work of God. And have not they just cause to fear that they are of the spirit these men were of, who are secretly sorry at the success of the work of God, in turning sinners into the ways of peace among those that follow not with them?

V. 17. The nobles of Judah sent many letters unto Tobiah—Corresponding with him against Nehemiah, and against their own city and nation: And are not many led to do wickedly by opening their hearts unguardedly to the spiritual enemies of God, and of his children and servants; hearing all that their accuser hath to say, and carrying forward his designs by giving words to satan's evil suggestions? Much does it concern us to try the spirits, and to know who they are that we correspond with in the thoughts of our hearts: Evil-thinking is the ground on which evil words and actions grow.

V. 18. There were many in Judah sworn unto him—To be true to him in the prosecution of his wicked designs. They had taken their part, and were determined to continue on the side that was opposed to God.

V. 19. They reported his good deeds before me—If the enemies of God professed wickedness, and were uniformly wicked, the danger of their influence would be far less than it is: They that obey satan may have many good deeds to be spoken of; the more and the better is his purpose answered by their means, if they only will continue in the design of opposing the work of the grace of God in the soul of man, as the sole cause of all that is in its nature good and acceptable to God; which nothing is but that which proceeds from God, and is done from a principle of faith in God, through the only Mediator between God and man.

CHAP. VII.

V. 2. Hananiah the ruler of the palace—Of Nehemiah's court, justly so called, because he lived in great splendor, and like a viceroy, though it was wholly at his own charge. He was set over Jerusalem—To preserve its peace and safety, and to take particular care of the shutting the gates of the city. For he—Hananiah last mentioned: For it was needless to say any thing in commendation of Hanani, who had shewn his piety and zeal for God and his country, in taking a tedious journey from Jerusalem to Shushan, to inform Nehemiah of the sad estate of Jerusalem, and to implore his helping hand to relieve it, chap. i. A faithful man—A man wholly devoted to God to do his will at all hazards, and who regulated his whole conduct by the fear of God—as being accountable in all things to him; and this he did above many—having a far deeper conviction of the presence of God, and of the necessity of doing every action with a single intention to please him, and with a constant view to his living for ever with the Lord his Redeemer, in that blessed world where every work of faith, his whole labour of love, every act of self-denial, and all his patient sufferings, would receive a due recompence of reward in that eternal glory, which is the blessed consequence of being faithful unto death. Nehemiah, in making choice of such men to the chief authority, shewed how much the written word of God was the rule of his conduct. (Exod. xviii. 21.)

V. 3. Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened, until the sun be hot—Till it be clear and broad day; when the enemies approach may be discovered, and the people of the city will be ready for defending it in case of an assault. And while they—The watches appointed. Stand by every one over against his house—Every one in his turn keeping watch in that place which is next to his house. And as they were directed to wait the sun's rising before they opened the gates, so is the light and love communicated by the Sun of righteousness, to be looked for every morning, that all dangers may be guarded against, and every duty performed by the aid of that grace, without which no work is done to the glory of God, or to the safety and happiness of the soul of man.

V. 4. The houses were not builded—Not all, nor compleatly built; but only some slight buildings were made for the present use of the generality of the people.

V. 5. My God put into mine heart—Thus does he ascribe all that he did in the work of the Lord, to the gracious influence of his holy spirit, first suggesting to him what he was to do, and then enabling him to do it. In the account he took, the names of all were included; both those that did the work, and they that opposed it: And thus will all be included in those everlasting books which will be opened in the great day of the Lord, out of which, all the living will be judged according to their works. (Rev. xx. 12.)

The grace of God not only communicates heavenly wiſdom, peace, and power to the mind, but the effects of it are felt by the body; and though many of the children of God may ſuffer ſickneſs and weakneſs, yet the love of God in the mind is the great and general cauſe of health and ſtrength: it is the ſovereign remedy of all miſeries, and prevents all the bodily diſorders the paſſions introduce, by keeping the paſſions themſelves within due bounds: and by the unſpeakable joy, and perfect calm ſerenity and tranquillity it gives the mind, it becomes the moſt powerful of all the means of health and of long life.

mind in which alone they can dwell with God, or to whom heaven itself would be a place of joy. It is unreasonable to expect that will ever love God's word that remain ignorant of its worth, by allowing themselves to live in the neglect of it: They that will taste it as a taste for a season, will soon find themselves richly rewarded. Wise and good men need only be known in order to be loved; but the word of God contains the wisdom and goodness of God himself, and it cannot be that any shall become intimately acquainted with it, and not find their hearts affected with the love of God, whose love to mankind is the great subject of the Scriptures.

CHAP. IX.

V. 1. Now, in the twenty and fourth day of this month—The next day but one after the feast of tabernacles, which began on the 14th day, and ended on the 22d day: their consciences having been awakened by the law read to them, and their hearts being full of grief for their great sins, which they were not allowed to express in that time of public joy; but now, when that was past, they assume their former thoughts, and recalling their sins to mind, fix upon a day for solemn fasting and humiliation.

The children of Israel separated themselves from all strangers—From the heathen, and particularly from those women whom some of them had married. And confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers—Which they made to be one cause of their present sufferings: and because they, by their practices, had justified their fathers sins, and made them their own.

V. 3. They stood up in their place, and read in the book of the law—As they did before, giving them the sense of what they read. One fourth part of the day—For three hours; for there were accounted twelve hours in their day. Another fourth part they confessed—Both God's mercies and their own sins. And worshipped the Lord their God—By the acknowledgment and adoration of his mercy in forgiving their sins, and saving them from the deserved judgments which they either felt or feared, and giving them his law, and the knowledge thereof: and by imploring his further grace and mercy to them.

V. 4. And cried with a loud voice—Thereby testifying their deep sense of their sins and miseries, and their fervent desire of God's mercy.

V. 5. Stand up and bless the Lord your God for ever and ever—Give glory to his name before the people of the Lord, for what by his grace in you, and his providence over you, he hath done for you in particular, that his name may be praised on your account, and that by your testimony others may be led to believe in the goodness of God to them also.

V. 6. Thou preservest them all—The heavens, the earth, the sea, and all that are therein: Nothing less than that power which made all things, can preserve all things for a moment: Thus does it appear, that though God hath given fixed laws to the creation, yet to preserve all things in their order, is the act of his immediate power. The host of heaven worshippeth thee—The glorious angels love and praise thee for thy wisdom, thy power, and boundless goodness to them and all thy creatures.

V. 7. Thou art the Lord the God, who didst choose Abram—Didst single out him to serve and glorify thee, to be father of all the faithful, the progenitor of the Messias, in whom not we only but all nations should be blessed.

V. 8. And foundest his heart faithful before thee—When thou madest that trial of his faith and obedience in requiring him to offer up his only son Isaac, thou didst discover his faithfulness, which was well known to thee before; but by his obedience thy goodness made it known to mankind, what thy grace could do for all them that believe in thee. And to his faith thou hast added thou threweſt into the deeps, [q] as a ſtone into the mighty waters.

12 Moreover, thou [r] leddeſt them in the day by a cloudy pillar; and in the night by a pillar of fire, to give them light in the way wherein they ſhould go.

13 [s] Thou cameſt down alſo upon mount Sinai, and ſpakeſt with them from heaven, and gaveſt them right judgments, and ‡ true laws, good ſtatutes, and commandments:

14 And madeſt known unto them thy holy ſabbath, and commandedſt them precepts, ſtatutes, and laws, by the hand of Moſes thy ſervant:

15 And [t] gaveſt them bread from heaven, for their hunger, and [u] broughteſt forth water for them out of the rock, for their thirſt, and promiſedſt them that they ſhould [x] go in to poſſeſs the land, § which thou hadſt ſworn to give them.

16 But they and our fathers dealt proudly, and hardened their necks, and hearkened not to thy commandments,

17 And refuſed to obey, neither were mindful of thy wonders that thou didſt among them: but hardened their necks, and in their rebellion appointed [y] a captain to return to their bondage: but thou art ‖ a God ready to pardon, [z] gracious and merciful, ſlow to anger, and of great kindneſs, and forſookeſt them not.

18 Yea, [a] when they had made them a molten calf, and ſaid, This is thy God that brought thee up out of Egypt, and had wrought great provocations:

19 Yet thou in thy manifold mercies forſookeſt them not in the wilderneſs: the [b] pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day, to lead them in the way; neither the pillar of fire by night, to ſhew them light, and the way wherein they ſhould go.

20 Thou gaveſt alſo thy [c] good ſpirit to inſtruct them, and withheldeſt not thy manna from their mouth, and gaveſt them [e] water for their thirſt.

21 Yea, [i] forty years didſt thou ſuſtain them in the wilderneſs, ſo that they lacked nothing; their [v] clothes waxed not old, and their feet ſwelled not.

22 Moreover, thou gaveſt them kingdoms and nations, and didſt divide them into corners: ſo they poſſeſſed the land of [v] Sihon, and the land of the king of Heſhbon, and the land of Og king of Baſhan.

23 [i] Their children alſo multipliedſt thou as the ſtars of heaven, and broughteſt them into the land, concerning which thou hadſt promiſed to their fathers, that they ſhould go in to poſſeſs it.

24 So [k] the children went in, and poſſeſſed the land, and thou ſubduedſt before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gaveſt them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them * as they would.

25 And they took ſtrong cities, and a fat land, and poſſeſſed houſes full of all goods, † wells digged, vineyards and olive-yards, and ‡ fruit-trees in abundance: ſo they did eat, and were filled, and [l] became fat, and delighted themſelves in thy great goodneſs.

26 Nevertheleſs, they were diſobedient, and rebelled againſt thee, and [v] caſt thy law behind their backs, and ſlew thy [n] prophets which teſtified againſt them to turn them to thee, and they wrought great provocations.

27 [o] Therefore thou deliveredſt them into the hand of their enemies, who vexed them: and in the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou heardeſt them from heaven; and according to thy manifold mercies, thou gaveſt them ſaviours, who ſaved them out of the hand of their enemies.

V. 17. And refuſed to obey—Perſiſted in their diſobedience after many admonitions and invitations to repentance. Thou art a God ready to pardon—All they that truly turn unto thee find mercy.

V. 19. Thou in thy manifold mercies forſookeſt them not in the wilderneſs——Where if thou hadſt left them without thy conduct and comfort, they had been utterly loſt and undone.

V. 20. Thou gaveſt alſo thy good ſpirit to inſtruct them——And guide them in the ways of truth and peace, and of everlaſting life; and which when the promiſed Saviour ſhall come into the world, ſhall from that time forward be more abundantly given to mankind as freely for his ſake to all that believe, as the manna deſcended from heaven by which our fathers were fed, or as freely as a father giveth bread to his children. Before Christ 445.

28 But after they had rest, * they did evil again before thee: therefore leftest thou them in the hand of their enemies, so that they had the dominion over them: yet when they returned, and cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven, and many times didst thou deliver them according to thy mercies:

29 And testifiedst against them, that thou mightest bring them again unto thy law: yet they dealt proudly, and hearkened not unto thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments (p which if a man do, he shall live in them) and † withdrew the shoulder, and hardened their neck, and would not hear.

30 Yet many years didst thou ‡ forbear them, and testifiedst q against them by thy spirit § r in thy prophets: yet would they not give ear: therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the people of the lands.

31 Nevertheless, for thy great mercies sake, s thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them; for thou art a gracious and merciful God.

32 Now therefore our God, the great, the t mighty, and the terrible God, who keepest covenant and mercy; let not all the ‖ trouble seem little before thee, * that hath come upon us, on our kings, on our princes, and on our priests, and on our prophets, and on our fathers, and on all thy people, since the time of the kings of Assyria unto this day.

33 Howbeit, u thou art just in all that is brought upon us; for thou hast done right, but we have done wickedly:

34 Neither have our kings, our princes, our priests, nor our fathers kept thy law, nor hearkened unto thy commandments, and thy testimonies wherewith thou didst testify against them.

35 For they have not served thee in their kingdom, and in thy great goodness that thou gavest them, and in the large and fat land which thou gavest before them, neither turned they from their wicked works.

36 Behold, x we are servants this day, and for the land that thou gavest unto our fathers, to eat the fruit thereof, and the good thereof, behold, we are servants in it.

Before Christ 445.

37 And it yieldeth much increase unto the kings whom thou hast set over us because of our sins: also they have dominion over our bodies, and over our cattle, at their pleasure, and we are in great distress.

V. 38. Because of all this—Because all this misery lies upon us for our sins, we do heartily repent of them and resolve to forsake them. We make a sure covenant—We faithfully promise and engage ourselves to future obedience. After reading such a passage of the word of God as this, we may ask ourselves by what possible means could mankind be given to understand more plainly the nature of God's government, and that unbelief and forgetfulness of God was the way for men to destroy themselves, as that on the other hand, to believe in God and to obey his holy will, was and is the certain way to safety and happiness? Reader, if you have not, when is it that you will choose life, by truly turning unto God with your whole heart? To morrow may be as much too late, as the hour when the finally impenitent doors of evil shall come forth to a resurrection of damnation. (John v. 29.) The day will soon come, when it shall be said, This day shall thy soul be required of thee.

V. 33. For the sin-offerings, to make an atonement for Israel—For their actual sins, and for their inward impurity, which could only be pardoned and washed away by the Great atonement made by Christ Jesus, represented by all these offerings.

V. 34. We cast the lots—To determine the time and order in which each of them should take the care of the business: by this it appears, that they regarded the providence of God in all they did: and they that do not attend to the will of God in small things, are thereby preparing themselves to live as without God in the world, and for that infidelity which excludes God from his dominion and government over all the inhabitants of the earth; and though our forgetfulness of God makes no difference as to his presence and concern in the conduct of mankind, yet they that do not follow the example of the church at this time, and regard the will of God in all their determinations, do so far deny God's right to govern, or forget that he does so; and in either case they not only deprive themselves of the blessings promised to those that regard God in all things, but they expose themselves to the judgments denounced against all that forget God, or deny his right to reign over them.

V. 39. We will not forsake the house of our God—We do here solemnly declare and engage ourselves, that we will take care, from time to time, that the house and service of God be not neglected; or forsaken for want of necessary support. And this resolution in one that is worshipping God in spirit and in truth, is, that they will not forsake, be unmindful of the place where the Lord manifests himself, which is within them, nor neglect to assemble themselves together with those that wait upon the Lord, to renew their spiritual strength wherever it is.

CHAP. XII.

V. 1. Ezra—Appears to have lived to a great age: which may well be ſuppoſed concerning his great ſobriety, and abſtinence from thoſe evil practices which ſhorten men's lives, and his great piety to which God promiſed long life, and the ſpecial providence of God continuing him ſo long in ſuch a ſeaſon, wherein the church of God did greatly need his help and counſel.

V. 10. Here follows a catalogue of the Jewiſh High-prieſts; which was the more neceſſary, becauſe their times were now to be meaſured, not by the years of their kings, as formerly, but by their High-prieſts.

V. 27. The dedication of the wall—Which is here dedicated to God, and to his honour and ſervice, not only upon a general account, by which we ought to devote ourſelves, and all that is ours, to God; but upon a more ſpecial ground, becauſe this was a place which God himſelf had choſen, and ſanctified by his temple and gracious preſence.

themſelves, and purified the people, and the gates, and the wall.

31 Then I brought up the princes of Judah upon the wall, and appointed two great companies of them that gave thanks, whereof [k] one went on the right hand upon the wall [l] toward the dung-gate:

32 And after them went Hoſhaiah, and half of the princes of Judah.

33 And Azariah, Ezra, and Meſhullam,

34 Judah, and Benjamin, and Shemaiah, and Jeremiah,

35 And certain of the prieſts ſons [v] with trumpets: namely, Zechariah the ſon of Jonathan, the ſon of Shemaiah, the ſon of Mattaniah, the ſon of Michaiah, the ſon of Zaccur, the ſon of Aſaph:

36 And his brethren, Shemaiah, and Azarael, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethaneel, and Judah, Hanani, with [h] the muſical inſtruments of David the man of God, and Ezra the ſcribe before them.

37 [o] And at the fountain-gate, which was over againſt them, they went up by [p] the ſtairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the houſe of David, even unto [q] the water-gate eaſt-ward.

38 And the other company of them that gave thanks went over againſt them, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, from beyond [r] the tower of the furnaces, even unto [s] the broad wall:

39 [t] And from above the gate of Ephraim, and above [u] the old gate, and above [x] the fiſh-gate, [y] and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Meah, even unto the ſheep-gate; and they ſtood ſtill in [z] the priſon-gate.

40 So ſtood the two companies of them that gave thanks in the houſe of God, and I, and the half of the rulers with me:

41 And the prieſts; Eliakim, Maaſeiah, Miniamin, Michaiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah with trumpets:

42 And Maaſeiah, and Shemaiah, and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan, and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer: and the ſingers * ſang aloud, with Jezrahiah, their overſeer.

43 Alſo that day they offered great ſacrifices, and rejoiced; for God had made them rejoice with great joy; the wives alſo and the children rejoiced: ſo that the joy of Jeruſalem was heard even afar off.

44 ¶ [a] And at that time were ſome appointed over the chambers for the treaſures, for the offerings, for the firſt-fruits, and for the tithes, to gather into them out of the fields of the cities the portions * of the law for the prieſts and Levites: † for Judah rejoiced for the prieſts and for the Levites ‡ that waited.

45 And both the ſingers and the porters kept the ward of their God, and the ward of the purification, [b] according to the commandment of David, and of Solomon his ſon.

46 For in the days of David [c] and Aſaph of old, there were chief of the ſingers, and ſongs of praiſe and thankſgiving unto God.

47 And all Iſrael in the days of Zerubbabel, and in the days of Nehemiah, gave the portions of the ſingers, and the porters, every day his portion, and they ‖ ſanctified holy things unto the Levites, [d] and the Levites ſanctified them unto the children of Aaron.

V. 31. I appointed two great companies of them that gave thanks—To God for all his great and conſtant mercies; but above all, that he had been pleaſed to make known to them the way of life and ſalvation through the Redeemer, and that he had committed to their care his revealed will, by which they were directed in all things, both in coming to God for his mercy, and how they ſhould live ſuitable to their high calling as the ranſomed of the Lord, and the intended heirs of endleſs glory in his holy preſence. And as the worſhippers of God of old thus provided for giving him thanks, ſo do his ſpiritual worſhippers, in all ages, meditate upon his great and numberleſs mercies, and do not forget to be thankful, but appoint certain ſeaſons to praiſe the Lord for the evils he has delivered them from, and for the benefits beſtowed upon them, for their Saviour's ſake; knowing that to with-hold thanks and praiſe, is to rob God of the glory due unto his unmerited goodneſs to them, and render it even neceſſary for God to withdraw his mercies from them, that they may be made ſenſible of their value by their loſs.

V. 43. The joy of Jeruſalem was heard even afar off—Either their loud voices and inſtruments were heard to a great diſtance, or the fame of it was ſpread far and near.

V. 44. Judah rejoiced for the prieſts and for the Levites that waited—For the eminent gifts and graces which they obſerved in many of them: and for the great benefit which they had now received by their miniſtry: and for the proviſion which was made for them, that ſo they might wholly wait upon their office, to the people's further comfort.

V. 45. The ſingers and the porters kept the ward of their God—That charge or buſineſs which God had preſcribed to them.

V. 46. In the days of David and Aſaph, of old, there were chief of the ſingers—There were ſome overſeers, whoſe office it was to ſee that the ſingers were fit for, and diligent in, their work: and therefore they took care of it at this time.

V. 47. They ſanctified holy things—They ſet apart the firſt-fruits and tithes from their own ſhare, and devoted them to the uſe of the Levites, to whom they belonged; and ſo did the Levites by the tithe of the tithes. Thus they all conſcientiouſly paid their dues to God, or thoſe he had appointed to receive them, and did not profane thoſe things which God had ſanctified, nor take them to their own common uſe, as divers ungodly or covetous perſons had formerly uſed to do when they had opportunity.

ON that day * they read in the book of Moſes in the † audience of the people; and therein was found written, [a] that the Ammonite and the Moabite ſhould not come into the congregation of God for ever;

2 Becauſe they met not the children of Iſrael with bread and with water, but [b] hired Balaam againſt them, that he ſhould curſe them: [c] howbeit our God turned the curſe into a bleſſing.

3 Now it came to paſs when they had heard the law, [d] that they ſeparated from Iſrael all the mixed multitude.

4 ¶ And before this, Eliaſhib the prieſt, ‡ having the overſight of the chamber of the houſe of our God, was allied unto Tobiah:

V. 1. On that day—Not now preſently after the dedication of the wall, and gates, and city, but upon a certain day, as that phraſe is very commonly uſed in ſcripture, without any relation to the time or things mentioned next before it; to wit, when Nehemiah was returned again from the Perſian court to Jeruſalem, from which he had been abſent for ſome conſiderable time, in which ſome errors and abuſes had crept in, which now he endeavours to remove. They read in the book of Moſes in the audience of the people—Becauſe it was not only the prieſts, but alſo the people's duty to ſtudy and underſtand God's law and their own duty: and that the people, hearing that this was the expreſs mind and will of the great God, might the more willingly yield to the following duties, ſome of which were attended with difficulty, and required ſelf-denial.

V. 3. When they heard the law, they ſeparated from Iſrael all the mixed multitude—All the heatheniſh people with whom they had contracted alliances. They that enter into friendſhip with ſuch as are at enmity with God, give a public example, that they think there is no danger in being on their ſide, who by their very nature muſt oppoſe the will of God, and perſecute thoſe that are born of his Spirit. (Gal. iv. 29.)

V. 4. Eliaſhib was allied unto Tobiah—The Ammonite, and a violent enemy to God's people. So this is noted as a great blemiſh to Eliaſhib.

V. 5. And he had prepared for him a great chamber—For the uſe of Tobiah, when he came to Jeruſalem: whom he ſeems to have lodged there, that he might have more free and ſecret communication with him, this being in a place where the people might not come. This was the conſequence of an alliance with one that was a ſtranger to the true God; that what was required as to things ſacred were made to give place to this friendſhip: God's will was diſregarded, out of reſpect to one that had avowed his oppoſition to the work of God.

V. 6. But in all this time was not I at Jeruſalem—And Eliaſhib took the occaſion of my abſence to do theſe things, ſuppoſing that I would no more return. For in the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes, came I unto the king—From Jeruſalem.

V. 8. It grieved me ſore—That the ſacred place ſhould be polluted by one who ought not to have come there, being no prieſt, a ſtranger, an Ammonite, and one of the worſt of that people; and that all this ſhould be done by the permiſſion and order of the High-prieſt, who, by his office, ſhould have puniſhed and reformed theſe things in others.

V. 10. The portions of the Levites had not been given them—From the people, who either out of covetouſneſs reſerved them to themſelves, contrary to their own ſolemn agreement and covenant, or were ſo offended at Eliaſhib's manifeſt abuſe of ſacred things, that they abhorred the offering and ſervice of God, and therefore neglected to bring in their tithes, which they knew would be perverted to bad uſes. The Levites were fled every one to his field—To his poſſeſſion in the country, being forced to do ſo for a livelihood.

V. 11. Then contended I with the rulers—I ſharply reproved thoſe prieſts to whom the management of theſe things was committed, for neglect of their duty, and breach of their late ſolemn promiſe. Why is the houſe of God forſaken?—You have not only injured the Levites in with-holding their dues, but you have occaſioned the neglect of God's houſe and ſervice. And I gathered them together—To Jeruſalem, from their ſeveral country poſſeſſions, in which they were diſperſed. And ſet them in their place—Reſtored them to the exerciſe of their office.

V. 12. Then brought all Judah the tithe—Out of the reſpect they had to Nehemiah, and to his command: and becauſe they ſaw they would be applied to their proper uſes, and not abuſed as they had been.

V. 18. Did not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us—Which you ſo well and ſadly remember, that I need not tell you the particulars. God will vindicate his own laws by ſending his judgments on all that deſpiſe his wiſdom, his power, and his goodneſs, by diſobeying his commandments; and it is to the heads of every human ſociety that the Lord of all looks, for that obedience which is to be ſhewn by uſing the authority he hath given them, in cauſing all that are under them to regard the laws of God, by puniſhing ſuch as will preſume to violate them.

V. 22. Remember me, O my God, concerning this alſo, and ſpare me according to the greatneſs of thy mercy—Whereby he intimates, that though he mentioned his good works as things wherewith God was well pleaſed, and which he had promiſed to reward, yet he neither did nor durſt truſt to their merit, or his own worthineſs; but, when he had done all, he judged himſelf an unprofitable ſervant, and one that needed God's infinite mercy and indulgence to pardon all his ſins.

V. 24. Their children could not ſpeak in the Jews language—Which was the language in which God himſelf ſpake to their fathers; ſo that by their alliances with thoſe that were ſtrangers to God, their children loſt the language of heaven. And will not they that are ſpiritual loſe the language of the ſpirit, by that friendſhip with the world which is enmity with God?

V. 25. I contended with them and curſed them—Cauſed them to be excommunicated and caſt out of the ſociety and privileges of God's people. This and the following puniſhments were juſtly inflicted upon them, becauſe this tranſgreſſion was contrary to a plain law of God, and alſo to their own late ſolemn covenants and promiſes. And ſmote certain of them—I cauſed them to be beaten with ſtripes, according to the law, ſuch whoſe faults were moſt aggravated by their quality or other circumſtances: To whom he added this puniſhment over and beſides the former. And plucked off their hair—Or, ſhaved them. The hair was an ornament and enſign of liberty amongſt the eaſtern nations; and baldneſs was a diſgrace and token of ſlavery and ſorrow.

E S T H E R.

IN the books of Ezra and Nehemiah an account is given of the gracious dealings of God with the Jews, that were brought back out of captivity to Jeruſalem; and this book of Eſther acquaints us with the goodneſs of God to thoſe of the Jews, that remained ſcattered abroad in the countries into which they were taken. This book contains ten chapters.

CHAP. I. Ahaſuerus maketh royal feaſts. Vaſhti, ſent for, refuſeth to come. Ahaſuerus, by the counſel of Memucan, maketh a decree —CHAP. II. Out of the choice of virgins, a queen is to be choſen. Of Mordecai the nurſing-father of Eſther. Eſther is preferred by Hegai before the reſt. Eſther is made queen. Mordecai, diſcovering a treaſon, is recorded in the chronicles —CHAP. III. Haman advanced by the king, and deſpiſed by Mordecai, ſeeketh revenge upon all the Jews: he caſteth lots: he obtaineth a decree of the king to put the Jews to death.—CHAP. IV. The great mourning of Mordecai and the Jews: Eſther, underſtanding it, ſendeth to Mordecai, who ſheweth the cauſe, and adviſeth her to undertake the ſuit: ſhe, excuſing herſelf, is threatened by Mordecai: She, appointing a faſt, undertaketh the ſuit.—CHAP. V. Eſther, adventuring on the king's favour, obtaineth the grace of the golden ſceptre, and inviteth the king and Haman to a banquet. She, being encouraged by the king in her ſuit, inviteth them to another banquet the next day. Haman, proud of his advancement, repineth at the contempt of Mordecai. He buildeth for him a gallows.—CHAP. VI. Ahaſuerus, reading in the chronicles of the good ſervice done by Mordecai, taketh care for his reward. Haman, coming to ſue that Mordecai might be hanged, unawares giveth counſel that he might do him honour. Complaining of his misfortune, his friends tell him of his final deſtiny.—CHAP. VII. Eſther, entertaining the king and Haman, maketh ſuit for her own life, and her people's. She accuſeth Haman. The king, in his anger, underſtanding of the gallows which Haman had made for Mordecai, cauſeth him to be hanged thereon.—CHAP. VIII. Mordecai is advanced. Eſther maketh ſuit to reverſe Haman's letters: Ahaſuerus granteth to the Jews to defend themſelves. Mordecai's honour, and the Jews joy.—CHAP. IX. The Jews ſlay their enemies, with the ten ſons of Haman. Ahaſuerus, at the requeſt of Eſther, granteth another day of ſlaughter: Two days are made feſtival.—CHAP. X. Ahaſuerus's greatneſs. Mordecai's advancement.

Before Christ cir. 521. NOW it came to pass in the days of Ahasuerus, (this is Ahasuerus which reigned [a] from India even unto Ethiopia, [b] over an hundred and seven and twenty provinces)

5 And when these days were expired, the king made a feast unto all the people that * Heb. found. were * present in Shushan the palace, both unto great and small, seven days, in the court of the garden of the king's palace,

9 Also Vashti the queen made a feast for the women, in the royal house which belonged to king Ahasuerus.

10 ¶ On the seventh day, when the heart of the king was merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Biztha, [d] Harbona, Bigtha, and Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the seven ‖ chamberlains that served in the presence of Ahasuerus the king,

C H A P. I.

V. 1. In the days of Ahasuerus—One of the kings of Persia.

V. 2. In Shushan the palace—Here the kings of Persia used to keep their courts chiefly in winter, as ordinarily they were in Ecbatana in summer.

V. 3. His servants; the power of Persia and Media—The chief Officers of State, and Commanders of all his forces; whom, by this splendid entertainment, he endeavoured to oblige.

V. 4. Even an hundred and fourscore days—Making every day a magnificent feast either for all his Princes, or for some of them, who might come to the feast successively.

V. 5. In the court of the garden—The Persian gardens were exceedingly large and pleasant.

V. 6. The beds—In those eastern countries they did not sit at tables, but rested or leaned upon beds.

V. 8. The drinking was according to the law, none did compel—According to this law which the king had now made, that none should compel another to drink more than he pleased: which the Persians, and other loose and heathenish nations used to do; though that practice was condemned by the wise and sober heathens, and among others by this great Prince.

V. 9. Vashti the queen made a feast for the women—Whilst the king entertained the men. For this was the common custom of the Persians, that men and women did not appear at the public tables together.

V. 12. The queen Vashti refused to come—Being favoured in this refusal by the laws and customs of Persia, which was to keep men's wives, and especially queens, as much as might be, from the view of other men.

V. 13. Which knew the times—The histories of former times, what princes have done in such cases as this was. Or, what was just and fit to be done.

V. 14. Seven princes, which saw the king's face—Who had constant access to the king, and familiar converse with him: which is thus expressed, because the Persian kings were very seldom seen by their subjects. Which sat the first in the kingdom—Which were his chief counsellors and officers, and had the precedency from all others.

V. 16. Memucan answered—Who, though last named, spake first; either because the king first asked him, or because it then was, as now it is in many places, the custom for the youngest counsellor or judge to deliver their opinion first. The queen hath not done wrong to the king only, but also to all the princes, and to all the people—By giving them an example and encouragement to disobey their husbands. It is a crime of an high nature, and therefore deserves an exemplary punishment.

V. 18. Thus

all the princes, and to all the people that are in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus.

17 For this deed of the queen shall come abroad unto all women, so that they shall despise their husbands in their eyes, when it shall be reported, The king Ahasuerus commanded Vashti the queen to be brought in before him, but she came not.

519. 18 Likewise shall the ladies of Persia and Media say this day unto all the kings and princes, which have heard of the deed of the queen. Thus shall there arise too much contempt and wrath.

20 And when the king's decree which he shall make, shall be published throughout all his empire (for it is great) all the wives shall give to their husbands honour, both to great and small.

* Heb. was good in the eyes of the king.

21 And the saying * pleased the king and the princes, and the king did according to the word of Memucan:

22 For he sent letters into all the king's provinces, [v] into every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language, that every man should bear rule in his own house, and ‡ that it should be published according to the language of every people.

CHAP. II.

518. AFter these things, when the wrath of king Ahasuerus was appeased, he remembered Vashti, and what she had done, and what was decreed against her.

2 Then said the king's servants, that ministered unto him, Let there be fair young virgins sought for the king.

3 And let the king appoint officers in all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather together all the fair young virgins unto Shushan the palace, to the house of the women, * unto the custody of † Hege the king's chamberlain, keeper of the women, and let their things for purification be given them:

* Heb. unto the hand.
† Or, Hegai. Verse 8.

4 And let the maiden which pleaseth the king, be queen instead of Vashti. And the thing pleased the king, and he did so.

5 ¶ Now in Shushan the palace, there was a certain Jew, whose name was Mordecai,

V. 18. Thus shall there arise too much contempt and wrath—Contempt in the wives, and wrath in the husbands; and consequently strife in families. What was required by the king, was a thing indifferent in itself; the refusal of it was therefore looked upon as arising from contempt of his authority, and want of personal affection or respect; and the answer not being accompanied with any request from the queen to have her excused, the refusal produced displeasure in the mind of the king, and occasioned their separation: Actions of the smallest moment in themselves, arising from want of kindness and good-will, occasion painful feelings in the mind of every person to whom they are shewn, and contempt is the death's wound of friendship and mutual confidence, the wrath of man never producing the righteousness of God, or that which is agreeable to his nature and his will; but, on the contrary, looks, words, or actions, expressive of unkindness, anger, contempt, or hatred, raise and produce the like sentiments in the minds of those to whom they are shewn: All these tempers and passions of the soul are from that root of bitterness which is of the nature of the wicked one, and whatever is done in compliance with the spirit that is from beneath, it leads to strife, to divisions, to misery, to hell, to satan, from whom, as the head, all that is evil proceeds. And they that know themselves to be called to peace, and to do all things in a spirit of love, find their happiness depends on their resisting all the suggestions of unkindness or contempt, and to be courteous and easily intreated in whatever will oblige or serve another, so far as they can do it with a conscience void of offence.

V. 21. The saying pleased the king—That the queen's disrespect should be returned with her own disgrace. Thus does God shew, in a real history of the conduct of our fellow-creatures, that as a person sows, so will they reap: And whatever was the conduct of the persons whose lives we are reading in the word of God, whether they are more or less blameable or commendable, if we do but look for what is worthy of God to record in their history, we shall not fail of being instructed in what we ought to avoid or imitate for our own safety and happiness.

V. 22. That every man should bear rule in his own house—With all diligence, equity, and love; God himself having given to the man this authority, he is no more at liberty to neglect to exercise it, agreeable to the will of God, than he is to act contrary to any of the plain commands of God: And the wives and mothers that live in the fear of God, know, if they were, by any means, to oppose the authority which God hath given to husbands and fathers, that they would, by so doing, lay up for themselves a sure return of disobedience and opposition in children and servants; confusion and misery being the certain consequence of continued opposition, to that form of government and subordination which God hath established, and which equally provides for the peace of the greatest empires, and for that of a poor man's family.

CHAP. II.

V. 1. When the wrath of king Ahasuerus was appeased, he remembered Vashti—With grief and shame, that he had so severely punished, and so irrevocably rejected his queen, and that for so small a provocation, to which she was easily led by the modesty of her sex, and by the laws and customs of Persia. And the king, in making this severe decree, did not give the queen leave to speak for herself, nor allowed her time for reflection, but, with the unbecoming warmth of an impatient mind, took fire at the bare report of her answer, and disgraced the power he possessed by making it the instrument of his resentment.

V. 2. Then said the king's servants—Who, for their own interests were obliged to quiet the king's mind, and procure him another consort.

7 And he ‖ brought up Hadassah (that is Esther) b his uncle's daughter, for she had neither father nor mother, and the maid was * fair and beautiful, whom Mordecai (when her father and mother were dead) took for his own daughter.

* Heb. fair of form, and good of countenance.

8 ¶ So it came to pass, when the king's commandment and his decree was heard, and when many maidens were gathered together unto Shushan the palace, to the custody of Hegai, that Esther was brought also unto the king's house, to the custody of Hegai keeper of the women.

9 And the maiden pleased him, and she obtained kindness of him, and he speedily gave her her things for purification, with † such things as belonged to her, and seven maidens, which were meet to be given her, out of the king's house, and ‡ he preferred her, and her maids, unto the best place of the house of the women.

10 c Esther had not shewed her people, nor her kindred: for Mordecai had charged her, that she should not shew it.

11 And Mordecai walked every day before the court of the women's house, § to know how Esther did, and what should become of her.

§ Heb. to know the peace.

cir. 515.

12 ¶ Now when every maid's turn was come, to go in to king Ahasuerus, after that she had been twelve months, according to the manner of the women, (for so were the days of their purifications accomplished, to wit, six months with oil of myrrh, and six months with sweet odours, and with other things for the purifying of the women.)

13 Then thus came every maiden unto the king; whatsoever she desired was given her, to go with her out of the house of the women, unto the king's house.

14 In the evening she went, and on the morrow she returned into the second house of the women, to the custody of Shaashgaz, the king's chamberlain, which kept the concubines: she came in unto the king no more, except the king delighted in her, and that she were called by name.

Before Christ cir. 515.

15 ¶ Now when the turn of Esther, d the daughter of Abihail, the uncle of Mordecai (who had taken her for his daughter) was come to go in unto the king, she required nothing, but what Hegai the king's chamberlain, the keeper of the women appointed: and Esther obtained favour in the sight of all them that looked upon her.

d Ver. 7. cir. 515.

16 So Esther was taken unto king Ahasuerus, into his house royal, in the tenth month (which is the month Tebeth) in the seventh year of his reign.

17 And the king loved Esther above all the women, and she obtained grace and * favour * in his sight, more than all the virgins; so that he set the royal crown upon her head, and made her queen instead of Vashti.

* Or, kindness. * Heb. before him.

CHAP. III.

V. 1. Haman the Agagite—An Amalekite of the royal seed of that nation, whose kings were commonly and successively called Agag.

V. 2. But Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence—The nature of the thing required was not only civil, but divine: which, as the kings of Persia did undoubtedly arrogate to themselves, and expect and receive from their subjects, and others, who came into their presence, so they did sometimes impart this honour to some of their chief favourites, that they should be adored in like manner. And that it was so here, seems more than probable, because it was superfluous to give an express command to all the king's servants that were in the king's gate, as here it was, to pay a civil respect to so great a prince, which of course they used, and were ever obliged to do: and therefore a divine honour must be here intended. And that a Jew should deny this honour, or the outward expressions of it, is not strange, as the law of God forbad them to bow down, or pay divine honours to any but God alone.

V. 4. To see whether Mordecai—Would persist in his refusal, and what the event of it would be. For he had told them that he was a Jew—And therefore did not deny this reverence to Haman out of pride, or any personal grudge against him, much less out of a rebellious mind and contempt of the king's authority and command, but meerly out of conscience, because he was a Jew, who was obliged to give this honour to none but God.

V. 6. He thought scorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone—He thought that particular vengeance was unsuitable to his quality, and to the greatness of the injury. Wherefore Haman sought to destroy all the Jews—From that implacable hatred, which, as an Amalekite, he had against them: from his rage against Mordecai, and from Mordecai's reason for refusing him the honours which the king had commanded to be paid to Haman, and which reason would also prevent any of the Jews from paying him the same honours. We have here a discovery of that spirit in man which opposes itself to God, and to all that truly worship him: the God of this world is ever intent on raising up the natural man to exalt himself against God, and to claim even divine honours, and to reign independant of the Most High; and this daring presumptuous spirit of satan not only shewed itself in Persia, as it does in Rome, but the same spirit of Anti-Christ reigns in every human heart, till the naturally proud mind of man is, by the grace of God, humbled under a sense of its sinfulness, and its utter impotence and weakness, to do any manner of thing that is good, without the help of God, to whom the whole man is indebted for his very existance every moment of his life.

V. 7. They cast the lot, before Haman, from day to day, and from month to month—The diviners cast lots, according to the custom of those people, what day and what month would be most lucky, for the most effectual and universal extirpation of the Jews. To the twelfth month—Wherein appears, both his implacable malice, and unwearied diligence, in seeking vengeance of them with so much, and so long, trouble to himself; and God's singular providence in disposing the lot to that time.

V. 8. Haman said unto king Ahasuerus, There is a certain people—Mean and contemptible, not worthy to be named. Dispersed among the people—Who therefore, if tolerated, may poison all thy subjects with their pernicious principles; and whom thou mayest easily crush without any great noise or difficulty. Their laws are diverse from all people—They have peculiar rights, and customs, and religion; and therefore are justly offensive to all thy people, and may either infect them with their conceits, or occasion great dissensions and distractions among them. Neither keep they the king's laws—As is manifest by Mordecai's bold contempt of thy late edict concerning me, which being done by him as a Jew, the whole nation are involved in his crime, and are prepared to do so when they have occasion. Therefore it is not for the king's profit to suffer them—To live in his kingdom. I do not seek herein so much my own revenge as thy service.

V. 9. If it please the king, let it be written—Let there be a written edict from the king.

13 And the letters were sent by posts into all the king's provinces, to destroy, to kill, and to cause to perish all Jews, both young and old, little children and women, [k] in one day, even upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, (which is the month Adar) and [v] to take the spoil of them for a prey.

14 The copy of the writing for a commandment to be given in every province, was published unto all people, that they should be ready against that day.

V. 11. The king said unto Haman, The silver is given to thee—Keep it to thy own use, I do not desire it, I accept thy offer for the deed.

V. 12. Then were the king's scribes called—This he did speedily lest the king should change his mind, either by his own clemency, or by the persuasion of others.

V. 13. To destroy all Jews, and to take the spoil of them for a prey—Which was to oblige them to the greater severity and readiness to execute this edict for their own advantage.

V. 14. The commandment was published unto all people, that they should be ready against that day——Which was at the distance of twelve months from the signing of the decree.

V. 15. The king and Haman sat down to drink—What gratitude is due to God from the people of any country, who are placed by his providence under the government of written or known established laws, and to which laws all the magistrates that administer them, or execute the various offices of civil government, from the highest to the lowest, are accountable: and what thought is equal to comprehend the blessedness which they possess, who are conscious of being included in the continual care of an All-wise, Almighty, and every-where-present God, who can defeat the designs of malice.

CHAP. IV.

Before Christ 510.

WHEN Mordecai perceived all that was done, Mordecai rent his clothes, and put on sackcloth, [a] with ashes, and went out into the midst of the city, and cried with a loud and bitter cry:

8 Also he gave him the copy of the writing and save and defend the helpless from the hand of human power, however absolute: and how does God lead mankind to look to himself alone for every blessing, and for help in every time of trouble, and not to depend on man, whose depravity is thus discovered to be such, as to allow a prince, placed at the head of a great empire, to sit down to drink with his prime minister, after having but just before given him authority to kill a numerous people, without distinction of age or sex, who were guilty of no crime against the state, but doomed to destruction without so much as being heard. The city Shushan was perplexed—With dread and horror at the wicked use that was made of the king's power.

CHAP. IV.

V. 1. Mordecai went out into the midst of the city, and cried with a loud and bitter cry—To express his deep sense of the mischief coming upon his people, to move the pity of others to do what they could to prevent it, and that by this means it might come to the queen's ear.

V. 2. None might enter into the king's gate clothed with sackcloth—Lest it should give the king any occasion of grief or trouble; so unwelcome is it to the mind of man to be reminded, by the appearance of mourning, either of sorrow or death.

V. 4. The queen sent raiment to clothe Mordecai—That so he might be capable of returning to his former place, if not of coming to her to acquaint her with the cause of that unusual sorrow.

9 And Hatach came and told Esther the words of Mordecai.

10 ¶ Again Esther spake unto Hatach, and gave him commandment unto Mordecai;

11 All the king's servants, and the people of the king's provinces do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come unto the king into the inner court, who is not called, [b] there is one law of his to put him to death, except such [c] to whom the king shall hold out the golden sceptre, that he may live: but I have not been called to come in unto the king these thirty days.

14 For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, then shall there ‖ enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place, but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed: and who knoweth, whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?

NOW it came to pass [a] on the third day, that Esther put on her royal apparel, and stood in [b] the inner court of the king's house, over against the king's house: and the king sat upon his royal throne in the royal house, over against the gate of the house.

it unto Esther, and to charge her—Not only in his own name, but also in the name of the Great God.

V. 11. All the king's servants, and the people know—By common fame. That whosoever shall come unto the king into the inner court—Within which the king's residence and throne was, without being called, shall be put to death. This was decreed, to maintain both the majesty and the safety of the king's person: and by the contrivance of the greater officers of state, that few or none might have access to the king but themselves and their friends. I have not been called to the king these thirty days—Which gives me just cause to fear that the king's affections are alienated from me, and therefore that neither my person nor petition will be acceptable to him.

V. 13. Think not that thou shalt escape in the king's house—That power which is bent on the destruction of the people of God, will share none of them, wherever they are; having the same enmity against them in the palaces of princes, as in the dwellings of the poor.

V. 14. If thou holdest thy peace, then shall deliverance arise to the Jews from another place—By another means; which God can, and I am fully persuaded will, raise up. But thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed—By the righteous and dreadful judgment of God punishing thy cowardice, and thy want of love to God, and to his and thy own people. Who knoweth, whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this—It is probable God hath raised thee to this honour for this very season; and therefore go on courageously, and doubt not of the success. This venerable man had cast the burden of his sorrow upon the Lord his God, who had, by his grace, given him the assurance that he would sustain him according to his faithful word, he therefore not only acts himself from the full persuasion of their being delivered from the wicked decree, but he exhorts Esther to go on in the same confidence: and they that are the happy partakers of the same faith, know that God hath not given up the government of the world to satan, and to those that obey him, but that, on the contrary, so long as there is a man or a woman to be found, that will, with confidence in God, take their lives in their hands, and openly appear on the side of justice, mercy, or truth, the Almighty cannot deny himself, or leave those unsupported and unprotected, whose designs and conduct are agreeable to the very nature and will of God; who will never suffer the righteous to be moved. (Psa. lv. 22.)

V. 16. Fast ye for me—Do this, that God may be entreated on my account; for I have been taught to believe, that he ever waiteth to be gracious, and to do good to all the human race, and only requireth to have his mercies earnestly desired, in order to bestow all that is asked of him, and never refuseth any thing that is desired, but when to refuse is more merciful than to give; and shew, by your fasting, that you desire the favour of God and his assistance to me, more than you desire your necessary food, and surely He who hath so often heard the cries of the needy, will not leave us in this our great danger and distress. Neither eat nor drink—But give yourselves to constant and fervent prayers. If I perish, I perish—Rather than neglect my duty to God, and to his people.

V. 17. Mordecai did according to all that Esther had commanded him—To make their supplications to God, in whose hands are life and death, and with whom it is an easy thing to confound the wisdom of the wise, and bring all the designs of the mighty to nothing.

CHAP. V.

V. 2. The king held out to Esther the golden sceptre that was in his hand—In testimony that he pardoned her coming contrary to the known law, and accepted her person, and was ready to grant her petition. So Esther drew near, and touched the top of the sceptre—In token of her thankful acceptance of the king's favour, and of her reverence and submission.

held out to Esther the golden sceptre that was in his hand: so Esther drew near, and touched the top of the sceptre.

3 Then said the king unto her, What wilt thou, queen Esther? and what is thy request? e it shall be even given thee, to the half of the kingdom.

4 And Esther answered, If it seem good unto the king, let the king and Haman come this day unto the banquet that I have prepared for him.

5 Then the king said, Cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath said. So the king and Haman came to the banquet that Esther had prepared.

6 ¶ i And the king said unto Esther at the banquet of wine, v What is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? even to the half of the kingdom it shall be performed.

7 Then answered Esther, and said, My petition, and my request is;

8 If I have found favour in the sight of the king, and if it please the king to grant my petition, and ‡ to perform my request, let the king and Haman come to the banquet that I shall prepare for them, and I will do to morrow as the king hath said.

9 ¶ Then went Haman forth that day joyful, and with a glad heart: but when Haman saw Mordecai in the king's gate, that he stood not up, nor moved for him, he was full of indignation against Mordecai.

10 Nevertheless, Haman refrained himself, and when he came home, he sent and § called for his friends, and Zeresh his wife.

11 And Haman told them of the glory of his riches, and v the multitude of his children, and all the things wherein the king had promoted him, and how he had advanced him above the princes and servants of the king.

12 Haman said moreover, Yea, Esther the queen did let no man come in with the king unto the banquet that she had prepared, but myself; and to morrow am I invited unto her also with the king.

13 Yet all this availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate.

14 ¶ Then said Zeresh his wife, and all his friends unto him, Let a * gallows be made of fifty cubits high, and to morrow speak thou unto the king, that Mordecai may be hanged thereon: then go thou in merrily with the king unto the banquet. And the thing pleased

V. 4. If it seem good unto the king, let the king and Haman come this day unto the banquet that I have prepared—Whom she invited, that, by shewing such respect to the king's favourite, she might insinuate herself into the king's good opinion and affection; and that if she saw fit, she might then present her request to the king. Haman had gained his request against the Jews in their absence; and this is the way of the wicked against the righteous, to injure them when they cannot defend themselves. Esther desires Haman to be present, that she might meet the adversary of her people face to face; and this is the way of the righteous, to do nothing contrary to the plain rules of justice, either to forward their own cause, or to gain the advantage of their greatest enemy.

V. 8. I will do to morrow as the king hath said—Haman could not lay any thing to the charge of Esther, by whom he was treated with so much respect; and Esther's mind was made acquainted, that the following day would be a more favourable season for making her request known to the king, whose mind was to be prepared by the events which were to take place before the next day.

V. 9. Then went Haman forth that day joyful, and with a glad heart—Seeing himself so much in the favour of the king, and so much honoured by his queen. But when Haman saw Mordecai in the king's gate, that he stood not up, nor moved for him—Lest he should seem to give him that adoration which he hitherto had justly denied; and because by his barbarous design he had forfeited all respect; and to shew how little he feared him, and that he had a firm confidence in his God that he would deliver him and his people. Haman's joy and gladness was now destroyed and turned into vexation, by a single person's with-holding from him that tribute of honour which his pride demanded. They that desire any other honour than that which cometh of God, by so doing, dishonour God himself; and they that do so, will be lightly esteemed, and all the happiness they promise themselves from the respect that they desire from their fellow mortals, is that building on sand, which, in a moment, may be destroyed by the contempt of those that are as proud as themselves; or by those, who, like Mordecai, dare not allow themselves to flatter any man's pride, because, in doing so, they know they offend God, who resists the proud, and also do the greatest injury to those they mislead by their flattery.

V. 10. Nevertheless, Haman refrained himself——From taking present vengeance upon Mordecai, to which he was strongly inclined, and which he might easily have effected, either by his own, or any of his servant's hands, without any expectation or fear of inconvenience to himself, having obtained licence to destroy all the Jews: Herein God's wise and powerful providence appeared in disposing Haman to act contrary to his own inclination and interest, and making him as it were to put fetters upon his own hands.

V. 11. Haman told them of the glory of his riches—To gratify his own vain-glorious humour; and to aggravate Mordecai's impudence in denying him respect, and to alleviate his own vexation caused by it.

V. 12. To morrow am I invited unto her also with the king—Thus he makes that matter of glorying, which was the occasion of his utter ruin.

V. 13. Yet all this availeth me nothing—Gives me no content. So long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate—Enjoying that honour and privilege without disturbance, and denying me the worship due to me by my place, and by the king's command: though this last, and the chief cause of his rage, he was somewhat ashamed to express.

V. 14. Let a gallows be made of fifty cubits high, that Mordecai may be hanged thereon—That it might be more conspicuous to all, and thereby be more disgraceful to Mordecai, and strike all Haman's enemies with the dread of despising or opposing him. CHAP. VI.

V. 1. On that night could not the king sleep—God is the giver of it, and for that night he with-held it from the king, to answer the purpose of his gracious providence. He commanded to bring the book of records of the chronicles—God putting this thought and inclination into his mind. And they were read before the king—Until they came at the passage which was the means of giving the turn to all the designs against the Jews.

V. 3. There is nothing done for him—He hath had no recompence for this great and good service. Which might happen either through the king's forgetfulness; or, through the envy of the courtiers; or, because he was a Jew, and therefore odious and contemptible, as the true worshippers of God have ever been in the esteem of all that are not such.

V. 4. The king said, Who is in the court?—Who is attending to take charge of the first business of the morning. Now Haman was come—Impatient till he had executed his desired revenge; and resolved to watch for the very first opportunity of speaking to the king, before he was engaged in other matters.

V. 6. Haman came in: and the king said unto him, What shall be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour?—He names none, because he would have the more impartial answer. And what shall be done for those whom the King of kings shall delight to honour in that day when he shall judge the world in righteousness, when no design, labour, or suffering, agreeable to his holy will, shall be forgot; but all receive, according to his word, an eternal recompense of reward? Now Haman thought in his heart, To whom would the king delight to do honour more than to myself?—As indeed he had great reason to presume, because he had not yet forfeited that favour which the king had shewed to him above all others.

V. 12. Mordecai came again to the king's gate—To his former place and office; shewing that he was not overwhelmed by Haman's threats and malicious design, so now he was not puffed up with this honour. Haman hasted to his house, mourning, and having his head covered—In shame and grief for his unexpected disappointment, and for the great honour done to the man he despised and abhorred, and this, by his own hands, and with his own public disgrace.

V. 13. If Mordecai be of the seed of the Jews, thou shalt not prevail against him, but shalt surely fall before him—This they concluded, because Mordecai (whom they understood to be a man of great wisdom and courage, and government of himself) was now got into the king's favour, and thereby was likely to gain an opportunity of making his addresses to the king, who might easily be moved to a dislike (if not revocation) of his own bloody decree, and consequently to a detestation of that person who had procured it. Or, this they might conclude from former experience, and the observation of God's extraordinary actions on the behalf of the Jews, and against their enemies in this very court and kingdom.

V. 2. The king said again to Esther, What is thy petition—Prayer had been made to God in her behalf, and that she might find favour of the king; and now when the time came for her making the request, the king is inclined to inquire a second time what was the petition she had to offer; and again assures her of his readiness to grant it to the half of his kingdom; that had she only to answer the king's second intreaty, so that her task could not have been made more easy to her; thus graciously does God answer the prayers of all that call upon him, and trust their cause to his faithfulness.

V. 3. Let my life be given me at my petition—It is my humble request that thou wouldst not give me up to the malice of that man that designs to take away my life, and will certainly do it, if thou dost not prevent it. And my people—And the lives of my people the Jews, of whom I am descended.

V. 4. For we are sold—By the craft and cruelty of that man who offered a great sum of money to purchase our destruction. I and my people—We are all given up to his malice and rage, without any exception. To be destroyed, to be slain, and to perish—Which are the words of the decree repeated. If we had been sold for bond-men and bond-women, I had held my tongue—I would have suffered any thing less than death, rather than have attempted to have made a request against a decree of the king's. Although the enemy could not countervail the king's damage—By the loss in the customs and tributes which the king receives from the Jews within his dominions.

V. 5. Then the king answered and said, Who is he? and where is he—The expressions are short and doubled, as proceeding from a discomposed and enraged mind. That durst presume in his heart to do so—To circumvent me, and by subtilty to procure an irrevocable decree, whereby not only my estate should be so much impaired, and so many of my innocent subjects be destroyed without mercy, but my queen also should be involved in the same danger and destruction.

V. 6. Esther said, The adversary and enemy is this wicked Haman.—Who is now present to answer for himself, and to justify his conduct to the king if he can do it. Then Haman was afraid before the king and the queen—Conscious guilt then produced its natural consequence, and fear of the punishment took place.

V. 7. The king arising, went into the palace garden—Disdaining the sight of so ungrateful a person; and to consider within himself the heinousness of Haman's crime, and the mischief which himself had done by his own rashness, and what punishment was fit to be inflicted upon so great a delinquent. Haman stood up to make request for his life to Esther the queen—Thus did Haman discover he had no other hopes but from the intercession of the very person whom he would have destroyed with all her nation: The wicked, in the time of their distress, fly to the humble worshippers of God, who in the day of their prosperity they despised. Haman saw that there was evil determined against him by the king—By the violent commotion of the king's mind and passions.

V. 8. The king returned; and Haman was fallen upon the bed whereon Esther was—On which, according to the custom of the east, they sat. Haman was intreating the queen to use her interest with the king to spare his life; but the king's mind being now enraged against him, the worst construction was now put upon his conduct; and the attendant courtiers seeing that Haman had lost the king's favour, they immediately treat him as a person doomed to death.

V. 9. One of the chamberlains said, Behold also the gallows which Haman had made for Mordecai, who had spoken good for the king—Even to the saving of the king's life, and therefore deserved a better requital than this even from Haman, if he had not preferred the satisfaction of his own revenge before the preservation of the king's king's life. The king said, Hang him thereon—He shewed no mercy, and he found none from his fellow-creatures.

V. 10. So they hanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai—The evil he intended to do was inflicted upon himself, and in seeking the destruction of others, he procured his own. Thus does God acquaint us with the nature of his infinitely wise and just government, which gives a suitable return to the conduct not only of a few, but to all mankind; and those that have lived to do evil, can no way avoid suffering consequences suitable to what they themselves have done, but by unfeigned repentance, and turning unto God for mercy, the sincerity of which is proved, by acknowledging the injuries they have done, and making the best reparation to those they have wronged. Then was the king's wrath pacified—When justice was vindicated by the punishment of the person who had betrayed the king into an action, which, if it had been carried into final execution, would have placed his name among those monsters of the human race, who have abused the authority which God had given them for purposes of justice and mercy, by committing those acts of wrong and cruelty, which so frequently appear in the history of those that have possessed great power over their fellow-creatures.

CHAP. VIII.

V. 1. On that day did the king give the house of Haman unto Esther—With all his goods and estate, which being forfeited to the king, he bestows them upon the queen, to compensate the danger to which Haman had exposed her. And Mordecai came before the king—Was by the queen's desire admitted into the king's presence, and made one of the seven princes. For Esther had told what he was unto her—How nearly he was related to her; which, till this time, she had concealed; this being the fit season to declare it.

V. 2. The king took off his ring—That ring which he had formerly given to Haman, he now gives to Mordecai, and with it that power and authority, whereof this ring was a sign, making him, as Haman had been, the keeper of his signet. And Esther set Mordecai over the house of Haman—As her steward, to manage that estate for her.

V. 3. Esther spake yet again before the king, and besought him with tears, to put away the mischief of Haman—To repeal that cruel decree which Haman had procured to be made for the destruction of the Jews.

V. 4. Then the king held out the golden sceptre—In token that he accepted her person and petition, and that she should stand upon her feet.

V. 5. Let it be written to reverse the letters devised by Haman—She prudently takes off all the hatefulness of the action from the king, and lays it upon Haman, who had, for his own wicked and selfish ends, contrived the whole business, and circumvented the king in it: which she alledgeth as a reason why it should be repealed. And in making this request, Esther claims nothing of right, or as if the king was bound to grant what she desired: all she asks is of meer favour; and in this we have an example of the manner in which all are to make their requests known to the King of kings, who might justly with-hold his mercy and grace from all that have sinned against him, and leave them exposed to the sentence of his wrath. And whoever complains of the sufferings they are under in this mortal life, increase their guilt, by forgetting that it is of the Lord's mercy that they are not consumed for their folly, their presumption, and their various offences; and for which they can only obtain forgiveness out of the mere grace and favour of God, for the sake of the Mediator; and no other temper of mind, than that in which we see Esther addressing the king, can be becoming in any of the children of men, either to live in, or to approach the throne of God; who at the same time that he hath declared that he will not despise the lowly and contrite heart, hath said that he resisteth the proud.

V. 6. How can I endure to see the evil that shall come unto my people?—My heart will sink under it, and I shall never be able to survive it. If Esther's life was so bound up with the lives of her people, for whom she was interceding, what must the gracious Intercessor at the throne of grace feel for the human race for whom he died?

V. 7. The king said, Behold, I have given Esther the house of Haman, and him they have hanged—You see how ready I have been to grant your requests, and I do not repent of my favour to you, and am ready to grant your further desires.

V. 8. Write ye also for the Jews—On their behalf, to the governors and commanders of the king's forces, or to whom you please. And seal it with the king's ring—I offer you my authority to confirm whatsoever you shall think fit to write. And thus does the Lord of all speak to them that believe in his power and willingness to save them; he that gave himself for them, bids them ask, and they shall receive, that their joy may be full. (John xvi. 24.)

V. 11. The king granted the Jews to stand for their life—To stand up for the defence of their lives, against all that should seek to destroy them.

V. 15. Mordecai went with a great crown of gold—Which the chief of the Persian princes were permitted to wear, but with sufficient distinction from the king's crown. And the city of Shushan rejoiced—Not only Jews, but the citizens in general, who had an abhorrency of bloody counsels and designs, and a complacency in acts of benignity and mercy.

V. 16. The Jews had light—Which is often put for gladness, because light is pleasant, and disposeth a man to joy, whereas darkness inclines a man to sorrow. And gladness and joy—This explains the former metaphor, by two words expressing the same thing, to note the greatness of the joy. And honour—Instead of that contempt under which they had lain.

V. 17. And many of the people of the land became Jews—Became true worshippers of God by faith in the only Mediator. Thus, at the time that the proud, the wicked, and the impenitent pull down destruction upon their own heads, God over-rules their evil designs, and, by his unmeritted goodness, bestows an increase of blessedness on them that fear him, and hope in his mercy.

V. 21. To establish this—Because that great work of God, which was the ground of this solemnity, had been done both upon the 13th and the 14th day. And it is necessary for all that would live in the fear of God, to use means for themselves to keep in mind the divine dealings—the severity of his judgments against those that do evil, and the greatness and certainty of his care and protection to all that believe in him.

V. 29. Mordecai the Jew, wrote with all authority;—He pressed it with all earnestness, that all that God had done for them, and against the authors of the unjust and wicked design to destroy them, might be made known for the glory of God to the end of the world, that all that read or heard of this instance of the care of God over those that worship him through the Redeemer of the world, might be encouraged to follow the faith of Mordecai, and so have the power and goodness of God discovered to them, under the dangers and sufferings which all have to pass through in this life of trial, in which nothing but the grace of God can support, and nothing less than his providence can defend and protect.

V. 30. He sent letters with words of peace and truth—To direct and persuade them to keep both peace and truth—to live peaceably and lovingly one with another, and with all their neighbours, not insulting over them upon their confidence in Mordecai's great power, or upon this late and great success, nor giving them any fresh provocations, and yet holding fast the true religion, in spite of all the artifices or hostilities of the Gentiles, among whom they lived.

V. 31. The matters of the fasting and of their cry—For not only Esther, and the Jews in Shushan, but all other Jews in all places, as soon as they heard those dismal tidings, did doubtless according to the precepts of Scripture, and the constant practice of their godly predecessors in all ages, fly to that last and only refuge of seeking to God by fasting, and earnest prayers, and strong cries, which God was pleased graciously to hear, and in answer, to give them this deliverance. And this was that which they were now to remember—the greatness of their danger and of their rescue from it. And accordingly the Jews used to observe the first of these days with fasting, and crying, and other expressions of vehement grief and fear, and the latter with feasting, and thanksgiving, and all demonstrations of joy; and after their example ought all that would wish to retain a sense of the goodness of God, to look back on the dangers to which their sins exposed them, and from which they find themselves saved by his grace, and the greatness of his mercy, for the sake of him that died for them; and for which it is our duty, as well as for our increasing happiness, to render unto God the tribute of grateful praise; and if we do not, after the example which is here given us, appoint certain times for calling to mind the loving kindness of the Lord, it is to leave ourselves wilfully exposed to the danger of forgetting what his great mercy hath done for us, and this is to make ourselves guilty of the highest ingratitude: To live without having certain seasons for calling to mind the loving kindness of the Lord, can only be expected to be followed by a want of love to him who first loved us; and to be without the love of God, is to be without that which is the end of our faith, even the salvation of our souls.

V. 32. The decree of Esther was written in the book—In the records which the Jews kept of the most memorable events which befel them. The good spirit of God disposing them thus carefully to preserve the knowledge of his dealings with them, and with the people about them, that the nature of God's government of his church and of the world, might be made known to the ages to come.

was the means of producing the affection and gratitude which they had for him.

In this history of the Divine dealings, we see a numerous people doomed to death like one criminal; and then we see them delivered from the sentence that was pronounced against them, and power given them over all their enemies, and that power secured to them by having one of their own nation exalted to the highest authority in the kingdom; and when we look back to the first rise of this great change from evil and danger, to deliverance and safety, we find a principle discovering itself in the mind of Mordecai, by which he was assured that deliverance would arise to the Jews, if Esther refused to intercede for their lives with the king; this principle was no other than that faith in God, through the Son of his love, to which all the promises of mercy, grace, and protection are made for God to man: and when we consider the strictness of those decrees of the Persian government, and the defenceless condition of the Jews in their captive state in that country, we see there is nothing too hard for the Lord to do, (Jer. xxxii. 17.) and nothing which he is not willing to do for those that believe in him, and look for his loving kindness in the way, and on the account which he hath promised to be gracious to all. The faith of Mordecai was fixed on God his Saviour, and he believed deliverance would arise to him and his people, when mere reason would have said, It is impossible—a decree is made, which cannot be changed—he that has procured it to be made, has spread the knowledge of it over all the dominions of the king, and all that are in authority under him are bound to execute it; and besides, the enemy of the Jews is still possessed of all the power of the king to execute his own design. But the faith of Mordecai lifted him up to God, whose love and power are proved by his word to exceed all that human reason can comprehend, and to remove or to enable those that believe in him to overcome difficulties, which, to appearance, are next to impossible.

The Father of Mercies is the same at this day as he then was, and no less willing to be gracious to all that look to him, through the only Mediator between God and man; and this is the use which is mercifully intended to be made of these records of the gracious government of God over his church and people, and over all events in ages past. And to obtain mercy from God, deliverance from the evils we feel, or the dangers we fear, or support under unavoidable sufferings, the way is the same—They that come unto God, must, with Mordecai, believe that he is the Saviour of all them that seek his favour as he did, with prayer mixed with faith: And to all, as well as to Mordecai, has God said, Ask, and ye shall receive—Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved;—saved from their spiritual enemies, as the Jews were from their mortal enemies; and preserved from the wrath to come, as they were preserved from that sentence of death which was published against them, as the Divine displeasure is revealed from heaven against all unrighteousness of men; and as the root of all evil against that unbelief which will not trust the word of God, confirmed as it is with the experience of clouds of witnesses. (Heb. xii. 1.)

In the situation of the Jews after their deliverance from their sentence of death, we have a strong representation of the safe and happy state of those, who, by true repentance, have fled for refuge from the wrath of God: as the acts of the king of Persia were executed by Mordecai, so is all government committed to the Redeemer of men: all that live by faith have an advocate at the throne of God, as the Jews had at the throne of the Persian empire; and all that is done by the supreme power, passes through the hands of a Saviour, who is at the same time the brother and the friend of all that believe, wherever they are dispersed abroad, or whatever are the circumstances of their distress: Jesus, like Mordecai, became the friend of all, when all were doomed to death; he loved them in their worst estate, and gave himself for them, and for his sake, God will freely give them all things. (Rom. viii. 32.)

The conduct of Mordecai is also an example to all that would be partakers of the Divine favour, and continue in the possession of it. Mordecai would not purchase the favour of the second person in the kingdom at the expence of offending God, who he knew had commanded no such honours to any creature, as were understood to express any part of that honour and worship which belongs alone to God: Mordecai was therefore a man faithful to the grace of God, and against the custom of the country, and, at the hazard of his life, was determined to keep a conscience void of offence: and though he would obey no human authority to offend God, yet he would suffer no evil to be done to the king that he could prevent, and therefore made him acquainted with the danger he was in from his immediate attendants, who designed to take his life. And after Mordecai had been publicly honoured for this, he returned to the discharge of the duties of his station; and when he was advanced to the highest authority in the state, he continued faithful to the king, and increased in his favour, and remained as much the friend of his captive brethren as ever he had been; and the care he took to have the gracious dealings of God commemorated among the Jews, and the history of them transmitted to future ages, shews how much he continued to have the glory of God and the good of mankind at heart after he was so highly exalted: so that considering all this great man passed through, from the condition of a captive and a state criminal condemned to death, to that high station in which we see him discharging the duties of piety to God, fidelity to his prince, and of affection to his own people, we have an eminent instance of what God, by his holy spirit, is able and willing to do for the children of men, who are all of like passions, and whose spiritual and providential blessings are all promised on the same condition of faith in God, through the Son of his love—the Lord Jesus Christ, for whose sake God hath been pleased to reveal himself as ever waiting to be gracious.

J O B.

THE exact date of this book is not certain, but it appears to be placed among the moſt ancient of the Sacred Writings, and commonly believed to have been written by Moſes. It appears by the prophet Ezekiel, who lived near ſix hundred years before the coming of the LORD Jeſus, that the character of Job was well known in that prophet's time: Ezekiel ſpeaks of Job in the following manner: "The word of the LORD came unto me, ſaying, Son of man, when the land ſinneth againſt me by treſpaſſing grievouſly, then will I ſtretch out mine hand upon it, and will break the ſtaff of the bread thereof, and will ſend famine upon it, and will cut off man and beaſt from it. Though theſe three men, Noah, Daniel, and Job were in it, they ſhould deliver but their own ſouls by their righteouſneſs, ſaith the Lord GOD." (Ezek. xiv.) The apoſtle James alſo ſpeaks of Job thus—"Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have ſeen the end of the Lord: that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy." (James v. 11.) And in the 1ſt Cor. iii. 19, St. Paul quotes a paſſage from Job, in the manner in which the Scriptures were only to be referred to, before their diviſion into chapters: that is, by repeating the words, or ſaying in ſubſtance the ſame thing, with ſome variation. It is ſaid, (Job v. 13.) He taketh the wiſe in their own craftineſs: St. Paul's words are—"The wiſdom of this world is fooliſhneſs with God: for it is written, He taketh the wiſe in their own craftineſs." Thus are the Scriptures connected together, that were written at the diſtance of many ages from each other.

BUT beſides theſe proofs, the book of Job, in common with all the other Scriptures, contains within itſelf ſufficient evidence of its Divine origin. The information that is given in it, is, in its very nature, ſuch as only could come from God: this plainly appears by the diſcoveries that are made in it of the world of ſpirits, which no human thought can penetrate, unaſſiſted by the ſpirit of God, by which his will is fully and finally revealed.

IN this part of the word of God, we have the conduct of the Almighty, and that of ſatan, the prince of the angels that kept not their firſt eſtate, (Jude vi.) connected with the real hiſtory of a man, with whom we ourſelves are equally born to trouble, by being expoſed to the ſame kind of ſufferings, however the goodneſs of God may ſpare us from the ſame degree of them: and we ſee, by what was brought upon Job, by the malice and power of ſatan, what lengths the accuſer and enemy of mankind is permitted to go in afflicting mankind, and the particular enmity he hath againſt thoſe who are worſhipping God in ſpirit and in truth, and in their lives doing and ſuffering his holy will from their hearts. And by the diſcoveries that are made to us in the life of Job, we are ſhewn how fatal it would be to us, to conſider ourſelves in no danger from the wiles and rage of the devil, who is thus going about ſeeking whom he may devour, (1 Pet. v. 8. Eph. vi. 11, &c.) by tempting mankind to do that, which it was his deſign Job ſhould do—that is, offend againſt God under his ſufferings, and ſo be ſeparated from him, and of courſe ſink into deſperation and miſery. And when we conſider that we are in no leſs danger of doing this than Job was, what gratitude and praiſe is due to God for giving us the example that is ſet before us in this book, of what God, by his holy Spirit, is ever willing to do for all who ſee themſelves deſerving of greater ſufferings at his hands, than any that could be endured in mortal bodies, and who at the ſame time caſt themſelves upon him as their Redeemer; humbly reſigning themſelves, their characters, their preſent and eternal intereſts to God, who is too wiſe to miſtake, and too good not to do what is beſt for all that caſt their care upon him; only deſiring that aſſiſtance of his grace, by which they may be preſerved blameleſs in his ſight.

V. 1. Uz—Which was either in Edom, called the land of Uz, or in ſome part of Arabia, not far from the Chaldeans, and Sabeans. Job was perfect—Having that grace of God that bringeth ſalvation, by which he was enabled to refrain from all ungodlineſs and worldly luſts, living ſoberly and righteouſly, diſcharging every duty with a ſincere deſign to pleaſe him. And upright—Exact and regular in all his dealings with men, one of an unblameable converſation, doing to others as he would have others to deal with him. One that feared God—Only, truly pious, and devoted to God's worſhip and ſervice. And eſchewed evil—Carefully avoiding all ſin againſt God or men.

V. 5. Job ſent and ſanctified them—He exhorted and commanded them to ſanctify themſelves, by true repentance for all their ſins, and by fervent prayers, to make their peace with God by ſacrifice. And roſe up early in the morning—Thereby ſhewing his zeal in God's ſervice, and his impatience till God was reconciled to him and to his children. Job ſaid, It may be that my ſons have ſinned—For which he had cauſe enough, from the corruption of man's nature, the frailty and folly of youth. And curſed God—Not in the groſſeſt manner and higheſt degree, but deſpiſed and diſhonoured God; for curſing is ſomtimes uſed to note only reviling or detracting, or ſpeaking evil, or ſetting light by a perſon. What is called curſing one's father or mother, is elſewhere called ſetting light by them. In their hearts—By ſlight and low thoughts of God, by neglecting or forgetting to give God the praiſe and glory of the mercies, which by his favour they enjoyed, by taking more hearty delight in their feaſts, than in the ſervice of God: for theſe and ſuch-like diſtempers of heart, are moſt uſual in times of proſperity, as appears by common experience, and by the many Divine cautions we have againſt them. Thus did Job continually—It was his conſtant courſe at the end of every feaſting time.

V. 6. A day—A certain time appointed by God. When the ſons of God—The holy angels, ſo called for their great reſemblance of him in power, and dignity, and holineſs, and for their filial affection and obedience to him. Came to preſent themſelves before the Lord—Before his throne, to receive his commands, and to give him an account of their negotiations. And Satan came alſo among them—Being forced to come, and give up his account.

V. 7. Whence comeſt thou—God being here repreſented as Judge, begins with an inquiry, as the ground of his further proceedings. Satan anſwered, From going to and fro in the earth—Where by thy permiſſion I range about, obſerving, with great diligence, all the diſpoſitions and actions of men, and working in them and among them, as far as I have liberty and opportunity.

V. 8. Haſt thou conſidered my ſervant Job—Haſt thou taken notice of him, and his ſpirit, and carriage? and what haſt thou to ſay againſt him?

JOB.

THE exact date of this book is not certain, but it appears to be placed among the moſt ancient of the Sacred Writings, and commonly believed to have been written by Moſes. It appears by the prophet Ezekiel, who lived near ſix hundred years before the coming of the LORD Jeſus, that the character of Job was well known in that prophet's time: Ezekiel ſpeaks of Job in the following manner: "The word of the LORD came unto me, ſaying, Son of man, when the land ſinneth againſt me by treſpaſſing grievouſly, then will I ſtretch out mine hand upon it, and will break the ſtaff of the bread thereof, and will ſend famine upon it, and will cut off man and beaſt from it. Though theſe three men, Noah, Daniel, and Job were in it, they ſhould deliver but their own ſouls by their righteouſneſs, ſaith the Lord GOD." (Ezek. xiv.) The apoſtle James alſo ſpeaks of Job thus—"Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have ſeen the end of the Lord: that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy." (James v. 11.) And in the 1ſt Cor. iii. 19, St. Paul quotes a paſſage from Job, in the manner in which the Scriptures were only to be referred to, before their diviſion into chapters: that is, by repeating the words, or ſaying in ſubſtance the ſame thing, with ſome variation. It is ſaid, (Job v. 13.) He taketh the wiſe in their own craftineſs: St. Paul's words are—"The wiſdom of this world is fooliſhneſs with God: for it is written, He taketh the wiſe in their own craftineſs." Thus are the Scriptures connected together, that were written at the diſtance of many ages from each other.

CHAP.

V. 9. Doth Job fear God for nought—Sincerely, and out of pure love and respect to thee? No. It is policy, not piety, that makes him good; he doth not serve thee, but serveth himself of thee, and is a meer mercenary, serving thee for his own ends.

V. 10. Hast thou not made an hedge about him—Defended him by thy special care and providence, from all harm and inconveniences: which is able to oblige and win persons of the worst tempers.

V. 11. Put forth thine hand—In way of justice and severity. And touch—Afflict or destroy. And he will curse thee to thy face—He who is now so forward to serve and bless thee, will then openly blaspheme thy name, and reproach thy providence as unjust and unmerciful to him.

V. 12. All that he hath is in thy power—I give thee liberty to deal with his wife, children, servants, and his estate, whatsoever thy malice shall prompt thee to do. Only upon himself—His person, body, or soul. So Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord—From that place where God was represented as specially present, being forward and greedy to do the mischief which he had permission to do.

V. 15. The Sabeans—A people of Arabia, who lived by robbery and spoiling of others. I only am escaped to tell thee—Whom satan spared no less maliciously than he destroyed the rest, that Job might have speedy and certain intelligence of his calamity.

V. 16. The fire of God—Fire sent in an extraordinary manner. From heaven—From the air, which is often called heaven.

V. 18. Thy sons and thy daughters were drinking wine—Feasting after their manner: thus were they called, to give an account of themselves unto God in a moment. How are we admonished, when we read, or hear of the sudden death of any of our fellow-creatures, to watch unto prayer, and with serious minds to spend our uncertain life of trial, as becometh those that are placed between an eternity of bliss or woe?

V. 20. Job arose, and rent his mantle—To testify his deep sense of the heavy hand of God upon him. And fell down upon the ground—In humiliation and supplication. And worshipped—God, who is the only object of religious worship: instead of cursing God, which satan said he would do, he adored him, and gave him the glory of his sovereignty.

V. 21. Naked came I out of my mother's womb—I brought none of these things which I have now lost, with me, when I came into the world; I received them from the hand and favour of that God, who hath now required his own again. I still have all that substance wherewith I was born, and have lost only things without and beside myself. Naked shall I return thither—I shall be as rich when I die as I was when I was born, and therefore have no cause to murmur or complain of God; nor have I reason to rage against the Chaldeans and Sabeans, and other creatures who were only God's instruments to execute his wise and holy counsel. Blessed be the name of the Lord—God's name being often put for God himself, I have no cause to quarrel with God, but much cause to bless and praise him, that he did give me such blessings, and suffered me to enjoy them more and longer than I deserved; and that he hath vouchsafed to afflict me, which I greatly needed for my soul's good, and which I take as a token of his love and faithfulness to me, and therefore ministering more matter of comfort than grief to me; and that he hath left me the comfort of my wife, and yet is pleased to continue to me the health of my body, and a composed mind, and an heart to submit to his good pleasure; and that he hath reserved and prepared such a felicity for me, whom no Chaldeans or Sabeans, no men nor can devils take away from me.

V. 22. In all this—In all that he said or did upon these sad occasions. Job sinned not—As the devil presaged that he would. Nor charged

CHAP. II.

Before Christ cir. 1520.

AGain [a] there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan came also among them to present himself before the Lord.

[a] Chap. 1. 6.

2 And the Lord said unto Satan, From whence comest thou? And [b] Satan answered the Lord, and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

[b] Chap. 1. 7.

3 And the Lord said unto Satan, Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, [c] a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil? and still he holdeth fast his integrity, although thou movedst me against him, [*] [d] to destroy him without cause.

[c] Chap. 1. 1, 8.

[*] Heb. to swallow him up.

[d] Chap. 9. 17.

4 And Satan answered the Lord, and said, Skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life.

5 [e] But put forth thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will curse thee to thy face.

Before Christ cir. 1520.

[e] Chap. 1. 11.

6 [f] And the Lord said unto Satan, Behold, he is in thine hand, † but save his life.

[f] Chap. 1. 12.

† Or, only.

7 ¶ So went Satan forth from the presence of the Lord, and smote Job with sore boils, from the sole of his foot unto his crown.

8 And he took him a potsherd to scrape himself withal; [g] and he sat down among the ashes.

[g] 2 Sam. 13. 19. Chap. 42. 6. Matt. 11. 21.

9 ¶ Then said his wife unto him, Dost thou still retain thine integrity? curse God, and die.

10 But he said unto her, Thou speakest as one of the foolish women speaketh: what? shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil? [h] In all this did not Job sin with his lips.

charged God foolishly—So far was he from blaspheming God, that he did not entertain any dishonourable thought of God, as if he had done any thing unworthy of his infinite wisdom, or justice, or goodness, but heartily acquiesced in his good pleasure, and in his righteous, though sharp proceedings.

CHAP. II.

V. 1. Again there was a day—Another set time, some space after the former calamities.

V. 3. Still—Notwithstanding all his trials and thy malicious suggestions to the contrary. He holdeth fast his integrity—i. e. He continues to be the same perfect and upright man which he was before. All thy endeavours to destroy his integrity have made him only to hold it the faster. Although thou movedst me—Didst persuade me, and prevailed with me to do it. But this, as the rest of this representation, is not to be understood properly, as if God could be moved by any of his creatures to alter his purposes, which are all eternal and unchangeable, and especially by Satan, as if God would gratify him by granting his desires. The design of these words, is, to signify both the devil's restless malice in promoting man's misery, and God's permission of it for his own wise and holy ends. To destroy him without cause—Without any special provocation, whereby he, more than others, deserved such heavy punishments. Which also Job himself alledgeth for his justification; although he doth not deny himself to be a sinner, nor that sin deserves judgments: Or this place may be thus rendered: And thou hast moved me to destroy him in vain, or without effect, or to no purpose. Thou hast lost thy design and expectation, which was to take away his integrity, which, in spite of all thy art and malice, he still holdeth fast.

V. 4. All that a man hath will he give for his life—The design of these words is plain, which is to detract from Job, and to diminish that honour and praise which God gave to Job, by pretending that he had done no more than the meanest men commonly do by the law of self-preservation: It is not true patience and humility which makes him seem to bear his crosses so submissively, as depth of policy, that, by his feigned carriage, he may prevent further plagues.

V. 5. But touch his bone and his flesh—Smite him, not slightly, but so as he may feel pain and anguish.

V. 6. Save his life—Do not attempt to take away his life, which I will not suffer thee to do: Thus Satan, like the raging sea, is chained, and can only go as far as God pleases, and no farther.

V. 7. Satan smote Job with sore boils, from the sole of his foot unto his crown—In all the outward parts of his body. His tongue he spared, that it might be capable of venting those blasphemies against God which he expected and desired.

V. 8. He sat down among the ashes—In token of his repentance and deep humiliation under God's heavy hand.

V. 9. Then said his wife—Whom the devil spared with cruel intent to be the instrument of his temptations, and the aggravation of Job's misery by unkindness to him. Dost thou still retain thine integrity—Art thou yet so weak to persist in the practice of piety, when God himself not only forsakes and leaves thee in this condition, but is turned to be thy greatest enemy?—Curse God, and die—Seeing thy blessing of God availeth thee so little, it is time to change thy note, Curse God, and die; reproach him to his face, and tell him of his injustice and unkindness to thee, and that he loves his enemies and hates his friends, and that will provoke him to take away thy life, and so end thy torments. Or, curse God, though thou die for it: But although this word sometimes signifies cursing, yet most generally it signifies blessing, and so it may very well be understood here as a sarcastical expression, Bless God, and die; I see thou art set upon blessing of God, thou blessest God for giving, and thou blessest God for taking away, and thou art still blessing of God for thy tormenting diseases, and he rewards thee accordingly, giving thee more and more of that kind of mercy, for which thou blessest and praisest him: Awake out of this stupidity, and give over this absurd and unreasonable practice, and, as God gives thee no help nor comfort, let him lose thy praises and service. And this being her sense, it is not strange he reproveth her so sharply for it.

V. 10. Thou speakest as one of the foolish—Like a rash, and inconsiderate, and weak person, that dost not understand nor mind what thou sayest. Or, like a wicked and most prophane person; for such are frequently called fools in Scripture. Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?—Shall we poor worms give laws to our Lord and Governor, and oblige him always to bless and favour us, and never to afflict us? And shall not those great, and manifold, and long-continued mercies which God hath graciously given us, compensate for these short afflictions? Ought we not to bless God for those mercies which we did not deserve, and contentedly to bear those corrections which we deserve, and need: and (if it be not our own fault) may get much good by? In all this did not Job sin with his lips—By any reflections upon God, by any impatient or unbecoming expressions.

Before Christ cir. 1520.

11 ¶ Now when Job's three friends heard of all this evil that was come upon him, they came every one from his own place; Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite: for they had made ‡ Heb. wearied in strength.

18 There the prisoners rest together, [g] they hear not the voice of the oppressor.

g Chap. 39. 7.

V. 13. None spake to him——The reason of this silence was the greatness of their grief for him, and their surprise and astonishment at his condition: For though they had esteemed him to be a truly wise and godly man, and came with full purpose to comfort him, yet the prodigious greatness of his miseries, and that hand and displeasure of God which they thought perceived in them, made them to question Job's sincerity, so that they could not comfort him as they had intended, and yet were loth to grieve him with those convictions and reproofs which they thought he greatly needed.

C H A P. III.

V. 1. After this opened Job his mouth——He spake freely and boldly. And cursed his day—His birth-day, for which Job is reproved by God, and severely accuseth himself. And yet he doth not proceed so far as to curse or blaspheme God, but makes the devil a liar. But although he doth not break forth into direct and down-right reproaches of God, yet he makes secret and indirect reflections upon God's providence. His curse was sinful, because it casts a blame upon God for bringing that day, and for giving him that life which that day brought into the world.

V. 3. Let the day perish wherein I was born—Let the remembrance of that day be utterly lost. Such wishes are in themselves vain; and as they cannot be justified in any, they can never be imitated without contracting guilt, and increasing the misery of the mind, however sincere, that gives way to such expressions of their displeasure at that which has nothing sinful in itself to excuse our aversion.

V. 4. Let that day be darkness—Whensoever that day returns, I wish it may be black and gloomy. Let not God regard it from above—From heaven, by causing the light of the sun to shine upon it.

V. 5. Let the shadow of death—A black and dark shadow. Stain it—Take away its beauty and glory. Let the blackness of the day terrify it—Men in it. Let it be always observed as a frightful and dismal day.

V. 8. Let them curse it that curse the day—Of their distress and trouble.

V. 10. Because—Because it did not keep me from entering into this miserable life.

V. 12. Why—Thus Job unthankfully despiseth these singular mercies of God towards poor helpless infants, because of the present inconveniences which he had by means of them.

V. 13. For then had I been at rest—Free from all those torments of my body and mind, which now oppress me.

V. 14. With kings—I had then been as happy as the proudest monarchs, who, after their great enjoyments, go down into their graves, where I also should have been sweetly reposed.

V. 17. There—In the grave. The wicked cease from troubling—The great oppressors and troublers of the world have it not in their power to do any farther injury. There the weary be at rest—Those who were here molested, and tired with the injuries that were done them, are now sheltered in the quiet grave.

V. 18. There the prisoners rest together—They who were kept in the strongest chains, and closest prisons, and condemned to the most hard and miserable slavery, rest as well as those who were captives in much better circumstances. They hear not the voice of the oppressor—Or, task-master, who urgeth and forceth them, by cruel threatnings and stripes, to greater diligence in the works to which

THEN Eliphaz the Temanite anſwered and ſaid,

2 If we aſſay * to commune with thee, wilt thou be grieved? but † who can withhold himſelf from ſpeaking?

* Heb. a word. † Heb. who can refrain from words?

3 Behold, thou haſt inſtructed many, and thou haſt ſtrengthened the weak hands.

4 Thy words have upholden him that was falling, which they are condemned. Job meddles not here with their eternal ſtate after death, or the ſentence and judgment of God againſt wicked men, of which he ſpeaks hereafter, but only ſpeaks of their freedom from worldly troubles, which is the only matter of his complaint, and preſent diſcourſe. The priſoners in the eaſtern countries appear to have been left to the keepers of the priſons to treat them as they would, ſo as they did but keep them ſafely. And thus it is declared, it will be with ſuch as reject the laſt offers of mercy from God through the Son of his love; they will be left to the mercileſs rage of ſatan and his angels, and the voice of the cruel oppreſſor will be ever in their hearing, who in their life of trial would not regard him, who now, by his word and his grace, intreats them not to deſtroy themſelves by ſin, but repent, and believe in him, and eſcape the wrath to come.

V. 19 The ſmall and great—Perſons of all conditions. Are there—In the ſame place and ſtate, all diſtinctions and differences being for ever aboliſhed.

V. 20 Wherefore is light given—Theſe are ſtrong expoſtulations with God, and quarrelling with his providence, and with his bleſſings; but we muſt conſider, that Job was but a man, and a man of like paſſions and infirmities with other men, and now in grievous agonies, being not only under moſt violent and yet continual torments of body, but alſo under great diſquietments of mind, and was alſo left to himſelf, that he might ſee what was in his heart, and that all ſucceeding ages might have in him an illuſtrious example of man's infirmity, and the neceſſity of God's grace to help them in time of need.

V. 21. Dig for it—Deſire and pray for it with as much earneſtneſs as men dig for treaſure: but it is obſervable, that Job durſt not lay violent hands upon himſelf, nor do any thing to haſten or procure his death, but, notwithſtanding all his miſeries and complaints, he was contented to wait all the days of his appointed time, till his change came, (Chap. xiv. 14.) and by this it appears how infinitely he was indebted, in the midſt of his ſufferings, to the grace of God for preſerving him from giving way to that deſperation of mind, which would have made him deſpiſe the chaſtening of the Lord, and pull down deſtruction upon his own head.

V. 23. Why is light given to a man whoſe way is hid—Who knows not which way to turn himſelf, what courſe to take to comfort himſelf in his miſeries, or to get out of them; what method to uſe to pleaſe God who ſuffers him to be ſo tried and afflicted, notwithſtanding his ſincere obedience to the will of God. And whom God hath hedged in—Not with a hedge of defence, but of reſtraint; through which they cannot get, ſo that he can ſee no way nor poſſibility to eſcape, but all refuge fails him. How great does the myſtery of godlineſs appear, when it is conſidered that God can and does make uſe of the things that are naturally the moſt difficult and painful to us, as the very way and means of bringing ſouls into that entire reſt in God, which leaves and refers all to him, with an humble ſtedfaſt confidence, that they that put their truſt in him will not be confounded.

V. 24. My ſighing cometh before I eat—I fall into bitter paſſions of ſighing and weeping, becauſe my neceſſity and duty obligeth me to eat, and ſo to ſupport this wretched life, which I long to loſe; and becauſe of my uninterrupted pains of body, and horrors of my mind which mix themſelves with my very meat, and do not afford me one quiet moment. My roarings—My loud outcries. Are poured out like the waters—With great abundance.

V. 25. For—This is another reaſon why he is weary of his life. The thing which I greatly feared is come upon me—And theſe fears of mine were not in vain, but are juſtified by my preſent calamities. So that I have never enjoyed any ſound tranquillity ſince I was born; and therefore it hath not been worth my while to live, ſince all my days have been evil, and full of vexation and torment, either by the fear of miſeries, or by the ſuffrance of them The word of the Lord is to all them that fear him, to fear nothing beſides him, but to caſt their care and burden upon him, who pitieth them as a father does his children; and who only chaſtens them for their profit, that they may be partakers of his holineſs, and the bleſſedneſs he hath connected with the ſame for ever.

V. 26. Neither was I quiet—In my proſperous days I never was at reſt from fear: though I lived ſoberly and circumſpectly, walking humbly with God, and working out my ſalvation with fear and trembling. Yet trouble came—As I feared it would.

CHAP. IV.

V. 2. If we commune with thee, wilt thou be grieved—For we muſt not uſe words of comfort, but of reproof, which will be irkſome to thee: and this makes me deſire to be ſilent, if it were poſſible. But who can withhold himſelf from ſpeaking—When he hears ſuch unreaſonable and ungodly words coming from ſuch a perſon as thou art, whereby thou doſt accuſe thy Maker, and reproach his providence, and contemn his bleſſings. No man who hath any reſpect to God, or love to thee, can forbear reproving thee.

V. 3. Thou haſt inſtructed many—Teaching them thoſe leſſons which thou haſt not learned thyſelf, and wilſt not practiſe patiently to bear afflictions, and to ſubmit to God's will and providence in all things, which thou refuſeſt to do. And thou haſt ſtrengthened the weak hands—By adminiſtering ſupport, comfort, and counſel, to ſuch as were unable to bear their burdens, or to do their duty under their afflictions, till they were ſtrengthened by thy advice, to truſt God with the iſſue of their ſufferings.

V. 4. Thy words have upholden him that was falling—Ready to ſink under their ſufferings, through deſpondency and diſtruſt of God's providence. And thou haſt ſtrengthened the feeble knees—Such as were weak-hearted, and fainting under their trials.

V. 5. But falling, and thou [a] haſt ſtrengthened ‡ the feeble knees.

5 But now it is come upon thee, and thou fainteſt; it toucheth thee, and thou art troubled.

6 Is not this thy fear, thy confidence, thy hope, and the uprightneſs of thy ways?

V. 6. Is this thy hope?—So the ſenſe is, We now ſee what was the nature of thy fear of God, thy confidence in him, the uprightneſs of thy ways, and thy hope in God's mercy, which thou didſt make ſhew of, and for which thou waſt become ſo famous. Thy preſent carriage diſcovereth to thyſelf and others, that it was but meer talk and appearance, and there was nothing ſound and ſincere in it. In thy proſperity it was eaſy to make a ſplendid profeſſion of religion; but men are beſt known by affliction, which does not make us weak, but ſhews what we are.

V. 7. Remember, I pray thee—Give me one example hereof out of all thy experience. Who ever periſhed—Was ſo utterly undone as thou art, ſo miſerably afflicted by ſuch unparalleled and various judgments from God and men, all conſpiring againſt thee. Being innocent—Who had not by his wickedneſs provoked ſo merciful a God to do that which is ſo unuſual, and in ſome ſort unpleaſing to himſelf. Therefore thou art guilty of ſome great, though ſecret crimes, and thy ſin hath now found thee out, and hath brought down theſe plagues upon thee. Where were the righteous cut off?—By the Divine vengeance before his time, which is like to be thy caſe. His judgment herein was raſh and falſe, but not without ſome appearance of truth: but allowing for this miſtake, the method which he uſeth with Job is commendable, and to be imitated by others in their dealing with perſons in ſickneſs or affliction: for he doth not flatter him in his ſins, nor immediately and unſeaſonably apply comforts to him; but endeavours to convince him of his ſins, and to bring him to repentance, as the only way to his remedy.

V. 8. Even as I have ſeen—Many examples of wicked men cut off for their wickedneſs. They that ſow wickedneſs—They that work wickedneſs. Reap the ſame—The fruit of their iniquity, the juſt recompence and puniſhment of it.

V. 9. By the blaſt of God—By his ſecret but powerful judgments they are blaſted and blown away, as chaff by the wind.

V. 10. The teeth of the young lions are broken—The lions, when [illegible], are ſaid to have moſt commonly their teeth broken: This [illegible] meant of wicked and powerful tyrants, who are compared [illegible] who though for a time they perſecute and oppreſs, [illegible] are reſtrained, and broken, and cruſhed in [illegible] the juſt anger of God appearing againſt them in [illegible]. Poſſibly he may ſecretly accuſe Job, [illegible] children, or both, that being perſons of great wealth and power, they had wickedly abuſed it to ruin their neighbours, and therefore were juſtly cut off.

V. 12. Now a thing was ſecretly brought to me—I will further convince thee by a viſion which I had from God, brought ſecretly, as the word of God uſed to come to the Prophets. And mine ear received—I heard. A little thereof—This may be a humble expreſſion, ariſing from a deep ſenſe of his own infirmity, and the ſmall meaſure of his knowledge of divine things; as if he had ſaid, Many, I doubt, have more familiar acquaintance with God, and more full revelations from God than I can pretend to, but a little of that treaſure God hath been pleaſed to impart to me.

V. 13. From the viſions of the night—Viſions differed from dreams. God imparted his mind to a man in dreams when he was aſleep; but in viſions, when awake. And theſe viſions ſometimes happened by day.

V. 14. Fear came upon me—Sent by God to humble him, and to prepare him for the more diligent attention to, reverent reception of, and ready compliance with, the Divine meſſage.

V. 15. Then a ſpirit—An angel in ſome viſible ſhape. My hair ſtood up—Through that exceſſive horror, cauſed by ſo unuſual and terrible a preſence.

V. 16, 17. It ſtood ſtill—Having paſſed by him to and again he made a ſtand, as one that had ſome buſineſs with him, and addreſſed himſelf to ſpeak to him. But I could not diſcern the form thereof—Exactly and diſtinctly, ſo as to know what or who it was. An image was before mine eyes—I ſaw ſome corporeal reſemblance, though in a confuſed manner. There was ſilence—The ſpirit, which poſſibly had made ſome noiſe with his motion, now ſtanding ſtill made no noiſe; all other perſons and things about me were ſilent. And I heard a voice, ſaying, Shall mortal man be more juſt than God—The ſenſe is, Thou, O Job, doſt preſumptuouſly accuſe God for dealing harſhly and unrighteouſly with thee, in ſending thee into the world upon ſuch hard terms, and puniſhing an innocent and righteous man with ſuch unparalleled ſeverity; but conſider things calmly within thyſelf; if God and thou come to a trial before any equal judge, canſt thou think that thou wiltſt go away juſtified, and the great God ſhall be condemned? No righteous man will puniſh another without cauſe, or more than he deſerves; and therefore if God do ſo with thee, as thy words imply, he is leſs juſt than a man: which is blaſphemous to imagine. Shall a man—However great and eminent for wiſdom, or juſtice, or power, or any other perfections, Be more pure than his maker—An unanſwerable argument againſt Job; he made thee, and that for himſelf and his own glory, and therefore hath an unqueſtionable right to deal with thee, and diſpoſe of thee, as he ſees fit. Woe to him that that ſtriveth with his maker; beſides if any man have any thing of juſtice or purity in him, it is derived from God, the undoubted and only fountain of it, and therefore it muſt neceſſarily be in God in a far more eminent degree.

V. 18. Behold——This deſerves thy conſideration. Theſe and the following words ſeem to be the words of Eliphaz, explaining the former viſion, and applying it to Job's caſe, enforcing it by further arguments. He put no truſt in his ſervants—In his angels, called his ſervants by way of eminency, and to intimate that Sovereign Dominion which God hath over the glorious angels, and much more over men, by virtue whereof, he hath an unqueſtionable authority to treat them according to his good pleaſure. And theſe God is ſaid to put no truſt in, becauſe if left to themſelves, and deſtitute of the ſuccours of his power and grace, they would not continue to be loyal and faithful to him. His angels he charged with folly—He diſcerned folly and vanity in the angelical natures, when he had firſt made them; which, although he ſaw and pronounced them, no leſs than the viſible creatures, to be very good in themſelves, and free from the leaſt degree of ſin; yet, comparing them with himſelf, and conſidering them in themſelves alone, he ſaw ſomething of folly and vanity in their very natures, becauſe they were creatures, and therefore ſubject to manifold changes, and, among others, to fall from God, or into ſin; as it appeared by the ſad experience of ſome of them, (Jude vi.) Seeing therefore the angels, which ſo far exceed mankind in wiſdom, and ſtrength, and purity, and juſtice, and all other perfections, do fall incomparably ſhort of God, it is moſt abſurd, as well as impious, to think that man is more juſt or pure than God, as thou, O Job, ſeemeſt to ſurmiſe.

V. 19. How much leſs—The ſenſe is, what ſtrange preſumption then is it for a mortal man to pretend to an higher privilege than the angels do, to make himſelf more juſt than God, or to exalt againſt God, as thou doſt? Them that dwell in houſes of clay—Men, who, though they have immortal ſpirits, yet thoſe ſpirits dwell in mortal bodies, which are great clogs and incumbrances to them, and which are here called houſes, becauſe they are the receptacles of the ſoul, and the places of its preſent abode. No creature is ſo weak and contemptible, but one time or other it may have the body of man in its power, as the worms have in the grave. But he inſtanceth in a moth rather than a worm, becauſe it is the weaker of the two, and becauſe it better agrees with the ſimilitude of an houſe, in which moths commonly are more frequent. How then canſt thou think, O Job, to contend with thy Maker, that muſt become a prey to ſuch ſmall and impotent creatures?

V. 20. They are deſtroyed from morning to evening—All the day long; there is not a moment wherein man is not ſinking and drawing on towards death and corruption. They periſh for ever—As to human appearance, or in reference to this preſent life, which, when once loſt, is never recovered. Without any regarding it—This is ſo common a thing for all men, though never ſo high and great, to periſh in this manner, that no man regards it.

V. 21. Doth not their excellency—Whatſoever is really, or by common eſtimation excellent in men, all their natural, and moral, and civil accompliſhments, as high birth, great riches, power, and wiſdom. Theſe are ſo far from preſerving men from periſhing, that they periſh themſelves together with thoſe houſes of clay in which they are lodged. They die, even without wiſdom—As folly is often put for wickedneſs, ſo is wiſdom for juſtice and goodneſs; and ſo by wiſdom here may be meant that perfect juſtice and purity, which Job arrogated to himſelf, and which Eliphaz here denies to all men.

CHAP. V.

V. 1. Call now—Try if there be any one ſaint that will defend, or allow thee in theſe bold expoſtulations with God. Thou wilt find many fools or wicked men, to anſwer or imitate thee in their ſpeeches and carriages, but not one of the ſaints like thee; which gives thee juſt cauſe to queſtion thine integrity.

V. 2. For wrath—A man's own wrath, fretting, impatience, and indignation. Killeth the fooliſh man—The raſh and inconſiderate ungodly man. Envy—Job ſpoke with envy of thoſe that were never born, or were in their graves. Slayeth the ſilly one—The man who, for want of wiſdom, is ſoon deceived with falſe opinions and appearances, and preſent things; which is thy caſe, O Job! The ſenſe of the verſe may be this, I perceive, that thou art full of envy at wicked men, and of wrath againſt God, who denies thee that mercy, and loads thee with afflictions; and this ſhews thee to be a fooliſh and weak man.

V. 3. I have ſeen—I have often obſerved it in my experience. Having ſeverely rebuked Job for his tranſports of paſſion, and intemperate ſpeeches againſt God, he now returns to his former argument, and proves that ſuch dreadful and deſtructive judgments of God do not befal the righteous, but the wicked: he then anſwers an objection concerning the preſent and ſeeming proſperity of the wicked, which he confeſſeth that he himſelf had ſometimes obſerved. The fooliſh—The wicked man, who is quite deſtitute of true, ſpiritual, and heavenly wiſdom. Taking root—Not only proſperous for the preſent, but, as it ſeemed, firm and ſecure for the future. But ſuddenly—In a moment, before all expectation. I curſed—I judged that he was a curſed creature, notwithſtanding all his proſperity, and I foreſaw and foretold it, by the rules of Scripture, or the direction of God's Spirit, that he would certainly, ſooner or later, be ſtript of all his bleſſings. I ſaw, by the event which followed his proſperity, that he was a man accurſed of God. Conſtantly was even in the midſt of his happineſs, though even then he was really accurſed; but of what it was by a ſudden change. His habitation—His pleaſant or commodious habitation.

V. 4. His children—Whoſe greatneſs and happineſs he deſigned, ſuppoſing that his family would be eſtabliſhed for ever. Are far from ſafety—Are expoſed to great dangers and calamities in this life, and can neither preſerve themſelves, nor the inheritance which their fathers got for them. They are cruſhed in the gate—In the place of judicature; to which they are brought for their offences, and where they will find severe judges, and few or no friends; because those many persons whom their powerful fathers defrauded or oppressed, seek for justice and the recovery of their rights, which they easily obtain against such persons as plainly declared by their actions, that they neither feared God nor reverenced man.

V. 6. Affliction cometh not forth of the dust—It springs not out of the earth: it comes not from men or creatures here below, but it comes from a certain and an higher cause, even from God, and that for man's sins, and therefore thou shouldst seek to him for redress.

V. 7. Man is born unto trouble—Their most certain and constant inheritance, God having allotted this portion to mankind for their sins. And therefore thou takest a wrong course in complaining so bitterly of that which thou shouldst patiently bear, and thy right method is to seek unto God who inflicts it, and who only can remove it.

V. 8. I would—If I were in thy condition. Seek unto God—By prayer, and humiliation, and submission, imploring his pardon, and favour, and help, and not repine at him and accuse his providence, as thou dost. And unto God would I commit my cause—Commend my afflicted condition to him by fervent prayer, and resign myself and all my concerns to him, and humbly hope for relief from him.

V. 9. Which doeth great things——Here Eliphaz enters upon a discourse of the infinite perfection and greatness of God's nature and works; which he doth partly as an argument to enforce the exhortation to seek and commit his cause to God, because God was infinitely able either to punish him yet far worse, if he continued to provoke him, or to raise him from the dust, if he humbly addressed himself to him: and partly that by a true representation of God's excellency and glory, and of that vast disproportion which was between God and Job, he might convince Job of his great sin in speaking so boldly and irreverently of him. Unsearchable—Such things as we may not curiously search into, or such as by searching we cannot understand either the works themselves, or God's manner of doing them, or God's designs in doing them. And therefore, O Job! thou art guilty of great impiety and folly to censure the works of God as unreasonable, because thou dost not fully understand the nature and use of them. Marvellous things—Which though common, as the following works are, and therefore neglected and despised, yet are just matter of wonder even to the wisest men.

V. 10. Who giveth rain—He beginneth with this ordinary and obvious work of God, in which he implies that there is something unsearchable and wonderful, as indeed there is in the rise of it from the earth, in the strange hanging of that heavy body in the air, and in the distribution of it as God sees fit, and how much more in the secret counsels and hidden paths of Divine Providence, which Job took the liberty to censure? And sendeth waters—— Fountains and rivers, which is another great and wonderful work of God.

V. 11. To set up on high those that be low—He giveth this instance to comfort and encourage Job to seek to God, because he can raise him out of his great depths of misery. That those which mourn may be exalted to safety—Notwithstanding all the power of their enemies.

V. 12. He disappointeth the devices of the crafty—Such as are cunning to work evil, and to cover it with fair pretences, as hypocrites use to do, and as Job's friends charged him with doing; God breaks the hopes and designs of such men; as he hath now blasted thy expectation, and taken away thy outward happiness, which was the thing thou didst design in taking up the profession of religion. So that their hands cannot perform their enterprise—They cannot execute their cunning contrivances.

V. 13. He taketh the wise in their own craftiness—Wicked men who are wise to do evil, and wise in the opinion of the world, he not only deceiveth in their hopes and counsels, but turns them against themselves. The counsel of the froward—Or perverse, such as wind and turn every way, as wrestlers do, and will leave no means untried to accomplish their counsels. Is carried headlong—Is tumbled down and broken, and that by their own precipitation and haste.

V. 14. They meet with darkness in the day-time—In plain things they run into gross mistakes, and choose those courses which are worst for themselves. And grope—Like blind men to find their way, not knowing what to do.

V. 15. But he saveth the poor—Or helpless, who therefore flee to God for refuge. From the sword, from their mouth—Or from the sword which cometh out of their mouth, from all their censures, slanders, threatnings, deceitful insinuations, false swearings, unrighteous sentences, whereby their good names, or estates, or lives may be exposed to the utmost hazards—from the sword, by those wicked men's own words against the godly, which God wonderfully over-ruleth to the working out of their deliverance.

V. 16. So the poor hath hope—So this poor man obtaineth what he expected from God, to whom he committed his cause; and other poor men will be encouraged by his example to place their hope in God. And iniquity—Wicked men. Stoppeth her mouth—They are silenced and confounded, being convicted of their own wickedness and folly, and finding that not only the poor are got out of their nets and snares, in which they thought that they had them fast, but also the oppressors themselves are ensnared in them, and all this by sudden and unexpected means.

V. 17. Behold—For what I am saying, though most true, will not be believed without serious consideration. Happy is the man whom God correcteth—Those afflictions are so far from making thee miserable, as thou complainest, that they are and will be, if thou dost thy duty, the means of thy happiness: which, though a paradox to the world, is frequently affirmed in holy Scripture; and the reason of it is plain, because they are pledges of God's love, which no man can buy too dear; and though bitter, yet necessary physic to purge out that sin which is deeply fixed in all men's natures, and thereby to prevent far greater, even infinite and eternal miseries. Without respect to which this proposition could not be true or tolerable. And therefore it plainly shews that good men, in those ancient times of the Old Testament, had the prospect, and belief, and hope of everlasting blessedness in heaven after this life. Despise not thou—Do not abhor it as a thing pernicious and intolerable, nor refuse it as a thing useless and unprofitable, nor slight it as a mean and unnecessary thing; but on the contrary, prize it highly as a favour of God. The chastening of the Almighty—The all-sufficient God, who is able to support and comfort thee in thy troubles, and to deliver thee out of them.

V. 18. For he maketh sore, and bindeth up—The wounds, as good surgeons use to do when they have dressed them in order to their healing. The sense is, though he hath seen it fit to wound thee, yet he will not always grieve thee, but will in due time release thee from all thy miseries, therefore despair not.

V. 19. He shall deliver thee—If thou seekest to him by prayer and repentance. In six troubles—In manifold or repeated; six is used for many. Yea, in seven there shall no evil touch thee—So as to destroy thee; thou shalt have a good issue out of all thy troubles, though they are both great and many.

V. 20. In famine—Which Job might be thought to fear, as being so poor that he needed his friends contributions for his relief. He shall redeem thee from death—From that terrible kind of death. And in war, from the power of the sword—These things he utters with more confidence, because the rewards or punishments of this life were more constantly distributed to men in the Old Testament, according to their good or bad behaviour, than now they are: and because it was his particular opinion, that great afflictions were the constant fruits and certain evidences of a man's wickedness; and consequently that great mercies and deliverances should infallibly follow upon true repentance and godliness.

V. 21. Thou shalt be hid—Protected as in some secret place. From the scourge of the tongue—From false accusations, slanders, and reproaches, either by diverting their tongues to other things, or by clearing thy integrity. Neither shalt thou be afraid—Thou shalt have no cause to fear it, because God will secure thee.

V. 22. At destruction and famine thou shalt laugh—Not with a laughter of scorn, as this word is sometimes used, (for God's judgments are to be entertained with reverence and godly fear) but with a laughter of joy and triumph, arising from his just security and confidence in God's watchful and gracious providence, which will either keep him from it, or in it, or do him much good by it. Neither shalt thou be afraid of the beasts—The wild beasts, which were numerous and mischievous. And this security will the redeemed of the Lord have in life, in death, and in the great day of the Lord: when the wicked shall be calling for the mountains to cover them from the wrath of God, whose mercy they despised when it was freely offered to them, and of which they were entreated to accept: the ministers of vengeance will then, with the fury of beasts of prey, seize upon the wicked, who will be banished with swift destruction from the presence of the Lord: but neither the devouring fiends nor that destruction will occasion any fear to the faithful, but, on the contrary, they will rejoice with joy unspeakable in the everlasting favour and unchangeable love of their Almighty Saviour, to whom in this life they fled for mercy.

V. 23. Thou shalt be in league with the stones of the field—This is a metaphor signifying, that he should be free from annoyance from those things which used to hurt and destroy, and that the same things shall now contribute to his safety and defence. The beasts of the field shall be at peace with thee—They shall not hurt thee, nay, they shall befriend thee, as being at peace with thee.

V. 24. Thou shalt know—By certain experience. That thy tabernacle—Thy habitation. Shall be in peace—Shall enjoy safety and prosperity, which are comprehended under the sweet name of peace. And thou shalt visit thy habitation—Manage and order all thy worldly concerns with care and diligence. And shalt not sin—Either by unrighteous dealings, or by neglecting God and his service. Thou shalt not be disappointed of thy hopes, or blasted in thy endeavours, but shalt succeed in them: this shall be the sure consequence of thy sincere piety and righteous life.

V. 25. Thou shalt know—By assurance from God's promises and the impressions of his spirit: and by experience in due time. That thy seed shall be great—Thy posterity, which God will give thee instead of those which thou hast lost, shall be high, and honourable, and powerful. And thine offspring—Which shall come from thee as branches out of a tree. And this seems added, to shew, that he did not speak of his spiritual seed, as Abraham's seed is understood. Shall be as the grass of the earth—Both for its plentiful increase, and for its flourishing greenness.

V. 26. Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age—In a mature and old age; thou shalt not be cut off by an hand of violence before thy time, as thy sons and other wicked men have been. As a shock of corn cometh in, in his season—As an heap or stack of corn is brought in to the barn fully ripe: thou shalt live till all [illegible] purposes

V. 27. We—It is not my ſingle opinion, but my brethren concur with me, as thou wilt hear from their own mouths. Have ſearched it—This is no raſh or haſty conceit, but what we have learned by long experience, and diligent obſervation of the ways of God. Know thou it—For to us thou ſeemeſt, by thy words and carriage, to be wholly, or in a great part, ignorant of theſe things. For thy good—Let thy own advantage lead thee to follow this counſel. Job's ſufferings are here looked upon to be the conſequence of his ſecret ſins: but this judgment is contrary to that approval which God gave of Job after his ſufferings had commenced, in this judgment therefore his friends are miſtaken. But after God had thus approved of Job, the tempter appears ſo far to have got the advantage of Job, as to lead him to ſpeak a language contrary to reſignation to the will of God; and his friends having this language of bitterneſs and diſcontent, they unjuſtly conclude that Job's ſtate of mind was no other now than it had been before, and that he had been inſincere in his former profeſſion, which it is certain was not the caſe, becauſe his uprightneſs is firſt declared, and then it is afterwards ſaid in all this, Job ſinned not.

CHAP. VI.

V. 2. Oh that my grief and my calamity were laid in the balances together—O that I had a juſt and equal Judge that would underſtand my caſe, and conſider whether I have not juſt cauſe for ſuch bitter complaints: Or, at leaſt, whether the greatneſs of my burden ſhould not procure ſome allowance to my infirmity, if I ſhould ſpeak ſomething unadviſedly, and protect me from ſuch ſevere cenſures.

V. 3. My words are ſwallowed up—So far am I from ſpeaking too liberally of it, for which I am now accuſed, that I cannot find nor utter words ſufficient to expreſs my ſorrow or miſery; but my groanings are ſuch as cannot be uttered.

V. 4. The arrows of the Almighty——So he calls his afflictions. The terrors of God—Theſe terrors which God immediately works in my ſoul, either from the ſenſe of his wrath accompanying my outward troubles; or, from the ſad expectation of longer and greater torments.

V. 5. Theſe creatures are free from complaints, when, like you, they have nothing to occaſion their diſtreſs.

V. 6. Men do commonly complain of their meat when it is but unſavoury, how much more when it is ſo bitter as mine is?

V. 7. Thoſe grievous afflictions, which, according to the principles and common inclinations of human nature, I dreaded the very touch and thought of, they are now my daily, ſorrowful bread.

V. 8. O that I might have my requeſt—The thing which I have ſo paſſionately deſired—death.

V. 9. To deſtroy me—To end my life and calamities together. That he would let looſe his hand—O that he would reſtrain himſelf and his hand no longer, but let it fall upon me with all its might, ſo as to cut me off.

V. 10. Then ſhould I yet have comfort—The thoughts of my approaching death would comfort me in all my ſorrows. I would harden myſelf in ſorrow—I would bear up myſelf with more courage and patience. I have not concealed the words of the holy One—Of God. That light of ſacred truths which he hath been pleaſed to impart to me, I have not concealed neither from myſelf, by ſhutting mine eyes againſt them, or ſuffering my prejudices, or paſſions, or worldly intereſts to blind my mind, leſt I ſhould ſee them, as you think I have done; nor from others; but as I myſelf have ſtedfaſtly believed them, and not wilfully and wickedly departed from them, ſo I have endeavoured to teach and commend them to others, and have not been aſhamed nor afraid boldly to profeſs and preach the true religion in the midſt of the heathens who are round about me. And therefore I know that if God doth cut me off, it will be in mercy, and I ſhall be a gainer by it.

V. 11. What is my ſtrength, that I ſhould hope—My ſtrength is ſo ſmall and ſpent, that although I may linger a while in my torments, yet I cannot live long, and therefore it is vain for me to hope for ſuch a reſtitution of my ſtrength and proſperity as thou haſt promiſed to me; and therefore I juſtly pray that God would take away my life. What is mine end—What is death to me? It is not terrible but comfortable. That I ſhould prolong my life——Why ſhould I deſire or endeavour the prolonging of my life. I deſire not to live longer, though in the greateſt ſplendor and proſperity, but to be diſſolved, and to be with my God and Redeemer.

V. 12. Is my fleſh of braſs—I am not made of ſtone or braſs, but of fleſh and blood, as others are, and therefore I am utterly unable to endure theſe miſeries longer, and can neither hope for, nor deſire any continuance of my life, or return of my former happineſs.

V. 13. Is not my help in me—Though I have no ſtrength in my body, yet I have ſome help and ſupport within me. Is wiſdom driven quite from me—If I have no ſtrength, am I therefore unable to judge of the vanity of thy diſcourſe, and of the truth of my own caſe?

V. 14. To him that is afflicted—To him that is melted or diſſolved with afflictions. Pity ſhould be ſhewed from his friend—His friend ſhould ſhew kindneſs and compaſſion in his judgment of him, and not load him with reproaches. But he forſaketh the fear of the Almighty—But thou haſt no love or pity for thy neighbour and friend; which is a plain evidence that thou art guilty of that which thou didſt charge me with, even of the want of the fear of God. Should my friend have caſt ſuch a reproach upon me, than which none is worſe, that I am an impious man, and deſtitute of the fear of God? This he mentions as that which was moſt grievous and intolerable to him.

V. 15. My brethren—My three friends; for though Eliphaz only had ſpoken, the other two ſhewed their approbation of his diſcourſe. Have dealt deceitfully—Unmercifully with me, and adding to theſe afflictions which they ſaid they came to remove. As the ſtream of brooks they paſs away—Which quickly vaniſh and deceive the hopes of the thirſty traveller.

V. 20. They—The troops and companies. Were confounded becauſe they had hoped—They comforted themſelves with the expectation of water there to quench their thirſt. They came thither, and were aſhamed—As having deceived themſelves and others with vain and falſe hopes.

V. 21. For—He gives the reaſon why he charged them with deceitfulneſs, and compared them to theſe deceitful brooks. Now ye are nothing—You are to me as if you had not been, or as if you had never come to me; for I have no benefit nor comfort from you and your diſcourſe, but only an increaſe of my miſery. Ye ſee my caſting down, and are afraid—When you come near to me, and perceive my great calamities, you ſtand as it were at a diſtance; you are afraid for yourſelves, leſt my ſores ſhould infect you; or leſt ſome further plagues ſhould come upon me, wherein yourſelves for my ſake, or becauſe you are in my company, ſhould be involved; or, leſt I ſhould be burdenſome to you, and need and call for your ſupport.

V. 22. Did I ſay, Bring unto me—Give me ſomething for my ſupport or relief. Or give a reward for me—Did I ſend for you to come and viſit me for this end?

V. 23. Or deliver me—By power and the force of your arms, as Abraham delivered Lot. Or redeem me—By price or ranſom.

V. 24. Teach me—Inſtead of reproaching, inſtruct and convince me by ſolid arguments. And I will hold my tongue—I will patiently hear and gladly receive your counſels.

V. 25. How forcible are right words—(i. e.) The words of truth or ſolid arguments have a marvelous power to convince and perſuade a man; and if yours were ſuch, I ſhould readily yield to them. But what doth your arguing reprove—There is no truth in your aſſertions, nor weight in your arguments, and therefore are they of no account or power with me.

V. 26. Do ye imagine to reprove words—Do you think it is ſufficient to quarrel with ſome of my words, without conſidering the truth of my condition, or making an allowance for human infirmity, or for my extreme miſery, which may eaſily force from me ſome indecent expreſſions? One that is deſperate—A poor, miſerable, hopeleſs, and helpleſs man: for the words of ſuch perſons are commonly neglected and deſpiſed, although there be truth and great weight in them; and ſuch are generally thought to ſpeak from deep paſſions and prejudices, more than from reaſon and judgment. Which are as wind—Which you eſteem to be like the wind, vain and light, without ſolid ſubſtance, making a great noiſe with little ſenſe, and to little purpoſe.

V. 27. Ye overwhelm—My caſe is the contrary of that which you take it to be. You dig a pit for your friend—You inſult and triumph over me, whom you owned for your friend.

V. 28. Look upon me—Conſider me and my cauſe further and better than you have done, that you may give a more true and righteous judgment concerning it. For it is evident unto you—You will plainly diſcover it

V. 29. Return—Let me beg your ſecond thoughts, and a ſerious review of my caſe. Let it not be iniquity—I beg not your favour, but your juſtice, judge according to right, and do not conclude me to be wicked, becauſe you ſee me to be miſerable, as you have unjuſtly done. My righteouſneſs is in it—You will find the right to be on my ſide.

V. 30. Cannot my taſte—My judgment, which diſcerns words and actions, as the palate doth meats. Diſcern perverſe things—Falſe opinions or ſinful expreſſions.

C H A P. VII.

Before Christ cir. 1520.

I S there not * [a] an appointed time to man upon earth? are not his days also like the days of an hireling?

2 As a servant † earnestly desireth the shadow, and as an hireling looketh for the reward of his work:

3 So am I made to possess [b] months of vanity, and wearisome nights are appointed to me.

4 [c] When I lie down, I say, When shall I arise, and ‡ the night be gone? and I am full of tossings to and fro unto the dawning of the day.

5 My flesh is clothed with worms, and clods of dust, my skin is broken, and become lothsome.

6 [d] My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent without hope.

V. 1. Is there not an appointed time to man upon earth—Is there not a certain and short time limited by God, wherein man shall live in this sinful, and vain, and miserable world, after which the faithful shall live in an holier and happier place and state? And is it a crime in me to desire that God would give me some ease and respite for the present, and bring me to that blessed and joyful period? Are not his days also like the days of an hireling—Whose time is limited and short, being but for a few years, and whose condition is full of toil and hardship.

V. 2. A servant desireth the shadow—The sun-set, or the night, the time allotted for his rest; and why may not I also desire the time of my rest?

V. 3. So am I made to possess—God, by his sovereign power and providence, hath given me this as my lot and inheritance. Months of vanity—Empty and deceitful. And wearisome nights—He mentions nights, because that is the saddest time for sick and miserable persons; the darkness and solitude of the night being of themselves uncomfortable, and giving them more opportunity for solemn and sorrowful thoughts and reflections upon their own miseries.

V. 5. My flesh is clothed—Covered all over as with a garment. With worms—Which breed in my corrupted flesh and sores.

V. 6. My days are swifter—The time of my life hastens to a period; and therefore vain are those hopes which you give me of a restitution to my former prosperity in this world. Than a weaver's shuttle—Which passeth in a moment from one end of the web to the other. And are spent without hope—Of enjoying any good day here.

V. 7. O remember—He turneth his speech to God.

V. 8. Thine eyes are upon me, and I am not—When thou shalt look for me to do me good, thou wilt find that I am not, that I am dead and gone.

V. 10. He shall return no more to his house—To enjoy his house and possessions again. Neither shall his place know him any more—He shall no more be seen and known in his former habitation, and by his friends and neighbours.

V. 11. Therefore—I will plead with God for pity and relief before I die. I will complain in the bitterness of my soul—I will not smother my bitter anguish within my own breast, which will make it intolerable, but I will give it vent, and ease myself by pouring forth complaints, and expostulating with my God, who, as I hope, will hear and help me.

V. 12. Am I a sea, or a whale—Am I as fierce and unruly as the sea, which, if thou didst not set a watch over it, and bounds to it, would overwhelm the earth, and destroy mankind? No, Lord, thou knowest that I am but a poor weak creature, which thou canst crush with the least touch of thy finger, without these violent and insupportable pains and miseries; and that I have not been so fierce and boisterous in my carriage, as to need or deserve these extraordinary calamities. That thou settest a watch over me—That thou shouldest guard and restrain me with such heavy and unexampled miseries, lest I should break into rebellion against thee, or into cruelty towards men.

V. 13. When I say, My couch shall ease my complaint—By giving me sweet and quiet sleep, which may take off the sense of my torments.

V. 14. With dreams—With sad and dreadful dreams, or from the the devil's malice, who by thy permission disturbs me in this manner; so that I am afraid to go to sleep, and my remedy proves as bad as my disease. And terrifiest me through visions—Offered to my sight.

V. 16. My days are vanity—My life is a vain, decaying, and perishing thing, it will of itself quickly vanish and depart, and doth not need to be forced from me by such exquisite torments.

V. 17. What is man, that thou shouldest magnify him—What is there in that poor, mean, contemptible creature called man, miserable man, as this word signifies, which can induce or incline thee to take any notice of him, to shew him such respect, or to make such account of him? man is not worthy of thy favour, and he is below thy anger. It is too great a condescension to thee, and too great an honour for man that thou wilt contend with him, and draw forth all thy forces against him, as if he were a fit match for thee; therefore do not, O Lord, thus dishonour thyself, nor magnify me. And that thou shouldest set thine heart upon him—Have any regard to him so far as to afflict him, which, though it be grievous in itself, especially when it is aggravated as mine is, yet unto thy people it is a great mercy and blessing, as being high-

V. 19. How long wilt thou not depart from me—How long will it be ere thou withdraw thy afflicting hand from me?

V. 20. I have sinned—Although I am innocent and free from those crying sins, for which my friends suppose thou hast sent this uncommon judgment upon me, yet if thou be strict to mark what is amiss, I confess that I am a sinner, and therefore obnoxious to thy justice, and I humbly beg thy pardon for it; and, O let me intreat thee, my God and Redeemer, to accept of this confession. What shall I do unto thee—To satisfy thy justice, or regain thy favour. I can do nothing to purchase or deserve it, and therefore implore thy mercy to pardon my sins. O thou preserver of men—O thou who, as thou wast the Creator of man, delightest to be, and to be called the Preserver and Saviour, and that waitest to be kind and gracious to men: do not deal with me in a way contrary to thy own nature, and to the manner of thy dealing with all the rest of mankind: thou who dost exactly know, and diligently observe, all men's inward motions and outward actions; and therefore if thou shalt be severe to mark mine iniquities, I am without remedy.

V. 21. Why dost thou not take away mine iniquity—Seeing thou art so gracious to others, so ready to preserve and pardon them, why may not I hope for the same favour from thee? For now shall I sleep in the dust—If thou dost not speedily help me, it will be too late, I shall be dead, and so incapable of those blessings which thou usest to give to men in the land of the living.

CHAP. VIII.

V. 2. How long shall the words of thy mouth be like a strong wind—Boisterous and violent, swelling and furious, opposing all persons and things that stand in thy way, not sparing either God or men.

V. 3. Doth God—The mighty God, as this word signifies, the Almighty, or All-sufficient God, as the next name of God here implies. These names are emphatically used, to prove that God cannot deal unjustly or falsly with men, because he hath no need of it, nor temptation to it, being self-sufficient for his own happiness, and hath therefore no need of doing injustice. Pervert judgment—Overthrow the course of justice in giving judgment: No, this is inconsistent with God's nature, which is essentially and necessarily just, and with his office of Governor of the world.

V. 5. If thou—But God hath spared thee, whom he might justly have destroyed with thy children, and thou art yet capable of his favour if thou seek for it: And therefore cease from these causeless and unthankful complaints. Wouldest seek unto God betimes—If thou wouldest seek him speedily, early, and diligently.

V. 6. If thou wert pure and upright—If thou wert in truth what thou pretendest, and hast been thought by others to be, pure and upright—of a sincere heart, and blameless life towards God and men. But God's severe dealing with thee is an evident token, that notwithstanding all thy fair shews, thou art but an hypocrite and secret sinner. Surely now he would awake for thee—Bestir himself to help thee, as being his faithful friend and servant, whom he could not in honour or justice forsake; whereas now he shews a deep sleep, and wholly neglects thee, and turneth a deaf ear to all thy prayers; which sheweth what opinion he hath of thee. The habitation—The concerns of thy house and family. Thy righteousness—Which thou hast got and managed with righteousness; so he calls it by way of supposition; if it were so, God would prosper thee accordingly. But because thou dost not prosper, it gives us cause to suspect that thou hast got thy estate by fraud and oppression.

V. 7. Though what thou hast left be now very small, yet if thou dost repent and seek God it shall vastly increase.

V. 8. Inquire—Of our predecessors about the manner of God's dealings with men. Of the former age, and search of their fathers—Do not slightly, but seriously and industriously search the ancient records.

V. 9. We are but of yesterday—But lately born, and therefore have but little knowledge. Our days are a shadow—This is meant either, 1. Of their lives in particular, which were far shorter than the lives of their ancestors, the Patriarchs, whose long lives gave them opportunity to know and see the course of God's providence towards good and bad men, and the different ends and issues of their lives. Or, 2. Of our lives being short, our observation reacheth but to very few events, in comparison of those which may be known by the records and testimony of former ages.

11 f Lo, he goeth by me, and I ſee him not: he paſſeth on alſo, but I perceive him not.

12 Behold,

V. 13. All that forget God—Wicked men who neglect, forſake, and deſpiſe God, his preſence, commands, worſhip, and providence; and therefore break forth into manifold ſins. The hypocrite's hope ſhall periſh—He ſhall loſe what he hoped for, even uninterrupted and abiding felicity, and with it all hope of reſtitution.

V. 14. Whoſe hope ſhall be cut off—(i. e.) Whoſe wealth and outward glory, which is the matter of his hope and truſt, ſhall be cut off, (i. e.) ſuddenly, and violently taken away from him. Whoſe hope ſhall be irkſome or tedious to him. A ſpider's web—Which though it be formed with great art and induſtry, yet is moſt ſlender, and feeble, and eaſily ſwept down or pulled in pieces, and unable to defend the ſpider that made it. The application is obvious.

V. 15. He ſhall lean upon his houſe—He ſhall truſt to the multitude and ſtrength of his children and ſervants, and to his wealth. But it ſhall not ſtand—Not be able to uphold itſelf, nor him that truſted to it. He ſhall hold it faſt—Not to uphold it, but to ſtrengthen and uphold himſelf by it.

V. 16. He is green—Flouriſheth in the world. Before the ſun—Publicly, and in the view of all men. His branch—His children, which are here mentioned as additions not only to his comfort, but alſo to his ſtrength and ſafety.

V. 18. If he—God, who is the Saviour of good men, and the deſtroyer of the wicked. I have not ſeen thee—The wicked ſhall be ſo utterly extirpated and deſtroyed, that there ſhall be no footſtep, nor name, nor memorial of them left.

V. 20. God will not caſt away a perfect man—He will not deny them his help, he will not ſuffer them to be utterly loſt. Neither will he help the evil-doers—Deliver them out of their troubles: hence it may ſeem that thou, O Job, art not a perfect or upright man, but an evil-doer: But this is certain, if for the future thy heart and way be not perfect, and thou doſt not ceaſe to do evil, thou muſt be utterly and irrecoverably loſt; as on the contrary, if thou doſt repent and reform, he will help and deliver thee, and reſtore thee to thy former glory and happineſs.

V. 21. Till he fill thy mouth with laughing—And what I have ſaid in general of all perfect men, ſhall be made good to thee, if thou be ſuch a one; God will not forſake thee, nor deſiſt from doing thee good; God will give thee ſuch abundant matter of rejoicing, that thy heart ſhall not be able to hold it, but it ſhall break out at thy mouth and lips.

V. 22. The dwelling-place of the wicked ſhall come to nought—God will bring not only them but their houſe, (i. e.) their family and eſtate, to nought.

CHAP. IX.

V. 2. Should man be juſt—To wit, as you ſay, that God is juſt in all his ways, that he doth ordinarily bleſs the righteous, and puniſh the wicked. I know that no man is abſolutely juſt, or can defend his righteouſneſs, if God be ſevere to mark what is amiſs in him. With God—If he be brought before God's tribunal.

V. 3. He cannot anſwer him one of a thouſand—One accuſation which God ſhall produce againſt him: ſo far will he be from being able to maintain his own innocency againſt God, if God ſet himſelf againſt him as his adverſary.

V. 4. Who hath hardened himſelf againſt him and hath proſpered—Obſtinately contended with him, quarrelling with him, oppoſing and reproaching God's providence as hard and unjuſt.

V. 9. Theſe he names as ſtars or conſtellations of greateſt note and eminency; which as they were created by God, ſo are under his government. Arcturus is a northern conſtellation, near that called the Bear, which riſeth to us about the beginning of September; Orion is a more ſoutherly conſtellation, that ariſeth to us in December. The Pleiades is a conſtellation not far from Orion, and near that called the Bull, which we call the Seven Stars: to us it riſeth at the beginning of the ſpring.

V. 11. He goeth—He worketh by his providence in ways of mercy or judgment. By me—In my preſence. And I ſee him not—I ſee the effects, but I cannot underſtand the cauſes or grounds of his actions, for they are incomprehenſible; ſuch is the weakneſs of men's underſtandings, that they cannot ſearch out God's counſels and ways. He paſſeth on alſo—He goeth from place to place, from one action to another, he ſpeaks of God after the manner of men.

V. 12. Behold

V. 12. Behold, he taketh away—If he determine to take away from any man his children, or servants, or estate, as he hath done from me. Who will say unto him, What doest thou—Who is able to restrain him from doing it? Or, who dare presume to reprove him for it? And therefore far be it from me to quarrel with God, whereof you untruly accuse me.

V. 13. The proud helpers—Those men who shall undertake to uphold and defend him whom God intends to punish and destroy; who are fitly called proud helpers, because this is a most proud, and insolent, and presumptuous act to oppose themselves to the Lord God Almighty, and to his counsels and courses, because they give assistance to that man who carries himself proudly towards God, under his correcting hand.

V. 14. How much less shall I answer him—Since no creature whatsoever can resist his power, and no man living can search out or comprehend his counsels and ways; how can I, who am a poor, contemptible, dispirited creature, contend with him?

V. 15. Though I were righteous—Though I had a most just cause, and were not conscious to myself of any sin. Yet would I not answer—I durst not undertake to plead my cause against him; or maintain my integrity before him, because he knows me better than I know myself, and because I am wholly in his hands, and at his mercy. But I would make supplication to my judge—That he would hear me meekly, and judge favourably of me and my cause, and not according to his justice.

V. 17. For he multiplieth my wounds without cause—Not simply without any desert of his, or as if he had no sin in him; for he often declares the contrary, but without any evident or special cause of such singular afflictions.

V. 18. He will not suffer me to take my breath—My pains and miseries are continual, and I have not so much as a breathing-time free from them. But filleth me with bitterness—My afflictions are not only long and uninterrupted, but also exceeding sharp and violent, contrary to the common course of God's providence.

V. 19. If I speak of strength—If my cause were to be decided by power. Lo, he is strong—Stronger than I. If of judgment—If I would contend with him in a way of right. Who shall set me a time to plead—There is no superior judge that can summon him and me together, and appoint us a time of pleading before him, and oblige us both to stand to his sentence.

V. 20. If I justify myself—If I plead against God mine own righteousness and innocency. Mine own mouth shall condemn me—God is so infinitely wise and just, that he will find sufficient matter of condemnation from my own words, though spoken with all possible care and circumspection; or he will discover so much wickedness in me of which I was not aware, that I shall be forced to join with him in condemning myself. If I say, I am perfect—If I were perfect in my own opinion; if I thought myself compleatly righteous and faultless. It shall also prove me perverse—My own mouth shall condemn me.

V. 21. Perfect—If I should think myself perfect, yet I would not know, not acknowledge, my soul; I could not own nor plead before God the integrity of my soul, but would only make supplication to my judge. I would abhor, or condemn my life, I would not trust to the integrity either of my soul and heart, or of my life, so as to justify myself before the pure and piercing eyes of the all-seeing God.

V. 22. In the other things which you have spoken of God's greatness and justice, I do not contend with you; but this one thing I do, and must affirm against you, God sends afflictions promiscuously upon good and bad men.

V. 23. If some common judgment come upon a people, God will be well pleased, to see how the same scourge, which is the perdition of the wicked, is the trial of the innocent, and of their faith, which will be found unto his praise, and honour, and glory.

V. 24. The earth—The dominion over it. Is given into the hand of the wicked—Into their power. As good men are frequently scourged, so the wicked are advanced. Mean-time he covers the faces of wise and good men, and keeps them in obscurity, perhaps suffers them to be condemned, and their faces covered as criminals, by those to whom the earth is given. This is often done: if it be not God that doth it, where and who is he that doth?

V. 25. Now—What he had said of the calamities which God frequently inflicts upon good men, he now exemplifies in himself. My days—The days of my life. Post—Who rides upon swift horses. See—I enjoy no good in them. Seeing is often put for experiencing either good or evil.

V. 26. Eagle—Which flies swiftly, especially when in the sight of his prey. See here how swift the motion of time is! It is always upon the wing, hastening to its period. What little need have we of past times? What great need to redeem time, which runs on so fast toward eternity?

† Heb. but I am not so with myself.

V. 28. Afraid—If my griefs be suspended for a time, yet my fears continue. Will not—I plainly perceive thou, O God, (to whom he makes a sudden address) wilt not clear my innocency by removing those afflictions which make them judge me guilty of some great crime.

V. 29. I shall be used like a wicked man still—Why then should I comfort myself with vain hopes of deliverance, as thou adviseſt me?

V. 30, 31. If—If I clear myself from all imputations, and fully prove my innocency before men. Yet—God would prove him to be a most guilty creature, notwithstanding all his purity before men. Abhor—I shall be so filthy, that my own clothes, if they had any sense in them, would abhor to touch me.

V. 32. A man—But one infinitely superior to me in majesty, and power, and wisdom, and justice. That—That I should presume to debate my cause with him.

V. 33. Days-man—Or, umpire. Lay his hand—Order and govern us, and oblige us to stand to his decision. Our Lord Jesus is now the blessed days-man, who has mediated between heaven and earth, has laid his hand upon both.

V. 34. Fear—The fear and dread of his majesty and justice. Let him not deal with me according to his perfect justice, but according to his grace and clemency.

V. 35. Then—I would speak freely for myself, being freed from that dread, which takes away my spirit and courage. It is not—I am not free from his terror, and therefore cannot plead my cause with him.

V. 2. Do not condemn me—Or, pronounce me not to be a wicked man, neither deal with me as such, as I confess thou mightest do in rigorous justice: O discover my integrity by removing this stroke, for which my friends condemn me. Wherefore—For what ends and reasons, and for what sins; for I am not conscious to myself of any peculiar sins by which I have deserved to be made the most miserable of all men. When God afflicts, he contends with us: when he contends with us, there is always a reason for it. And it is desirable to know what that reason is, that we may forsake whatever he has a controversy with us for: but if we are not shewn or made conscious wherein we have particularly offended God, after we have been made acquainted with that blessedness which they have whose sins are forgiven, it is still our duty and happiness to resign ourselves (in the midst of sufferings, for which we can give no account for the cause) to God, who can never act inconsistent with his own infinite wisdom and love: and they that are acquainted with satan's devices, know how necessary it is to watch and pray against giving way for a moment, to any such thought as that of God's being an hard master, or an unrighteous judge, it being the constant aim of the tempter, to separate the soul from God, by leading it to think of him contrary to his holy nature and will; and when once we are led to think God lays more upon us than is right, we cannot at the same time put our trust in him; and not trusting in him, as we are required and encouraged to do, against all appearances, we are then left without that help and support which God hath promised to faith; and thus is the end of the deceiver of mankind answered, when he thus betrays them into unbelief. I will trust in thee though thou shouldest slay me, is the language of all them to whom God is all in all; and it is their prayer, that this may be the constant temper of their minds, when they can in no wise discover why it is that they are left in such a state of mind, in such difficulties and sufferings, or exposed to the treatment they meet with at the hands of others; and they dare not allow themselves to apply their reason to judge of the Almighty's government, which they know reason is altogether insufficient to comprehend: but by faith they are assured that God is love, and that he is the Saviour of all them that believe in him; and in thus believing, they are satisfied that his will should be done, whatever it may call them to pass through in their way to that glory where all shall reign with him who are faithful unto death.

V. 3. Good—Dost thou take any pleasure in it? Far be it from Job, to think that God did him wrong. But he is at a loss to reconcile his providences with his justice. And so other good men have often been, and will be, until the day shall declare it, and make it appear to angels and to the spirits of all flesh, that all that God did or suffered to be done, was only such as became infinite wisdom and love, or that justice against which, they that have rejected the last offers of his mercy, will never be able to raise one just complaint.

V. 4. Eyes of flesh—No. Eyes of flesh cannot see in the dark: but darkness hideth not from God. Eyes of flesh are but in one place at a time, and can see but a little way. But the eyes of the Lord are in every place, and run to and fro through the whole earth. Eyes of flesh will shortly be darkned by age, and shut up by death. But the eyes of God are ever the same, nor does his sight ever decay. As man—Man sees the outside only, and judges by appearances: but thou seest mine heart.

V. 5. Man's—Man's time is short and uncertain, and therefore he must improve it: but thou art eternal, and seest at one view all men's hearts, and all their actions present and to come; and therefore thou dost not need to proceed with me in this manner, by making so long a scrutiny into my heart and life.

V. 6. Searcheſt—Keeping me ſo long upon the rack, to compel me to accuſe myſelf.

V. 7. Wicked—An hypocrite, as my friends account me. Deliver—But thou art the ſupreme ruler of the world; therefore I muſt wait thy time, and throw myſelf on thy mercy, in ſubmiſſion to thy ſovereign will.

V. 9. Clay—As a potter makes a veſſel of clay; ſo this may note both the frailty of man's nature, which of itſelf decays and periſhes, and doth not need ſuch violent ſhocks to overthrow it; and the excellency of the divine art commended from the meanneſs of the materials; which is an argument why God ſhould not deſtroy it. Again—I muſt die by the courſe of nature, and therefore while I do live, give me ſome eaſe and comfort.

V. 12. Life—Thou didſt not only give me a curious body, but alſo a reaſonable ſoul: thou didſt at firſt give me life, and then maintain it in me. Favour—Thou didſt not give mere life, but many other favours, ſuch as nouriſhment by the breaſt, education, knowledge, and inſtruction. Viſitation—The care of thy providence watching over me for my good, and viſiting me in mercy. Preſerved—My life, which is liable to manifold dangers, if God did not watch over us every day and moment. Thou haſt hitherto done great things for me, given me life, and the bleſſings of life, and daily deliverances: and wilt thou now undo all that thou haſt done? And ſhall I, who have been ſuch an eminent monument of thy mercy, now be a ſpectacle of thy vengeance?

V. 13. Hid—Both thy former favours and thy preſent frowns. Both are according to thy own will, and therefore undoubtedly conſiſtent, however they ſeem. When God does what we cannot account for, we are bound to believe there are good reaſons for it hid in his heart. It is not with us, or in our reach, to aſſign the cauſe; but I know this is with thee; it is thy doing, and therefore the duty of thy poor ſinful creatures, whom thou haſt redeemed from deſtruction, to receive the ſame with entire devotion to thy will.

V. 15. Confuſion—I am confounded within myſelf, not knowing what to ſay or do. Let my extremity move thee to pity, and help me.

V. 16. Lion—Which hunteth after his prey with great eagerneſs, and when he overtakes it, falls upon it with great fury. Returneſt—The lion tears its prey ſpeedly, and ſo ends its torments; but thou reneweſt my calamities again and again, and makeſt my plagues wonderful both for kind and extremity, and continuance.

V. 17. Witneſſes—Thy judgments, which are the evidences both of my ſins, and of thy wrath. Indignation—My miſeries, the effects of thine anger. Changes may denote the various kinds, and an army the great number of his afflictions.

CHAP. XI.

V. 1. Then anſwered—Zophar charges Job with falſhood and pride; wiſhes that God would convince him of his wiſdom, juſtice, and unſearchable perfections; of his ſovereignty, power, and the cognizance he takes of men; he aſſures him, that, on his repentance, God would reſtore him to proſperity, but that the wicked ſhould periſh. How hard is it to preſerve calmneſs in the heat of diſputation? Eliphaz began modeſtly: Bildad was a little rougher: But Zophar falls upon Job with the greateſt ſeverity, and they that are inclined ſo to do, find it an eaſy thing in their own eſteem, to ſhew that thoſe are guilty whom they are already inclined to think ſo.

V. 3. Lies—Both concerning thy own innocency, and concerning the counſels and ways of God. Mockeſt—Our friendly and faithful counſels.

V. 4. Doctrine—Concerning God and his providence. Clean—I am innocent before God; I have not ſinned either by my former actions, or by my preſent expreſſions. But Zophar perverts Job's words, for he did not deny that he was a ſinner, but only denied that he was an hypocrite.

c Prov. 14. 2.

V. 6. Thou doſt raſhly in judging ſo harſhly of God's proceedings with thee, becauſe thou doſt not comprehend the reaſons of them, and in judging thyſelf innocent, becauſe thou doſt not ſee thy ſins; whereas God ſees innumerable ſins in thee.

V. 7. Find out—Diſcover all the depths of his wiſdom, and the reaſons of his actions?

V. 10. Who can hinder him—Or, who can contradict him, charge him with injuſtice in ſuch proceedings?

V. 11. Knoweth—Though men know but little of God, yet God knows man exactly. He knoweth that every man in the world is guilty of much vanity and folly, and therefore ſeeth ſufficient reaſon for his ſeverity againſt the beſt men. Wickedneſs—He perceiveth the wickedneſs of evil men, though it be covered with the veil of religion. Conſider—Shall he only ſee it as an idle ſpectator, and not obſerve it as a judge to puniſh it?

V. 12. Man—That, ſince the fall is void of all true wiſdom, pretends to be wiſe, and able to paſs a cenſure upon God's ways and works.

V. 13. Heart—To ſeek God; turning thy bold contentions with God into humble ſupplications.

V. 15. Lift up—Which denotes cheerfulneſs, and holy boldneſs. Without ſpot—Having a clear and unſpotted conſcience. Stedfaſt—Shall have a ſtrong and comfortable aſſurance of God's favour.

V. 16. As waters—Thou ſhalt remember it no more than men remember a land-flood, which as it comes, ſo it goes away ſuddenly.

V. 17. Shine—Light in Scripture commonly ſignifies proſperity and glory. Thy comfort, like the morning light, ſhall ſhine brighter and brighter until the perfect day.

V. 18. Secure—Thy mind ſhall be quiet and free from terrors, becauſe thou ſhalt have a firm and well-grounded confidence in God.

CHAP. XII.

V. 1. Job blames his friends for their unkind behaviour; ſhews that the wicked often proſper; confirms and enlarges upon what had been ſaid, of the wiſdom, power, and providence of God.

V. 2. Ye—You have engroſſed all the reaſon of mankind. All the wiſdom which is in the world lives in you, and will be utterly loſt when you die. When wiſe and good men die, it is a comfort to think that wiſdom and goodneſs do not die with them: God has the reſidue of the ſpirit, and can raiſe up others equally or more fit to do his work.

V. 3. But—In theſe things, which he ſpeaks not in a way of boaſting, but for the juſt vindication both of himſelf, and of that cauſe of God, which for the ſubſtance of it he maintained rightly, as God himſelf afterwards atteſts. Such things—The truth is, neither you nor I have any reaſon to be puffed up with our knowledge of theſe things: for the moſt barbarous nations know that God is infinite in wiſdom, and power, and juſtice. But this is not the queſtion between you and me.

V. 4. Upon God—Even by my religious neighbours, by thoſe who call upon God, and not in vain; whoſe prayers therefore I covet, not their reproaches. The juſt—I, who, notwithſtanding all their hard cenſures, dare ſtill own it, that through God's grace I am an upright man.

V. 5. Slip with his feet—And fall into trouble; though he had formerly ſhone as a lamp, he is then looked upon as a lamp going out, as the ſnuff of a candle, which we throw to the ground and tread upon; and accordingly is deſpiſed in the thought of him that is at eaſe.

V. 6. Are ſecure—Job's friends had all ſuppoſed, that wicked men cannot proſper long in the world. This Job oppoſes, and maintains, that God herein acts as ſovereign, and reſerves that exact diſtribution of rewards and puniſhments for the final day.

V. 9. Lord—This is the only time that we meet with the name Jehovah in all the discourses between Job and his friends. They commonly call God by the name of Shaddai, the Almighty.

V. 10. In whose hand is the breath of all mankind——God, who gave life to all, is the constant support of it in all that breathe, and it is at his pleasure that the living return to the dust of the earth: How immediately therefore doth all human concerns depend on God?

V. 11. Doth not—This may be a preface to his following discourse; whereby he invites them to hear and judge of his words impartially.

V. 12. Wisdom—These words contain a concession of what Bildad had said, and a joining with him in that appeal; but withal, an intimation that this wisdom was but imperfect, and liable to many mistakes; and therefore that antiquity ought not to be received against the truths of God.

V. 13. With him—God. Is wisdom—He is the sole fountain of it, and without him none are or can be wise, or good, or happy.

V. 14. No opening—Without God's permission. Yea, he shuts up in the grave, and none can break open those sealed doors. He shuts up the finally impenitent in hell, in chains of darkness, and none can pass that great gulph.

V. 15. The waters—Which are reserved in the clouds, that they may not fall upon the earth. They—The waters upon the earth, springs, and brooks, and rivers. As at the time of the general deluge, to which here is a manifest allusion.

V. 16. The deceived and the deceiver are his—Wholly subject to his disposal. He governs the deceiver and sets bounds to his deceits, how far they shall extend; he also over-rules all this to his own glory, and the accomplishment of his righteous designs of trying the good, and punishing wicked men, by giving them up to believe lies. Yet God is not the author of any error or sin, but only the wise and holy governor of all those that fear him, as well as those that fear him not.

V. 17. Spoiled—The wise statesmen, by whom the affairs of kings and kingdoms are ordered, he leadeth away, as captives in triumph, being spoiled either of that wisdom which they had, or seemed to have; or of that power and dignity which they had enjoyed. Fools—By discovering their folly, and turning their own unjust and self-confident counsels to their ruin.

V. 18. Looseth—He freeth subjects from the power and authority of kings, whom he not only deposes from their thrones, but brings them into slavery; that it may appear to all, that all power belongeth to God, that all may fear him and work righteousness.

V. 20. The speech—By taking away or restraining the gift of utterance from them. Or, by taking away their understanding which should direct their speech. Trusty—Of those wise and experienced persons that were trusted by the greatest princes.

V. 22. Darkness—The most secret counsels of princes, which are contrived and carried on in the dark.

V. 23. Nations—What hitherto he said of princes, he now applies to nations, whom God does either increase or diminish as he pleases.

V. 25. Grope—Thus are the revolutions of kingdoms brought about by an over-ruling Providence. Heaven and earth are shaken: but the Lord remaineth a king for ever.

CHAP. XIII.

V. 1. Lo—All this which either you or I have discoursed concerning the infinite power and wisdom of God, I know, both by seeing it, by my own observation and experience, and by hearing it from my ancestors.

Before Christ cir. 1520.

8 Will ye accept his perſon? will ye contend for God?

V. 8. Accept—Not judging according to the right of the cauſe, but the quality of the perſon.

V. 12. Remembrances—Mouldering and coming to nothing. And the conſideration of our mortality ſhould make us afraid of offending God.

V. 14. Wherefore—And this may be a reaſon of his deſire of liberty of ſpeech, becauſe he could hold his tongue no longer. The phraſe having his life in his hand, denotes a condition extremely dangerous.

V. 22. Then—This propoſal ſavoured of ſelf-confidence, and of irreverence towards God; for which, and the like ſpeeches, he is afterwards reproved by God.

V. 23. My ſin—That I am a ſinner I confeſs; but not that I am guilty of ſuch crimes as my friends ſuppoſe; if it be ſo, do thou, O Lord, diſcover it.

V. 25. Leaf—One that can no more reſiſt thy power, than a leaf, or a little dry ſtraw can reſiſt the wind or fire.

V. 26. Writeſt—Thou appointeſt or inflicteſt. A metaphor from princes or judges, who uſed to write their ſentences.

V. 28. He—He ſpeaks of himſelf in the third perſon, as is uſual in this and other ſacred books. So the ſenſe is, he, this poor frail creature, this body of mine; which poſſibly he pointed at with his finger, conſumeth or pineth away.

V. 2. Flower—The flower is fading, and all its beauty ſoon withers and is gone. The ſhadow is fleeting, and its very being will ſoon be loſt in the ſhadows of night.

V. 4. Not one—No man. This is the prerogative of thy grace, to tranſform the ſinful human mind, which therefore I humbly implore.

V. 5. Determined

Before Christ cir. 1520.

5 [d] Seeing his days are determined, the number of his months are with thee, thou haſt appointed his bounds that he cannot paſs.

6 [e] Turn from him that he may ‡ reſt, till he ſhall accompliſh, [f] as an hireling his day.

9 Yet through the ſcent of water it will bud, and bring forth boughs like a plant.

10 But man dieth, and § waſteth away: yea, man giveth up the ghoſt, and where is he?

13 O that thou wouldeſt hide me in the grave, that thou wouldeſt keep me ſecret, until thy wrath be paſt, that thou wouldeſt appoint me a ſet time, and remember me!

14 If a man die, ſhall he live again? all the days of my appointed time, [i] will I wait, [k] till my change come.

15 Thou ſhalt call, and I will anſwer thee: thou wilt have a deſire to the work of thine hands.

V. 6. Turn—Withdraw thine afflicting hand from him, that he may have ſome preſent eaſe. Till—He come to the period of his life, which thou haſt allotted to him, as a man appoints a ſet time to an hired ſervant.

V. 10. Man—Two words are here uſed for man. Geber, a mighty man, though mighty, dies. Adam, a man of earth, returns to it. Before death he is dying daily, continually waſting away. In death, he giveth up the ghoſt, the ſpirit returns to God that gave it. After death, where is he? Not where he was: his place knows him no more. But is he no where? Yes, he is gone to the world of ſpirits, gone into eternity, gone, never to return to this world!

V. 11. As—So it is with man, as when the waters fail from the ſea, which, by the heat of the ſun, is daily ſending up pure ſupplies of water to the clouds, and theſe, driven by the wind, fall down in rain upon the earth; the ſea thus being the great fountain of ſprings and rivers as God is the fountain of life, which can no more continue, than the rivers to run when the ſea ſhall, by the will of the great Governor of all things, ceaſe or fail to ſend up the water, with which they are all ſupplied.

V. 12. Lieth—In his bed, the grave. Till—Until the time of the reſurrection, when theſe viſible heavens ſhall paſs away.

V. 13. The grave—The grave is not only a reſting place, but an hiding-place to the children of God. Hide me there, not only from the ſtorms, of this life, but for the glory of a better. Until thy wrath be paſt—As long as our bodies lie in the grave, there are ſome fruits of God's wrath againſt ſin: until the ſet time comes, for their being remembered, as Noah was remembered in the ark.

V. 14. Shall he live again—Yes, and live for ever both ſoul and body: all that come into life muſt go down to the grave, and all that die muſt live again; and they that have lived and died in the neglect of that great ſalvation for which they came into life, will, by an everlaſting power, be compelled to come forth from the grave and reap as they have ſown: whilſt they that have made their calling and election ſure, will ariſe in the glorious likeneſs of their Redeemer, and with immortal joy meet him in the air, and be for ever with their Lord.

V. 15. Anſwer thee—Thou ſhalt call my ſoul to thyſelf: and I will cheerfully anſwer, Here I am: knowing thou wilt have a deſire to the work of thy hands—A love for the ſoul which thou haſt made, and by thy grace created a new, and ſealed with thine own holy image.

V. 16. Numbereſt——Thou makeſt a ſtrict inquiry into all my actions.

V. 17. Sealed—As writings or other choice things, that they may all be brought forth upon occaſion, and not one of them forgotten; till they are blotted out for the ſake of the Son of thy love, for which merciful purpoſe thou haſt commanded, invited, and intreated all to believe, that for his ſake thou ever waiteſt to be gracious to the chief of ſinners.

V. 18. And—As all things are ſubject to decay and periſh, ſo in like manner, thou deſtroyeſt the hope of man: when man dies, all hope of his living again in this world is for ever loſt.

V. 20. Prevaileſt—When once thou takeſt away this life, it is gone for ever. Sendeſt—To his eternal home.

i Psa. 90. 12.

21 * A dreadful sound is in his ears; [k] in prosperity the destroyer shall come upon him.

* Heb. A sound of fears. k 1 Thess. 5. 3.

22 He believeth not that he shall return out of darkness, and he is waited for of the sword.

23 He [l] wandereth abroad for bread, saying, Where is it? he knoweth that [m] the day of darkness is ready at his hand.

l Psal. 59. 15. & 109. 10. m Chap. 18. 12.

24 Trouble and anguish shall make him afraid; they shall prevail against him, as a king ready to the battle.

25 For he stretcheth out his hand against God, and strengtheneth himself against the Almighty.

26 He runneth upon him, even on his neck,

V. 4. Castest off—The fear of God, piety, and religion, by thy unworthy speeches of God, and by those false and pernicious principles, that God makes no difference between good and bad in the course of his providence, but equally prospers or afflicts both; thou dost that which tends to the subversion of the fear and worship of God. Restrainest prayer—Thou dost by thy words and principles, as far as in thee lies, banish prayer out of the world, by making it useless.

V. 5. Uttereth—Thy words discover the naughtiness of thy heart. Crafty—Thou speakest wickedly, and craftily: thou covereſt thy impious principles with fair pretences of piety.

V. 11. Are—Are those comforts, which we have propounded to thee on condition of thy repentance, small and contemptable in thine eyes? Secret—Hast thou any secret and peculiar way of comfort which is unknown to us, and to all other men?

V. 12. Why—Why dost thou suffer thyself to be transported by the pride of thine heart, to use such unworthy expressions?

V. 13. Against God—Eliphaz here does in effect give the cause on satan's side, and affirms that Job had done as he said he would, Curse God to his face.

V. 15. Saints—The angels that dwell in heaven; heaven being put for its inhabitants. None of these are pure, simply and perfectly, and comparatively to God.

V. 16. Who—Who besides his natural proneness to sin, has contracted habits of sinning; and sins as freely, as greedily as men drink up water.

V. 17. I—I will prove what I have affirmed, that such sufferings as thine are peculiar to hypocrites. Seen—I speak not by hear-say, but from my own experience.

V. 18. Hid—They judged it to be so certain and important a truth, that they would not conceal it in their own breasts.

V. 19. To whom—By the gracious gift of God: this he alledges to make their testimony more considerable, because these were no obscure men, but the most worthy and famous men in their ages; and to confute what Job had said, that the earth was given into the hand of the wicked. By the earth he means the dominion and possession of it. Passed—Through their land, so as to disturb, or spoil them, as the Sabeans and Chaldeans did thee. God watched over those holy men so, that no enemy could invade them; and so he would have done over thee, if thou hadst been such an one.

V. 20. Pain—Lives a life of care, and fear, and grief, by reason of God's wrath. Hidden—He knows not how short the time of his life is, and therefore lives in continual fear of loosing it.

V. 21. A sound—Even when he feels no evil, he is tormented with perpetual fears. Come upon him—Suddenly and unexpectedly.

V. 22. Believeth not—When he falls into trouble, he despairs of deliverance, by reason of his guilty conscience. Waited for—Besides the calamity which is upon him, he is in constant expectation of greater; the sword is used for any grievous affliction.

V. 23. Knoweth—From his own guilty conscience.

V. 25. For—Now he gives the reason of all the fore-mentioned calamities, which was his great wickedness. Against God—He sinned against God with an high hand. The Almighty—Which aggravates the madness of those that durst fight against the omnipotent God.

V. 26. He—The wicked man acts in opposition to God, both to his precepts and providences.

V. 27. Because

28 And he dwelleth in deſolate cities, and in houſes which no man inhabiteth, which are ready to become heaps.

29 He ſhall not be rich, neither ſhall his ſubſtance continue, neither ſhall he prolong the perfection thereof upon the earth.

30 He ſhall not depart out of darkneſs, the flame ſhall dry up his branches, and [o] by the breath of his mouth ſhall he go away.

THEN Job anſwered and ſaid,

2 I have heard many ſuch things: * [a] miſerable comforters are ye all.

* Or, troubleſome. a Chap. 13. 4.

3 Shall † vain words have an end? or what emboldeneth thee that thou anſwereſt?

† Heb. words of wind.

12 I was at eaſe, but he hath broken me aſunder: he hath alſo taken me by my neck, and ſhaken me to pieces, and [g] ſet me up for his mark.

g Chap. 7. 20.

13 His archers compaſs me round about, he cleaveth my reins aſunder, and doth not ſpare; he poureth out my gall upon the ground.

14 He breaketh me with breach upon breach, he runneth upon me like a giant.

15 I have ſewed ſackcloth upon my ſkin, and [h] defiled my horn in the duſt.

h Chap. 30. 9.

16 My face is foul with weeping, and on my eye-lids is the ſhadow of death:

V. 27. Becauſe—This is mentioned as the reaſon of his inſolent carriage towards God, becauſe he was fat, rich, potent, and ſucceſsful. His great proſperity made him proud and ſecure, and regardleſs of God and men. Fat—His only care is to pamper himſelf.

V. 28. But—This is oppoſed to the proſperity laſt mentioned, and is the beginning of the deſcription of his miſery.

V. 29. Subſtance——What he had gotten ſhall be taken from him.

V. 30. Depart—His miſery ſhall have no end. Flame—God's anger and judgment upon him. Branches—His wealth, and power, and glory, wherewith he was encompaſſed, as trees are with their branches. His mouth—And this expreſſion intimates, with how much eaſe God ſubdueth his enemies: his word, his blaſt; one act of his will is ſufficient.

V. 31. Vanity—In the vain and deceitful things of this world.

V. 32. Accompliſhed——That vanity ſhould be his recompence. Before—When by the courſe of nature and common providence he might have continued much longer.

CHAP. XVI.

V. 2. Such things——Theſe things are but vulgar and trivial. And ſo are all creatures, to a ſoul under deep conviction of ſin, or the arreſt of death.

V. 3. End—When wilt thou put an end to theſe diſcourſes?

V. 7. He—God, as appears by the following words. Weary—Either of complaining, or, of my life. Deſolate——Haſt turned my ſociety into deſolation, and turned the few friends that have been left me into enemies, and ſuch as add weight to my ſorrows.

V. 9. Eyes—Looks upon me with a fierce eye, as enraged perſons uſe to do.

V. 10. They—My friends. Gaped—Opened their mouths wide againſt me. In all this Job was a type of Chriſt. Theſe very expreſſions are uſed in the predictions of his ſufferings, (Pſal. xxii. 13.) They gaped upon me with their mouths, and (Mic. v. 1.) They ſhall ſmite the judge of Iſrael upon the cheek.

V. 11. The wicked—And thus Chriſt was delivered into wicked hands, by the determinate counſel of God.

V. 12. Shaken—As a mighty man doth with ſome ſtrippling, when he wreſtleth with him. Mark—That he may ſhoot all his arrows in me.

V. 13. His archers—Whoever are our enemies, we muſt look on them as God's archers, and ſee him directing the arrow.

V. 15. I have—So far am I from ſtretching out my hands againſt God, that I have humbled myſelf deeply under his hand. I have not only put on ſackcloth, but ſewed it on, as being reſolved to continue my humiliation as long as my affliction continues. Defiled my horn—I have willingly parted with all my wealth, and power, and glory, (as the horn often ſignifies in ſcripture) and been content to lie in the duſt.

Before Christ cir. 1520.

17 Not for any injuſtice in mine hands: alſo my prayer is pure.

18 O earth, cover not thou my blood, and [i] let my cry have no place.

19 Alſo now behold my witneſs is in heaven, and my record is * on high.

20 My friends † ſcorn me: but mine eye poureth out tears unto God.

21 [k] O that one might plead for a man with God, as a man pleadeth for his ‡ neighbour!

22 When † a few years are come, then I ſhall go the way whence I ſhall not return.

CHAP. XVII.

MY ‡ breath is corrupt, my days are extinct, the graves are ready for me.

2 Are there not mockers with me? and doth not mine eye † continue in their provocation?

3 Lay down now, put me in a ſurety with thee; who is he that [a] will ſtrike hands with me?

4 For thou haſt hid their heart from underſtanding: therefore ſhalt thou not exalt them.

5 He that ſpeaketh flattery to his friends, even the eyes of his children ſhall fail.

6 He hath made me alſo [b] a by-word of the people, and ‡ aforetime I was as a tabret.

7 [c] Mine eye alſo is dim by reaſon of ſorrow, and all § my members are as a ſhadow.

8 Upright men ſhall be aſtoniſhed at this, and the innocent ſhall ſtir up himſelf againſt the hypocrite.

9 The righteous alſo ſhall hold on his way, and he that hath clean hands ‖ ſhall be ſtronger and ſtronger.

10 But as for you all, [d] do you return, and come now: for I cannot find one wiſe man among you.

11 [e] My days are paſt, my purpoſes are broken off, even * the thoughts of my heart.

12 They change the night into day: the light is † ſhort, becauſe of darkneſs.

13 If I wait, the grave is mine houſe: I have made my bed in the darkneſs.

14 I have § ſaid to corruption, Thou art my father: to the worm, Thou art my mother, and my ſiſter.

15 And where is now my hope? as for my hope, who ſhall ſee it?

V. 18. Earth—The earth is ſaid to cover that blood, which lies undiſcovered and unrevenged: but, ſaith Job, if I be guilty of deſtroying any man, let the earth diſcloſe it; let it be brought to light. Cry—Let the cry of my complaints to men, or prayers to God, find no place if this be true.

V. 19. Witneſs—Beſides the witneſs of my conſcience, God is witneſs of my integrity.

V. 22. Go—To the ſtate and place of the dead, whence men cannot return to this life. The meaning is, my death haſtens, and therefore I earneſtly deſire that the cauſe depending, between me and my friends, may be determined, that if I be guilty of theſe things, I may bear the ſhame of it before all men; and if I be innocent, that I may ſee my own integrity, and the credit of religion, (which ſuffers upon this occaſion) vindicated. How very certainly, and how very ſhortly are we likewiſe to go this journey?

CHAP. XVII.

V. 1. The graves—He ſpeaks of the ſepulchres of his fathers, to which he muſt be gathered. The graves where they are laid, are ready for me alſo, the grave is ever ready for us: and if the grave be ready for us, how much does it concern us to be ready for the grave?

V. 2. Are not—Do not my friends, inſtead of comforting, mock me?

V. 3. Surety—Theſe words contain an humble deſire to God that he would be his ſurety, or appoint him a ſurety who ſhould maintain his righteous cauſe againſt his oppoſers. Strike hands—Be ſurety to me; whereof that was the uſual token.

V. 4. Hid—Thou haſt blinded the minds of my friends: therefore I deſire a more wiſe and able judge. Therefore—Thou wilt not give them the victory over me in this conteſt, but wilt make them aſhamed of their confidence.

V. 7. As a ſhadow—I am grown ſo poor and thin, that I am not to be called a man, but the ſhadow of a man.

V. 8. Aſtoniſhed—At the depth and myſteriouſneſs of God's judgments, which fall on innocent men, while the worſt of men proſper. Yet—Notwithſtanding all theſe ſufferings of good men, and the aſtoniſhment occaſioned by them, he ſhall the more zealouſly oppoſe thoſe hypocrites, who make theſe ſtrange providences of God an objection to religion.

V. 10. Come—And renew the debate, as I ſee you are reſolved to do.

V. 11. My days—The days of my life, I am a dying man, and therefore the hopes you give me of the bettering of my condition, are vain. Purpoſes—Which I had in my proſperous days, concerning myſelf and children: and how will every purpoſe appear as nothing, which had not the glory of God and eternity in view, when we come to take leave of this world, and are about to enter upon an endleſs and unchangeable life?

V. 13. Wait—For deliverance, I ſhould be diſappointed; for I am upon the borders of the grave, I expect no reſt but in the dark grave, for which, therefore, I prepare myſelf. I endeavour to make it eaſy, by keeping my conſcience pure, and by looking beyond it to the reſurrection unto everlaſting life, through Chriſt my Redeemer.

V. 14. Corruption—To the pit of corruption, the grave. Father—I am near a kin to thee, and thou wilt receive and keep me in thy houſe, as parents do their children.

V. 15. Hope—The happineſs you would have me expect.

V. 16. They——My hopes, of which he ſpake in the ſingular number, ver. 15. which he here changes into the plural, as is uſual in theſe poetical books. Bars—Into the innermoſt parts of the pit: my hopes are dying, and will be buried in my grave.

comforts. Crown——All my power, and laid my honour in the dust.

V. 10. Every side—In all respects, my person, and family, and estate. Gone—I am as a lost and dead man. Hope—All my hopes of the present life, but not of the life to come. Tree——Which being once plucked up by the roots, never grows again. Hope in this life is a perishing thing. But the hope of good men, when it is cut off from this world, is but removed like a tree, transplanted from this nursery to the garden of God.

V. 12. Troops—My afflictions, which are God's soldiers marching under his conduct. Raise—Cast up a trench round about me.

V. 13. Estranged—As we must eye the hand of God, in all the injuries we receive from our enemies, so likewise in all the slights and unkindnesses we receive from our friends.

V. 15. Maids—Who, by reason of their sex, commonly have more compassionate hearts than men.

V. 18. Arose——From my seat, to shew my respect to them, though they were my inferiors.

V. 19. Inward—My intimates and confidents, to whom I imparted all my thoughts and counsels—my spiritual friends with whom I used to take sweet counsel as to things of God.

V. 21. Touched me—My spirit is touched with a sense of his wrath, a calamity of all others the most grievous.

V. 22. As God——As if you had the same infinite knowledge which God hath, whereby you can search my heart and know my hypocrisy, and the same sovereign authority to say and do what you please with me.

V. 23. My words—The words which I am now about to speak. And that which Job wished for, God granted him. His words are written in God's book; so that wherever that book is read, there shall this glorious confession be declared, for a memorial of him.

V. 24. Lead——Anciently they used to grave the letters in a stone with an iron tool, and then to fill up the cuts with lead, that the words might be more plainly seen.

V. 25. For—This is the reason of his confidence in the goodness of his cause, and his willingness to have the matter depending between him and his friends, published and submitted to any trial, because he had a living and powerful Redeemer to plead his cause, and to give sentence for him. My Redeemer—In whom I have a particular interest. The word Goel, here used, properly agrees to Jesus Christ: for this word is primarily used of the next kinsman, whose office it was to redeem by a price paid, the sold or mortgaged estate of his deceased kinsman; to revenge his death, and to maintain his name and honour, by raising up seed to him. All which agrees to Christ, who is our nearest kinsman and brother, as having taken our nature upon him; who hath redeemed that everlasting inheritance which our first parents had utterly lost, by the price of his own blood; and hath revenged the death of mankind upon the great contriver of it, the devil. And it is observed, that after these expressions, we meet not with such impatient or despairing passages, as we had before; which shews that they had inspired him with new life and comfort. Latter day—At the day of the general resurrection and judgment, which, as those holy patriarchs well knew, and firmly believed, was to be at the end of the world. The earth—The place upon which Christ shall appear and stand at the last day in which his saints and members lie or sleep, whom he will raise out of it. And therefore he is said to stand upon the dust, or the grave, or death; because then he will put that, among other enemies, under his feet.

V. 26. Though——Though my skin is now in a great measure consumed, and the rest of it, together with this body, shall be devoured by the worms, which may seem to make my case desperate. Flesh—Or with bodily eyes; my flesh or body being raised from the grave, and re-united to my soul. God——The same whom he called his Redeemer, who having taken flesh, and appearing in his flesh or body with and for Job upon the earth, might well be seen with his bodily eyes. Nor is this understood of a simple seeing of him; but of that glorious and beautifying vision of God, which is promised to all that believe in him.

V. 4. Is—I do not make my complaint to, or expect relief from you, but from God only: I am pouring forth my complaints to God. If—If my complaint were to man, have I not cause?

V. 5. Mark—Consider what I am about to say concerning the prosperity of the worst of men, and the pressures of some good men, and it is able to fill you with astonishment. Lay—Be silent.

V. 6. Remember—The very remembrance of what is past, fills me with dread and horror.

V. 11. Their children dance—This is one mark of the wicked.

V. 13. They spend their days in mirth—Another mark of those that forget God, and misapply that time which was given them to prepare for eternity.

V. 14. Therefore—Because of their constant prosperity. Say—Sometimes in words, but commonly in their thoughts and the language of their lives.

V. 16. Lo—But wicked men have no reason to reject God because of their prosperity, for their wealth is not in their hand; neither obtained nor kept by their own might, therefore I am far from approving their opinion, or following their course.

V. 24. Flee—From the sword or spear; and so shall think himself out of danger.

V. 25. It—The arrow, that came out of his body. Terrors—The terrors of death; because he perceived his wound was incurable.

V. 26. Darkness—All sorts of miseries. Hid—Or, laid up; by God for him. Secret—In those places where he confidently hopes to hide himself from all evil: even there God shall find him out. Not blown—By man, but kindled by God himself. He thinks by his might and violence to secure himself from men, but God will find him out. With him—With his family, who shall inherit his curse as well as his estate.

V. 27. Heaven——God shall be a swift witness against him by extraordinary judgments; still he reflects upon Job's case, and the fire from heaven. Earth—All creatures upon earth shall conspire to destroy him. If the God of heaven and earth be his enemy, neither heaven nor earth will shew him any kindness, but all the host of both are, and will be, at war with him.

V. 28. Increase of his house—His estate. Depart——Shall be lost. Flow—Like waters, swiftly and strongly, and so as to return no more.

V. 29. Heritage—So called, to denote the assurance of it, that it is as firm as an inheritance to the right heir.

V. 20. See—He shall be destroyed; as to see death, is to die.

V. 21. For, &c.—What delight can ye take in the thoughts of his posterity, when he is dying an untimely death?

V. 22. Teach God—How to govern the world: For so you do, while you tell him that he must not afflict the godly, nor give the wicked prosperity. That he must invariably punish the wicked, and reward the righteous in this world. No: he will act as sovereign, and with great variety in his providential dispensations. High——The highest persons, on earth, he exactly knows them, and gives sentence concerning them, as he sees fit.

V. 25. Another—Another wicked man. So there is a great variety of God's dispensations; he distributes great prosperity to one, and great afflictions to another, according to his wise, but secret, counsel.

V. 26. Alike—All these worldly differences are ended by death, and they lie in the grave without any distinction. So that no man can tell who is good, and who is bad by events which befall them in this life. And if one wicked man die in a palace, and another in a dungeon, they will meet where the worm that dieth not, and the fire that is not quenched, will be the same to both: which makes those differences inconsiderable, and not worth perplexing ourselves about.

V. 27. Me—I know that your discourses, though they be of wicked men in general, yet are particularly levelled at me.

V. 29. Them——Any person that passes along the high-way, every one you meet with. It is so vulgar a thing, that no man of common sense is ignorant of it. Tokens—The examples of this truth, which they that go by the way can produce.

V. 30. They—He speaks of the same person; only the singular number is changed into the plural, possibly to intimate, that although for the present only some wicked men were punished, yet then all of them should suffer. Brought—As malefactors are brought forth from prison to execution.

V. 32. And——The pomp of his death shall be suitable to the glory of his life. Brought——With pomp and state, as the word signifies. Grave——To an honourable and eminent grave: He shall not die a violent but a natural death.

V. 33. Valley—Of the grave, which is low and deep like a valley. Sweet—He shall sweetly rest in his grave. Draw—All that live after him, whether good or bad, shall follow him to the grave. He is figuratively said to draw them, because they come after him, as if they were drawn by his example.

V. 34. How—Why then do you seek to comfort me with vain hopes of recovering my prosperity, seeing your grounds are false, and experience shews, that good men are often in great tribulation, while the vilest of men prosper?

CHAP. XXII.

V. 2. Can—Why dost thou insist so much upon thy own righteousness, as if thou didst oblige God by it.

V. 3. Is it—Such a pleasure as he needs for his own happiness. We are undone, for ever undone without him: but he is happy, for ever happy without us.

V. 4. Reprove—Punish thee. Because he is afraid, lest if he should let thee alone, thou wouldst grow too great and powerful for him: surely no. As thy righteousness cannot profit him, so thy wickedness can do him no hurt.

V. 5. Evil—Is not thy evil thy affliction, are not thy calamities procured by thy sins?

V. 6. Surely—He speaks thus by way of strong presumption, when I consider thy unusual calamities, I conclude thou art guilty of all, or some of these crimes.

V. 18. Yet—Yet it is true, that for a time God did proſper them, but at laſt cut them off in a tremendous manner. But—He repeats Job's words, not without reflection: thou didſt ſay ſo, but againſt thy own principle, that God carries himſelf indifferently towards good and bad; but I, who have obſerved God's terrible judgments upon wicked men, have much more reaſon to abhor their counſels.

V. 20. Becauſe—Becauſe when wicked men are deſtroyed, they are preſerved. He ſhould have ſaid their ſubſtance; but he changes the perſon, and ſaith, our ſubſtance; either as including himſelf in the number of righteous perſons, and thereby intimating that he pleaded the common cauſe of all ſuch, while Job pleaded the cauſe of the wicked, or becauſe he would hereby thankfully acknowledge ſome eminent and particular preſervation given to him amongſt other righteous men. Remnant—All that was left undeſtroyed in the general calamity. Fire—Sodom and Gomorrah. As if he had ſaid, thou mayſt find here and there an inſtance of a wicked man dying in peace. But what is that to the two great inſtances of the final perdition of ungodly men, the drowning the whole world, and the burning of Sodom and Gomorrah.

V. 21. Him—With God, renew thy acquaintance with God by prayer and repentance for all thy ſins, and true humiliation under his hand, and hearty compliance with all his commands, and diligent care to ſerve and enjoy him. It is our honour, that we are made capable of this acquaintance; our miſery, that by ſin we have loſt it; our privilege, that through Chriſt we may return to it; and our unſpeakable advantage, to renew and cultivate it. And be at peace—At peace with God, and at peace with thyſelf, not fretful or uneaſy. Good ſhall come unto thee—All the good thou canſt deſire, temporal, ſpiritual, eternal.

V. 22. Receive——Take the rule whereby thou governeſt thy thoughts, and words, and whole life, not from thy own imaginations or paſſions, but from God, from his law, which is written in thy own mind, and from the doctrines and inſtructions of the holy men of God. CHAP. XXIV.

WHY, seeing [a] times are not hidden from the Almighty, do they that know him, not see his days?

a Acts 1. 7.

2 Some

V. 27. Make—The word is, thou shalt multiply thy prayer. Under all thy burdens, in all thy wants, cares, and fears, thou shalt apply to him for wisdom, strength, and comfort. Pay—Thou shalt obtain those blessings for which thou didst make vows to God, and therefore, according to thy obligation, shalt pay thy vows to him.

V. 28. Established—Thy purposes shall not be disappointed, but ratified by God. And in all thy counsels, and actions, God shall give thee the light of his direction and governance, and of comfort and success.

V. 29. Cast down—All round about thee, in a time of general calamity. There is—God will deliver thee. He—God shall save the humble person—Because God himself, by his holy Spirit, will dwell with them that are of a lowly and a contrite heart.

V. 30. He—God will have so great a respect to the humble, that for thy sake he will deliver those that belong to thee, or live with thee, or near thee, though in themselves they be ripe for destruction. So Eliphaz and his two friends, who in this matter were not innocent, were delivered by the pureness of Job's hands: and in this Job was a type of the Saviour of the world, who saveth the guilty from the wrath of God.

CHAP. XXIII.

V. 2. To day—Even at this time, notwithstanding all your pretended consolations. Stroke—The hand or stroke of God upon me. Groaning—Doth exceed my complaints.

V. 3. O—I desire nothing more than his acquaintance and presence; but alas he hides his face from me. Seat—To his throne or judgment-seat to plead my cause before him.

V. 5. Know—If he should discover to me any secret sins, for which he contendeth with me, I would humble myself before him, and accept of the punishment of mine iniquity.

V. 6. No—He would not use his power against me, but for me; by enabling me to plead my cause, and giving sentence according to that clemency, which he uses towards his children.

V. 7. There—At that throne of grace, where God lays aside his majesty, and judges according to his wonted clemency. Dispute—Humbly propounding the grounds of their confidence. So—Upon such a fair and equal hearing. Delivered——From the sentence of God. This and some such expressions of Job cannot be excused from irreverence towards God, for which God afterwards reproves him, and Job abhorreth himself.

V. 8. Is not—As a judge to hear and determine my causes, otherwise he knew God was essentially present in all places.

V. 10. He knoweth the way that I take—And this is the consolation of all the upright in heart. When he hath tried me—My faith, my patience, and resignation to his will, I shall come out of the afflictions with which he hath been pleased to visit me. As gold—Which comes out of the furnace pure from all dross.

V. 11. Steps—The steps or paths which God hath appointed men to walk in.

V. 14. Performeth—Those calamities which he hath allotted to me. And—There are many such examples of God's proceeding with men.

V. 16. Soft—He hath bruised, and broken, or melted it, so that I have no spirit in me.

V. 17. Because—God did not cut me off by death. Before—These miseries came upon me. Covered—By hiding me in the grave.

Before Christ cir. 1520.

2 Some remove the [b] land-mark; they violently take away flocks, and * feed thereof.

3 They drive away the ass of the fatherless, they [c] take the widow's ox for a pledge.

4 They turn the needy out of the way: [d] the poor of the earth hide themselves together.

5 Behold, as wild asses in the desart, go they forth to their work, rising betimes for a prey: the wilderness yieldeth food for them and for their children.

6 They reap every one his ‡ corn in the field: and § they gather the vintage of the wicked.

7 They cause the naked to lodge without clothing, that they have no covering in the cold.

8 They are wet with the showers of the mountains, and [e] embrace the rock for want of a shelter.

9 They pluck the fatherless from the breast, and take a pledge of the poor.

10 They cause him to go naked without clothing, and they take away the sheaf from the hungry;

12 Men groan from out of the city, and the soul of the wounded crieth out: yet God layeth not folly to them.

13 They are of those that rebel against the light, they know not the ways thereof, nor abide in the paths thereof.

14 [f] The murderer rising with the light, killeth the poor and needy, and in the night is as a thief.

15 [g] The eye also of the adulterer waiteth for the twilight, [h] saying, No eye shall see me: and ‖ disguiseth his face.

16 In the dark they dig through houses, which they had marked for themselves in the day-time: [i] they know not the light.

V. 1. Why—How comes it to pass seeing times, the fittest seasons for every action, and particularly for the punishment of wicked men, are not hidden from the Almighty; do they that know him, who love and obey him, not see God's days, his times, and seasons, which he takes for the punishment of ungodly men?

V. 3. Pledge—Contrary to God's law, first written in men's hearts, and afterwards in holy Scripture.

V. 4. Way—Out of the path or place in which these oppressors walk and range. They labour to keep out of their way for fear of their farther injuries. Hide—For fear of these tyrants.

V. 5. Wild asses—Which are lawless, fierce, and greedy. Desart—Which is the proper habitation of wild asses. They—The oppressors. Go—To spoil and rob.

V. 6. They—The oppressors. Wicked—Of such as themselves: so they promiscuously robbed all, even those that were as wicked as themselves.

V. 7. Naked——Those whom they stripped of their garments and coverings.

V. 8. Wet—With the rain-water, which runs down the rocks or mountains into the caves, to which they fled for shelter. Rock—Are glad when they can find a cleft of a rock in which they may have some protection against the weather.

V. 9. They——The oppressors. Pluck—Out of covetousness; they will not allow the mother time for the suckling of her infant.

V. 10. The sheaf—That single sheaf which the poor man had got with the sweat of his brow to satisfy his hunger.

V. 11. Walls—Within the walls of the oppressors for their use. Suffer—Because they are not permitted to quench their thirst out of the wine which they make.

V. 12. Groan—Under grievous oppressions. Soul—The life or blood of those who are wounded to death, as this word properly signifies, crieth aloud to God for vengeance. Yet——Yet God doth not immediately punish them.

V. 13. Light—As well the light of reason and of that grace which lighteneth every man that cometh into the world. Know not—They do not approve, nor love, or choose the ways thereof.

V. 14. Poor—Where he finds nothing to satisfy his covetousness, he exercises his cruelty.

V. 16. They—The robber: having inserted the mention of the adulterer as one who acted his sin in the same manner as the robber, he now returns to him again.

V. 17. Is—Terrible and hateful.

V. 18. Swift—That is, he quickly passeth away with all his glory, as the waters which never stay in one place, but are always hasting away. Portion—His habitation and estate which he left behind him. He—He shall never more see or enjoy his vineyards, or other pleasant places and things.

V. 20. Womb—His mother that bare him. Wickedness—The wicked man. Broken—Violently broken down. Tree—Which being once broken down, grows not again.

V. 21. He—He here returns to the declaration of his farther wickednesses, the cause of these judgments. Barren—Barrenness was esteemed a curse and reproach; and so he added affliction to the afflicted.

V. 22. Draweth—Into his net.

V. 23. Yet

† Heb. until the end of light with darkness.

11 The pillars of heaven tremble, and are astonished at his reproof.

V. 23. Yet—Yet his eyes are upon their ways; although God gives them such strange successes, yet he sees and observes them all, and will in due time punish them.

V. 24. The way—Out of this world. Other—They can no more prevent or delay their death, than the meanest men in the world. As corn—In its maturity.

CHAP. XXV.

V. 1. Answered—Not to that which Job spake last, but to that which seemed most reprovable in all his discourses; his censure of God's proceedings with him, and his desire of disputing the matter with him. Perhaps Bildad and the rest now perceived that Job and they did not differ so much as they thought. They owned that the wicked might prosper for a while. And Job owned, they would be destroyed at the last.

V. 2. Dominion—Sovereign power over all persons and things. Fear—Terror, that which justly makes him dreadful to all men, and especially to all that undertake to dispute with him. He—This clause, as well as the following verse, seems to be added to prove God's dominion and dreadfulness: he keepeth and ruleth all persons and things in heaven, in peace and harmony. The angels, though they be very numerous, all own his sovereignty, and acquiesce in his pleasure. The stars, though vast in their bulk, and various in their motions, exactly keep the order which God hath appointed them: and therefore it is great folly for thee to quarrel with the methods of God's dealings with thee.

V. 3. Armies—Of the angels, and stars, and other creatures, all which are his hosts. Light—The light of the sun is communicated to all parts of the world. This is a faint resemblance of the cognisance and care which God takes of the whole creation. All are under the light of his knowledge: all partake of the light of his goodness: his pleasure is to shew mercy: all the creatures live upon his bounty. But to whom hath not the light of his grace appeared—that grace which bringeth salvation to all that will obey it?

V. 4. Man—The word signifies man that is miserable, which supposes him to be sinful; and shall such a creature quarrel with that dominion of God, to which the sinless, and happy, and glorious angels submit? God—Before God's tribunal, to which thou dost so boldly appeal.

V. 5. Moon—The moon, though bright and glorious, if compared with the Divine Majesty, is without any lustre or glory.

V. 6. Worm—Mean, and vile, and impotent; proceeding from corruption, and returning to it. The son—For miserable man in the last branch he here puts the son of any man, to shew that this is true even of the greatest and best of men. Who then can sufficiently adore him who hath condescended to call such his friends?

CHAP. XXVI.

V. 4. To whom—For whose instruction hast thou uttered these things? For mine? Dost thou think I do not know, that which the meanest persons are not unacquainted with, that God is incomparably greater and better than his creatures? Whose spirit—Who inspired thee with this discourse of thine.

V. 5. Dead things—Job having censured Bildad's discourse, proceeds to shew that the power and providences of God reaches not only to the things we see, but also to the invisible parts of the world, not only to the heavens above and their inhabitants, and to men upon earth, of which Bildad discoursed, but also to such persons or things as are under the earth, or under the waters which are out of our sight. God's dominion is over all, even over the dead, and the worst of them, who, though they would not own God nor his providence while they lived, yet now are forced to acknowledge and feel that power which they despised, and bitterly mourn under the sad effects of it in their infernal habitations.

V. 6. Hell—Is in his presence, and under his providence. Hell itself, that place of utter darkness, is not hid from his sight. Destruction—The place of destruction.

V. 7. North—The northern part of the heavens, which is put for the whole visible heaven. Nothing—Upon no props or pillars, but supported by his own power.

V. 9. Holdeth—From our view, that his glory may not dazzle our sight; he covereth it with a cloud. Throne—The heaven of heavens, where he dwelleth.

V. 11. Pillars——Perhaps the mountains, which, by their height and strength, seem to reach and support the heavens. Astonished—When God reproveth not them, but men by them, manifesting his displeasure by thunders or earthquakes.

V. 14. Parts

V. 7. Let—I am so far from practising wickedness, that I abhor the thoughts of it, and if I would wish to be revenged of my enemy, I could wish him no greater mischief than to be a wicked man.

V. 8. Though—Though they prosper in the world. God, as the judge, takes it away, to be tried, and determined to its everlasting state. And what will his hope be then? It will be vanity and a lie; it will stand him in no stead.

V. 12. Have seen—I speak what is confirmed by your own, as well as others experiences. Vain—To condemn me for a wicked man, because I am afflicted.

V. 19. Lie down—In death. Not gathered—Instead of that honourable interment with his fathers, his carcase shall lie like dung upon the earth. One openeth his eyes—That is, while a man can open his eyes, in the twinkling of an eye. He is as if he had never been, dead and gone.

V. 20. Terrors—From the sense of approaching death. A tempest—God's wrath cometh upon him like a tempest, and withal unexpectedly like a thief in the night.

V. 21. East wind—Some terrible judgment, compared to the east wind. Which carrieth him—Out of his place where he expected long to dwell.

22 [e] Deſtruction and death ſay, We have heard the fame thereof with our ears.

23 God underſtandeth the way thereof, and he knoweth the place thereof.

24 For he looketh to the ends of the earth, and ſeeth under the whole heaven;

vine providence, and denied the thing, becauſe they could not underſtand the reaſon of ſuch diſpenſations. In this chapter he declares that this is one of the depths of Divine wiſdom, not diſcoverable by any mortal man, and that although men had ſome degree of wiſdom whereby they could ſearch out many hidden things, as the veins of ſilver and gold, yet this was a wiſdom of an higher nature; the caverns of the earth he may diſcover, but not the counſels of heaven.

V. 3. Perfection—Whatever is deeply wrought. Stones of darkneſs—The precious ſtones which lie hid in the bowels of the earth.

V. 4. Breaketh out—While men are ſearching, water breaks in upon them. Inhabitants—Out of that part of the earth which the miners inhabit. Forgotten—Untrodden by the foot of man. Dried up—They are dried up, (or, drawn up, by engines made for that purpoſe) from men, from the miners, that they may not be hindered in their work.

V. 5. Fire—Coals and brimſtone, and other materials of fire.

V. 6. Sapphires—Of precious ſtones; the ſapphire, as one of the moſt eminent, being put for all the reſt. Duſt——Diſtinct from that gold which is found in the maſs.

V. 7. A path—In the bowels of the earth. Vulture's eye——Whoſe eye is quick, and ſtrong, and ſearcheth all places.

V. 8. Lion—Which rangeth for prey; but they could not lead them to theſe mines, the finding out of them is a ſpecial gift of God, and all that is brought from thoſe mines intended by him to be uſed for his glory, by contributing to the happineſs of mankind in this life, and not to their miſery, which ariſes from the abuſe of the gifts of God, and the want of that charity which his grace inſpires.

V. 9. He—This and the two next verſes mention other eminent works of God.

V. 10 Seeth—Whatever is precious in the bowels of the earth, and obſerves every ſentiment and deſire of the ſoul of man.

V. 12. That wiſdom—Man hath one kind of wiſdom, to diſcover the works of nature, and to perform the operations of art; but as for that ſublime wiſdom which conſiſts in the knowledge of God and ourſelves, no man can diſcover this, but by the ſpecial gift of the grace of God.

V. 13. Found—Among men upon earth, but only among thoſe bleſſed ſpirits that dwell above.

V. 14. The depth—This is not to be found, though a man may dig or dive never ſo deep to find it, nor to be learned from any creature.

V. 20. Whence—By a diligent inquiry, we find at length, that there is a twofold wiſdom; one hid in God, which belongs not to us; the other revealed to man, which belongs to us by the mercy of God, for the Redeemer's ſake, and is in its value above all price.

V. 21. Hid—The line and plummet of human reaſon can never fathom the abyſs of the Divine counſels. Who can account for the maxims, meaſures, and methods of God's government? Let us then be content, not to know the future events of providence, till time diſcover them: and not to know the ſecret reaſons of providence, till eternity brings them to light.

V. 22. Death——The grave, the place of the dead, to which theſe things are here aſcribed, as they are to the depths, and to the ſea, by a common figure. Though they cannot give an account of it themſelves, ye there is a world on which theſe dark regions border, where we ſhall ſee it clearly. When the veil of fleſh is rent, and the interpoſing clouds are ſcattered, we ſhall know what God doth, though we know not now.

V. 23. God—God alone. The way—The methods which he takes in the management of all affairs. The place——Where it dwells, which is only in his own mind.

V. 24. For—He, and he only knows it, becauſe his providence is infinite and univerſal, reaching to all places, and times, paſt, preſent, and to come; whereas the moſt knowing men have narrow underſtandings, and the wiſdom, and juſtice, and beauty of God's works are not fully ſeen till all the parts of them be laid together.

MOreover, Job * continued his parable, and said,

2 Oh that I were [a] as in months past, as in the days when God preserved me:

3 [b] When his † candle shined upon my head, and when by his light I walked through darkness:

4 As I was in the days of my youth, when the secret of God was upon my tabernacle:

5 When the Almighty was yet with me, when my children were about me:

6 When [c] I washed my steps with butter, and [d] the rock poured ‡ me out rivers of oil:

7 When I went out to the gate, through the city, when I prepared my seat in the street.

8 The young men saw me, and hid themselves: and the aged arose, and stood up.

9 The princes refrained talking, and laid their hand on their mouth.

10 § The nobles held their peace, and their tongue cleaved to the roof of their mouth.

11 When the ear heard me, then it blessed me; and when the eye saw me, it gave witness to me:

12 Because [e] I delivered the poor that cried, and the fatherless, and him that had none to help him.

V. 25. Winds—God manageth them all by weight, appointing to every wind that blows, its season, its proportion, its bounds, when, and where, and how much, and how long each shall blow. He only doth all these things, and he only knows why he doth them. He instanceth in some few of God's works, and those which seem to be most trivial and uncertain, that thereby he might more strongly imply that God doth the same in other things which are more considerable, that he doth all things in the most exact order, and weight, and measure. The waters——Namely, the rain-waters, which God layeth up in his store-houses, the clouds, and thence draws them forth, and sends them down upon the earth in such times and proportions as he thinks fit. Measure—For liquid things are examined by measure, as other things are by weight: and here is both weight and measure, to signify with what perfect wisdom God governs the world.

V. 26. When—At the first creation when he settled that course and order which should be continued. A decree——An appointment, that it should fall upon the earth, in such times, and places, and proportions; but still keeping all things in continual subjection to his Almighty will, that by the works of nature his rational creatures might, by the assistance of his grace, be taught their entire dependance on God alone, for every blessing.

V. 27. It—Wisdom, which is the subject of the present discourse. This God saw within himself; he looked upon it in his own mind, as the rule by which he would proceed in the creation and government of all things. Declare—Or reveal it. Prepared—He had it in readiness for doing all his works, as if he had been for a long time preparing materials for them. So it is a speech of God after the manner of men. Searched—Not properly; for so searching implies ignorance, and requires time and industry, all which is repugnant to the Divine perfections; but figuratively, he did, and doth, all things with that absolute and perfect wisdom, so exactly, and perfectly, as if he had bestowed a long time in searching to find them out.

V. 28. Man—Unto Adam in the day in which he was created. And in him to all his posterity. Said—God spake it, at first to the mind of man, in which he wrote this with his own finger, and afterwards by the holy patriarchs, and prophets, and other teachers whom he sent into the world to teach men true wisdom. Behold—Which expression denotes the great importance of this doctrine, and withal man's backwardness to apprehend it. The fear of the Lord—True religion. Wisdom—Is man's wisdom, because that, and that only, is his duty, and safety, and happiness, both for this life and for the next. Evil—From sin, which is called evil eminently, as being the chief evil, and the cause of all other evils. All true religion proceeds from the grace of God, and when that becomes the governing principle of the mind of man, it shews itself in two branches, doing good, and forsaking evil; the first is expressed in the former clause of this verse, and the last in these words; and this is the best kind of knowledge or wisdom to which man can attain in this life. The design of Job, in this close of his discourse, is not to reprove the boldness of his friends only, in prying into God's secrets, and passing such a rash censure upon him, and upon God's carriage towards him; but also to vindicate himself from the imputation of hypocrisy, which they fastened upon him, by shewing that he had ever esteemed it to be his best wisdom, to fear God, and to depart from evil.

CHAP. XXIX.

V. 2. Preserved—From all those miseries which now I feel.

V. 3. Darkness—I passed safely through many difficulties, and dangers, and common calamities.

V. 7. Seat—When I caused the seat of justice to be set for me. By this, and several other expressions, it appears that Job was a magistrate. Street—In that open place, near the gate, where the people assembled for the administration of justice.

V. 10. Cleaved—It lay as still as if he had done so. Job, in his prosperity, was so highly honoured for his piety, his integrity, and his wisdom, that the most honourable persons were entirely silent whenever he had occasion to speak: None interrupted him, or opposed their judgment to his.

V. 11. Witness—Gave testimony to my pious, and just, and blameless conversation.

V. 12. Because I delivered the poor that cried—Under the severe treatment which they received at the hands of those that were above them; and the fatherless found in Job a parent, when they required his aid as the civil magistrate; and him that had none to help him—was sure to find a friend in Job.

V. 13. The blessing—The prayer to God, and the good wishes of him that was ready to perish in want and distress came upon me—Was made for Job in return for his tender care of them, in those seasons when they were the least able to help themselves, or requite any one for the kindness done them. I caused the widows heart, in their deepest sorrow, to be turned into joy and gladness, 14 [f] I put on righteousness, and it clothed me: my judgment was as a robe and a diadem.

16 I was a father to the poor: and [g] the cause which I knew not, I searched out.

21 Unto me men gave ear, and waited, and kept silence at my counsel.

22 After my words they spake not again, and my speech dropped upon them.

23 And they waited for me, as for the rain, and they opened their mouth wide, as for [m] the latter rain.

24 If I laughed on them, they believed it not, and the light of my countenance they cast not down.

25 I chose out their way, and sat chief, and dwelt as a king in the army, as one that comforteth the mourners.

at finding in Job that friendly concern, and watchful care for their welfare, which, by the death of their husbands, they found themselves so much in need of.

V. 14. Put on——His steady justice was to him instead of all those ornaments.

V. 15. I was eyes to the blind—By giving them all that assistance, which they would have been able to have procured for themselves, had they possessed the blessing of sight. And feet was I to the lame—They were left without cause to lament the loss of their limbs, by that constant relief which they received from Job under all their difficulties.

V. 16. I was a father to the poor——Job considered himself as God's steward, and accountable to him for all the abundance that was given him, that he laid it out agreeable to the will of the Great Giver of all; and this Job did, with the same constancy to the poor, as if they had been his own children; and the cause which did not come before him as a public magistrate, he searched out, that he might relieve and protect those that were unable or afraid to make their injuries known, lest they should be increased by their oppressors.

V. 17. I brake the jaws of the wicked—Job destroyed the very power of the cruel and the unjust; and plucked the spoil out of his teeth—The helpless whom he had got in his power, Job delivered, and made the wicked restore what he had got by oppression. And in all these kind and merciful actions, which made the ordinary course of Job's conduct, we have a type and representation of the continual interposition of the Father of mercies, whose watchful providence, and infinite love, is ever performing the part of the nearest and tenderest relation to all, but especially to them who stand most in need of his gracious aid; and to him every cause of complaint is known, the oppressed and the oppressor are alike before him, and they that have none to help on earth, have ONE to save and support them, of whom Job's conduct, great and excellent as it was, is but a faint resemblance.

V. 18. Multiply—See how apt even good men are, to set death at a distance from them!

V. 20. Glory—My reputation was growing every day. Bow—My strength, which is signified by a bow, because in ancient times the bow and arrows were the principal instruments of war.

V. 22. Dropped—As the rain, which when it comes down gently upon the earth, is most acceptable and beneficial to it.

V. 24. Laughed—Carried myself so familiarly with them. Cast not down—They were cautious not to give me any occasion to change my countenance towards them.

V. 25. I chose—They sought to me for advice in all difficult cases, and I directed them what methods they should take. Sat—As a prince or judge, while they stood waiting for my counsel. A king—Whose presence puts life and courage into the whole army. As one—As I was ready to comfort any afflicted persons, so my consolations were always welcome to them.

CHAP. XXX.

V. 1. Younger—Whom both universal custom, and the light of nature, taught to reverence their elders and betters. Whose fathers—Whose condition was so mean, that, in the opinion of the world, they were unworthy to be my shepherds, the companions of my dogs, which watch my flocks.

V. 10. Spit—Figuratively; they use all manner of reproachful expressions, even to my face. Herein also we see a type of Christ, who was thus made a reproach of men, and despised of the people.

V. 11. He—God. Hath loosed my cord—Hath slackened the string of my bow, and so hath deprived me of my strength or defence. Let loose—They cast off all former restraint, and do those things before mine eyes, which formerly they trembled lest they should come to my knowledge.

V. 12. Right

afflicted me, they have also let loose the bridle before me.

12 Upon my right hand rise the youth, they push away my feet, and they [d] raise up against me the ways of their destruction.

13 They mar my path, they set forward my calamity, they have no helper.

14 They came upon me as a wide breaking in of waters: in the desolation they rolled themselves upon me.

15 Terrors are turned upon me: they pursue † my soul as the wind: and my welfare passeth away as a cloud.

16 [e] And now my soul is poured out upon me; the days of affliction have taken hold upon me.

17 My bones are pierced in me in the night-season; and my sinews take no rest.

18 By the great force of my disease, is my garment changed: it bindeth me about as the collar of my coat.

19 He hath cast me into the mire, and I am become like dust and ashes.

20 I cry unto thee, and thou dost not hear me: I stand up, and thou regardest me not.

21 Thou art ‡ become cruel to me: with § thy strong hand thou opposest thyself against me.

22 Thou liftest me up to the wind: thou causest me to ride upon it, and dissolvest my ‖ substance.

23 For I know that thou wilt bring me to death, and to the house [f] appointed for all living.

26 When I looked for good, then evil came unto me: and when I waited for light, there came darkness.

27 My bowels boiled, and rested not: the days of affliction prevented me.

I have nothing to fear in death, because I know that my Redeemer liveth.

V. 6. Let me——I desire nothing more than to have my heart and life weighed in just balances, and searched out by the All-seeing God. That God—Or, and he will know; (upon search he will find out: which is spoken of God after the manner of men:) Mine integrity—So this is an appeal to God to be witness of his sincerity.

V. 7. Heart——If I have let my heart loose to covet forbidden things, which mine eyes have seen: commonly sin enters by the eye into the heart. Any blot—Any unjust gain, or impure or sinful action.

V. 8. Increase—All my plants, and fruits, and improvements.

V. 10. Then—Not as if Job desired this; but that if God should give up his wife to such wickedness, he should acknowledge his justice in it.

V. 11. This—Adultery. It is an iniquity—Which belongs to the judges to take cognizance of, and to punish, even with death; and that not only by the law of Moses, but even by the law of nature, as appears from the known laws and customs of the heathen nations.

V. 12. Destruction—Lust is a fire in the soul; it consumes all that is good there, the convictions, the comforts; and lays the conscience waste. It consumes the body. It kindles the fire of God's wrath, which, if not quenched by the blood of Christ, will burn to the lowest hell.

V. 16. If I have—Denied them what they desired of me. To fail—With tedious expectation of my justice or charity. Job is most large upon this head, because in this Eliphaz had most particularly accused him.

V. 18. Youth—As soon as I was capable of managing mine own affairs. With me—Under my care. A father—With all the diligence and tenderness of a father. Her—The widow mentioned ver. 16. From—From my tender years; ever since I was capable of discerning good and evil.

V. 19. Perish—When it was in my power to help them.

V. 21. If I have lift up my hand—In judgment, and awarded severe justice. Against the fatherless——When I saw my own strength and their weakness.

V. 23. For—I stood in awe of God and of his judgments. I could not—I knew myself unable either to oppose his power, or to bear his wrath: good men have need to restrain themselves from sin, with the fear of destruction from God. Even when salvation from God is a comfort to us, yet destruction from God should be a terror to us. Adam in innocency was awed by a threatning.

V. 26. If—This place speaks of the worship of the host of heaven, and especially of the sun and moon, the most eminent and glorious of that number, which was the ancient idolatry, and most frequent in the eastern countries.

V. 27. Kissed—In token of worship.

V. 28. The judge—The civil magistrate; who, being advanced and protected by God, is obliged to maintain and vindicate his honour, and consequently to punish idolatry. Denied God—Not directly but by consequence, because this was to rob God of his prerogative, by giving to the creature that worship which is alone due to him.

32 [r] The stranger did not lodge in the street: but I opened my doors * to the traveller.

33 If I covered my transgressions † [s] as Adam: by hiding mine iniquity in my bosom:

34 Did I fear a great multitude, or did the contempt of families terrify me: that I kept silence, and went not out of the door?

35 [t] O that one would hear me! ‡ behold, my desire is, [u] that the Almighty would answer me, and that mine adversary had written a book.

36 Surely I would take it upon my shoulder, and bind it as a crown to me.

CHAP. XXXII.

SO these three men ceased * to answer Job, because he was righteous in his own eyes.

2 Then was kindled the wrath of Elihu the son of Barachel [a] the Buzite, of the kindred of Ram: against Job was his wrath kindled, because he justified † himself rather than God.

3 Also against his three friends was his wrath kindled, because they had found no answer, and yet had condemned Job.

4 Now Elihu had ‡ waited till Job had spoken, because they were § elder than he.

5 When Elihu saw that there was no answer in the mouth of these three men, then his wrath was kindled.

6 And Elihu the son of Barachel, the Buzite, answered and said, I am ‖ young, [b] and ye are very old, wherefore I was afraid, and * durst not shew you mine opinion.

7 I said, Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom.

8 But there is a spirit in man: and [c] the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding.

9 Great men are not always wise: neither do the aged understand judgment.

10 Therefore I said, Hearken to me, I also will shew mine opinion.

11 Behold, I waited for your words; I gave ear to your † reasons, whilst you searched out ‡ what to say.

12 Yea, I attended unto you: and behold, there was none of you that convinced Job, or that answered his words:

13 Lest ye should say, We have found out wisdom: God thrusteth him down, not man.

V. 33. As Adam—As Adam endeavoured to do in Paradise.

V. 34. Did I fear—No: All that knew Job knew him to be a man of resolution, that boldly appeared, spoke and acted, in defence of religion and justice. He durst not keep silence, or stay within, when called to speak or act for God. He was not deterred by the number, or quality, or insults of the injurious, from reproving them, and doing justice to the injured.

V. 35. Had written—Had given me his charge written in a book, as the manner was in judicial proceedings. This shews that Job did not live before letters were in use. And undoubtedly the first letters were those wrote on the two tables by the finger of God. He wishes his friends, who charged him with hypocrisy, would draw up the charge in writing.

V. 13. Lest—God thus left you to your own weakness, lest you should ascribe the conquering or silencing of Job to your own wisdom. God—This is alledged by Elihu, in the person of Job's three friends; the sense is, the judgments which are upon Job, have not been brought upon him by man originally, but by the hand of God, for his gross, though secret sins: but, saith Elihu, this argument doth not satisfy me, and therefore bear with me if I seek for better.

V. 22. I know not——The more closely we eye the majesty of God as our maker, the more we dread his wrath and justice, the less danger shall we be in of a sinful fearing or flattering of men.

CHAP. XXXIII.

V. 3. My words——I will not speak passionately or partially, but from a sincere desire to do thee good. Clearly—What I speak will be plain, not hard to be understood.

V. 4. The spirit of God hath made me—It gave me life, and the soul of man was breathed into him by God himself, and therefore incapable of death.

V. 6. Behold—I will plead with thee in God's name and stead, which thou hast often wished, and I am God's creature like thyself.

V. 9. Clean—Not absolutely, for he often confesses himself to be a sinner, but no such transgression, as might give God just occasion to punish him so severely, as is implied, where he blames God for finding occasions against him, implying that he had given him none by his sins. Elihu's charge differs from the charge of Job's three friends, who often accuse him for asserting his own innocency; although they did it, because they thought him an hypocrite, whereas Elihu does it because Job's justification of himself was accompanied with reflections upon God.

V. 10. Marketh—He narrowly pries into all my actions, that he may find matter against me.

V. 12. Not just—Thou art in the wrong. Greater—Not only in power and majesty, but also in justice, and wisdom, and goodness, and therefore thou dost foolishly in censuring his judgments, thou castest off that awe and reverence which thou shouldest constantly maintain towards thy sovereign Lord.

V. 13. He——Useth not to give an account to his creatures of the grounds and reasons of his judgments or dispensations, as being the supreme governor of all persons and things, in whose will it becometh all men to acquiesce.

V. 14. Yet—Although he doth not give men an account of his matters, yet he doth that which is sufficient for them. Twice—When once speaking doth not awaken men, God is graciously pleased to give them another admonition: Though he will not gratify men's curiosity in inquiring into his hidden judgments, yet he will acquaint them with their duty. God speaks to us by conscience, by providence, and by ministers, of all which Elihu here treats at large, to shew Job, that God was now telling him his mind, and endeavouring to do him good. He shews first, how God admonishes men by their own consciences.

V. 16. Sealeth——He imprints those instructions upon their minds.

V. 17. Pride——And God by this means is said to hide pride from man, because by these glorious representations of his Divine majesty to man, he takes him off from the admiration of his own excellency, and brings him to a sight of his own weakness, and to an humble submission to his will.

V. 18. Keepeth—By his gracious admonitions, whereby he leads him to repentance.

V. 13. Who—Who, or where is his superior that made the world, and then delivered the government of it to God? God himself is the sole Creator, the absolute Lord of all, and therefore cannot do unjustly: because the Creator and Lord of the world must needs have all possible perfections in himself, and amongst others, perfect justice.

V. 15. All—The design of this, and the foregoing verse, is, to declare God's absolute and uncontrolable sovereignty over all men.

V. 17. Shall he—That is unrighteous, govern? If God be unrighteous, how shall he judge or govern the world? If God were unjust, there would be nothing but unjustice in the world; whereas we see there is a great deal of justice administered in the world, and all this must proceed from him who is the fountain of all justice, and rule, and authority. And he that makes men just, shall he be unjust? Most just—God, who hath given so many proofs of his justice, in giving just and holy laws, in encouraging and rewarding righteous persons in this life, and inflicting dreadful judgments upon tyrants, oppressors, and those that do wickedly.

V. 18. Is it fit?——Is it becoming in inferiors to speak evil of their superiors, especially of princes?

V. 21. For—God doth not destroy either prince or people unjustly, no nor out of his meer pleasure, but for their sins, and of which, God is the witness and observer.

V. 26. As—Because they are wicked men. In the open sight—In public view, that by the example of their sufferings, all that see or hear of them, may be taught to fear to offend God, from whose justice none can escape.

V. 27. Because they would not consider his ways—Regard what God required of them, but conducted themselves as if they were independant of God, and no way accountable to him. How full of danger is that day, or hour, or moment which is spent after this example?

V. 28. Cry of the poor—Their case is bad, who have the prayers and tears of the poor against them: for these will draw down vengeance sooner or later, on the heads of their oppressors; for God heareth the cry of the afflicted—Not as one unconcerned in their sufferings, but as a Father beholds the unjust or cruel treatment of his children, and as a king whose government is dishonoured by the oppression of innocent subjects, unable to defend themselves against their oppressors.

V. 29. When God giveth quietness to a single person, a family, or a nation, who then, without his leave, can interrupt the peace he gives? And when he hideth his face——Withdraws his grace or takes away his blessings, who against his will can behold his face, recover his grace and favour; and when he resists for sin, he can execute his justice, as irresistible upon a whole nation as upon one particular person.

V. 30. Reign not—God doth this to free oppressed people from the snares which ungodly men lay for them.

V. 31. Surely it is meet—For all mankind, there being none by nature righteous, to say unto God, I will, in submission to thy righteous will, bear chastisement, and by this confess my sin, and how justly I might be much more severely punished. And how ought those that regard the glory of God, whose government is reproached by every murmur, and by all discontent, to supplicate the throne of grace; that they may be preserved in a uniform spirit of submission, and entire resignation to the will of God.

14 g Although thou sayest thou shalt not see him, yet judgment is before him, therefore trust thou in him.

V. 5. Clouds——They are far above us, and God is far above them. How much then is he out of the reach of any thing we can do against him, and how little does he stand in need of any of our services? Only such is his love and goodness to mankind for his dear Son's sake that he offers his grace to all, that all may be holy and happy in the knowledge of their Creator and Redeemer, and in the resignation and devotion of themselves to his gracious will.

V. 9. Cry—Thus one man's wickedness may hurt another.

V. 10. None—Few or none of the great numbers of oppressed persons. God——They cry out to men, but they seek not God, and therefore if God do not hear their cries it is not unjust. Maker—Who alone made me, and who only can deliver me. Who, when our condition is ever so dark and sad, can turn our darkness into light, can quickly put a new song in our mouth, a thanksgiving unto our God. But how often do we, under our share of sufferings, go about inquiring of our fellow-creatures to shew us some way or manner of good, and neglect to say unto God, whoever waiteth to be gracious—Lord, lift thou upon us the light of thy reconciled countenance; without which, did we possess every created good, we must be strangers to peace.

V. 11. Who—This is an aggravation of our neglect of God in our misery. God hath given us what he hath denied to beasts, wisdom to know God and ourselves. Therefore we are inexcusable, for not using that wisdom, by calling on God in the time of trouble.

V. 12. Because—God doth not answer prayer when it is made, when we are not humbled for those sins for which God brought miseries upon us.

V. 13. Vanity——Vain persons that are without godly sorrow for sin.

V. 14. See him—Thou canst not understand his dealings with thee. Here Elihu answers another objection of Job's: and tells him that though God may for a season delay to answer, yet he will certainly

V. 32. That—The secret sins which I cannot discover, manifest thou to me.

V. 33. Should it be—Doth God need thy advice how to govern the world, and whom, and when to reward or punish? Refuse—To submit. Therefore—If thou canst say any thing for thyself, I am ready to hear thy defence.

V. 34. Let—I am content that any wise man should judge of my words, and let such consider what I say.

V. 36. End—Thoroughly and exactly, till the cause be brought to an issue. Wicked men—On their behalf; he hath put arguments into their mouths against God and his providence.

V. 37. Addeth——He sinned before by impatience under his afflictions; now he is grown obstinate, and instead of humbling himself for his sins, justifies himself, and accuses the blessed God. Clapped——Insulting and triumphing. Against God—In effect, though not directly.

C H A P. XXXV.

V. 2. Thou saidst—Not that Job said this in express terms, but by what he had said in answer to the accusations of his friends as to his sincerity in true religion, and the bitterness of his complaints under his sufferings, Elihu concluded that Job in his heart thought the Almighty had laid upon him more than was right, and therefore that it was in vain that he had, with so much integrity of mind, walked in the ways of true religion.

V. 3. Thou saidst what profit——What real benefit shall I reap, if I be cleansed from the last remains of the sinful nature in which I was born? But in this Elihu evidently charges Job with the very contrary of his real meaning: It was Job's desire, expressed in the strongest terms, that it might never be forgotten of him, that in the midst of his afflictions he knew his Redeemer lived—appeared in the presence of God in his behalf, to send him the grace of his holy Spirit, by which alone the heart is cleansed from all that is unholy, and the mind that was in Jesus communicated to the mind of man.

V. 7. He—Never ceases to care for, and watch over them that put their trust in him; and whatever may be the difficulties of their station, they that have God for their support can never be finally cast down.

V. 8. If—Through the vicissitude of worldly affairs, they are brought from their throne into a prison, as sometimes hath been done.

V. 9. Work—Their evil works: by these afflictions he brings them to a sight of their sins. Exceeded—That they have greatly sinned by abusing their power and prosperity.

V. 10. Openeth—He inclines them to hearken to what God speaks by the rod. And commandeth that they return from iniquity—When his judgments for sin are upon them, that they truly repent and seek for mercy from God, whom they in their prosperity offended.

V. 12. If they obey not, they shall perish by the sword—They that continue impenitent, and harden their hearts under the judgments of God, he cannot change his course and be reconciled to them that will continue in a state of rebellion against him; neglecting and despising the provision God has made for shewing mercy, they that continue in sin of any kind, unavoidably stand exposed to his justice, till they perish and are destroyed under the execution of it.

V. 13. Cry not—Unto God for mercy, when he bindeth—With the cords of affliction.

V. 14. Die—They provoke God to cut them off before their time. Unclean——They shall die by some stroke of Divine vengeance; and after death, their life is among the unclean, the unclean spirits, the devil and his angels, for ever excluded from the new Jerusalem, into which no unclean thing shall enter.

V. 15. Openeth—Causeth them to hear, and understand, and do the will of God.

V. 16. He would—If thou hadst opened thine ear to God's counsels. Into—A state of ease and freedom.

V. 17. The judgment—Or, the sentence, thou hast justified the hard speeches which wicked men utter against God. Therefore—Therefore the just judgment of God takes hold on thee. Thou hast maintained their cause against God, and God passes against thee the sentence of condemnation due to wicked men.

V. 19. Thy riches—If thou hadst as much of them as ever. Forces—The strongest forces cannot prevent the execution of God's displeasure.

V. 20. The night—The night of death, which Job had often desired, for then, thou art irrecoverably gone: take heed of thy foolish and often repeated desire of death, lest God inflict it upon thee in anger.

V. 21. Chosen—Thou hast chosen rather to quarrel with God, and censure his judgments, than quietly to submit to them.

V. 22. Behold—God is omnipotent; and therefore can either punish thee far worse, or deliver thee, if thou dost repent.

V. 24. Remember—Call to mind this thy duty. Magnify—Every work which he doth; do not condemn any of his providential works, but adore them as done with wisdom and justice.

V. 25. It—The power, and wisdom, and greatness of God are so manifest in all his works, that all may see and acknowledge it. Afar off—The works of God are so great that they may be seen at a distance. Elihu proceeds to give some instances in the works of nature and providence. His general aim is to shew, 1. That God is the first cause and supreme director of all the creatures: 2. That it is presumption in us to prescribe to him in his special providence toward men, when the operations even of common providence are so mysterious and unaccountable.

V. 26. Neither—He is eternal, as in his being, so in all his counsels; which therefore must be infinitely above the comprehension of short-lived men.

V. 27. For—Having affirmed that God's works are incomprehensibly great and glorious, he now proves it from the most common works of nature and providence. And hence he leaves it to Job to consider how much more deep and inconceivable the secret counsels of God must be. Water——He orders matters so wisely, that the waters which are in the clouds do not fall down at once in spouts, which would be pernicious to the earth and to mankind; but by degrees, and in drops. According—According to the proportion of vapours which the heat of the sun hath drawn up from the earth or sea.

V. 29. Understand—Whence it comes to pass, that a small cloud, no bigger than a man's hand, suddenly spreads over the whole heavens: how the clouds come to be suddenly gathered, and so condensed as to bring forth thunder and lightning. Noise—The thunder produced in the clouds, which are often called God's tent or tabernacle.

V. 30. Light—The lightning; fitly God's light, because God only can light it. It—Upon the cloud, which is in a manner the candlestick in which God sets up this light. The sea—The lightning spreads far and wide over all the parts of the sea.

V. 31. Judgeth—By thunder and lightning, and rain from the clouds, he executes his judgments against ungodly people. Meat—Giveth meat. By the same clouds, he provides plentiful showers dropping fatness on the earth.

V. 32. Clouds——With thick and black clouds spread over the whole heavens. Light—The sun. The cloud—Which God interposes as a veil between the sun and the earth.

V. 33. The noise—The thunder gives notice of the approaching rain. Also—And as the thunder, so also the cattle sheweth, concerning the vapour, concerning the coming of the rain, by a strange instinct, seeking for shelter, when a change of weather is near.

CHAP. XXXVII.

V. 2. Voice—The thunder is called God's voice. Because by it God speaks to the children of men, to fear before him. Mouth—That is produced by God's word or command, which is often signified by his mouth.

V. 3. Directeth—His voice: which he guideth like an arrow to the mark, that it may do that work for which he sends it.

V. 4. After——After the lightning, which is seen before the thunder is heard. Them—The lightnings spoken of in the beginning of the verse.

V. 5. Great things doth God which we cannot comprehend—It is therefore our duty humbly to adore him, and thankfully receive whatever he sends, and cheerfully resign ourselves to his infinitely wise and gracious government, however unable we may be to understand his designs and dealings with us; it being enough to know know that whatever God does or suffers to be done must be consistent with himself; and can never in the end be contrary to their highest possible good, who believe in him as their God and their Redeemer.

V. 6. Strength—Those storms of rain which come with great force and irresistible violence.

V. 7. God sealeth up the hand of every man—Who labours but in vain, whatever is his employment, unless the Lord is pleased to give him success. Without his blessing the swift—the diligent, the strong—the laborious, the wise—the prudent shall find themselves disappointed in their expectations from their best-laid designs. That all men may know his work——And that it is God alone that governs; and in seeing this may fear him, and depend upon his goodness for all things. How does every winter's frost prove how suddenly and effectually God can seal up every man's hand, and render all their labours void and useless in cultivating the ground, was it his Almighty will that the earth and water should thus continue like one solid mass of stone.

V. 10. By the breath of God frost is given—By the least motion of his will, which the whirlwinds of the south, and the freezing blasts of the north equally obey; and seas and rivers swell or are straitned at his pleasure.

V. 11. Watering—The earth. Wearieth—Them, making them to go long journeys to water remote parts, and at last to empty themselves there: which things make men weary; and therefore are here said to make the clouds weary by a common figure. Scattereth—The white lightsome clouds far and wide, sending them over the whole earth.

V. 12. Turned—The clouds are carried about to this or that place. Not by chance (though nothing seems to be more casual than the motions of the clouds) but by his order and constant government.

V. 13. Correction—To scourge or correct men by immoderate showers. Mercy—For the benefit of mankind. And what must be the guilt of that ingratitude in the human mind, which sends up no thanksgiving, no praises to God in return for those kindly descending showers which cool the air we breathe, refresh the earth and make it fruitful, and are the means by which the Father of mercies continually bestows such countless blessings upon us.

V. 14. Consider—If there be so much matter of wonder in the most obvious works of God, how wonderful must his secret counsels be? How often are we reminded in the Scriptures of that great duty to God and to our own happiness—Consideration—The stedfast application of our hearts and minds to the works, the ways and will of God: and of all our sufferings by the want of consideration, those which arise from not considering His WORD cannot but be the greatest; because it contains the fullest and plainest discoveries of himself, whom truly to know is everlasting life—the very nature of heaven begun on earth, as not to know the blessed God is want, and poverty, and misery, the nature of hell itself.

V. 15. Dost thou know—Did God acquaint thee with his counsels in the producing and ordering of them?

V. 16. Balancings—How God doth as it were weigh the clouds in balances, so that although they are full of water, yet they are kept up by the thin air.

V. 17. Quieteth—The air about the earth.

V. 18. With him—Wast thou his assistant in spreading out the sky like a canopy over the earth? Strong—Which though it be very thin and transparent, yet is also firm, and compact, and stedfast. Looking-glass—Made of brass and steel, as the manner then was. Smooth and polished, without the least flaw. In this, as in a glass, we may behold the glory of God and the wisdom of his handy work.

V. 19. Teach us—If thou canst. Say unto him—Of these things. Order—To maintain discourse with him, both because of the darkness of God's counsels, and of the darkness of our minds.

V. 20. Shall—I send a message to him, that I am ready to debate with him concerning his proceedings? Speak—If a man should be so bold to enter the lists with God. Swallowed up—With the sense of his infinite majesty.

V. 21. Light—The sun; which is emphatically called light, and here the bright light: which men cannot behold or gaze on when the sky is very clear: and therefore it is not strange if we cannot see God, or discern his counsels and ways.

V. 22. North——From the northern winds which scatter the clouds, and clear the sky. Elihu concludes with some short, but great sayings, concerning the glory of God. He speaks abruptly and in haste, because it should seem, he perceived God was approaching, and presumed he was about to take the work into his own hands.

V. 23. Find—We cannot comprehend him: his power, wisdom, justice, and his counsels proceeding from them are past our finding out.

Before Christ cir. 1520.

24 Men do therefore fear him: he respecteth not any that are wise of heart.

out. Power—Therefore as he doth not need any unrighteous action to advance himself, so he cannot do it, because all such things are acts of weakness. Judgment——In the just administration of judgment, he never did nor can exercise that power unjustly, nor Afflict—Without just cause, or for some purpose worthy of himself; for the punishing of the impenitent, or for the perfecting of those by sufferings who see his hand in their afflictions, and who look to him for grace to sanctify them to them.

V. 24. Fear—Reverence him, and humbly submit to him, and do not presume to dispute with him. He respecteth not any that are wise of heart—However highly they may think of themselves, or be thought of by others, all that wisdom which is merely human, is of no esteem with God; all the wisdom of this world, did one man possess it all, it would entitle him to no respect from God; with him it would be foolishness: and in whatever degree the soul exalted itself on account of its wisdom, instead of its being a real good to the possessor, it would separate him from God; whilst one that had little of this wisdom, but who, by yielding to his grace, had obtained a lowly and a contrite heart, God would with such a one delight to dwell; and esteem the meek and quiet spirit at a great price, because a partaker of the mind that was in his beloved Son. Wise of heart—Wise in their own eyes.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

V. 1. Lord—The eternal word, Jehovah, the same who spake from mount Sinai. Answered—Out of a dark and thick cloud, from which he sent a tempestuous wind, as the harbinger of his presence. In this manner God appears and speaks to awaken Job and his friends, to the more serious attention to his words; and to testify his displeasure both against Job, and them, that all of them might be more deeply humbled and prepared to receive, and retain the instructions which God was about to give them.

V. 2. Counsel——God's counsel. For the great matter of the dispute between Job and his friends, was concerning God's counsel and providence in afflicting Job.

V. 3. Gird up—As warriors then did for the battle.

V. 4. Where—Thou art but of yesterday; and dost thou presume to judge of my eternal counsels!

V. 6. Foundations—Who was it that built this goodly fabrick, and established it so firmly that it cannot be moved.

V. 7. Stars—The angels, called morning-stars, because of their lustre and glory, and the sons of God, because they had their whole being from him, and partakers of his Divine and glorious image. Shouted—Rejoiced in and blessed God for his works, whereby he intimates, that they neither did advise or any way assist him, nor dislike or censure any of his works or government, as Job had presumed to do.

V. 8. Doors—Who was it that set bounds to the vast and raging ocean, and shut it up, as it were with doors, within its proper place, that it might not overflow the earth? Break forth—As if they had issued from the bowels of the earth.

V. 9. The cloud—When I covered it with vapours and clouds which rise out of the sea, and hover above it, and cover it like a garment. Darkness—Black and dark clouds. Swaddling band—Having compared the sea to a new-born infant, he continues the metaphor, and makes the clouds as swaddling-bands, to keep it within its bounds: though neither clouds, nor air, nor sands, nor shores, can bound the sea, but God alone.

V. 12. Morning—Didst thou create the sun, and appoint the order and succession of day and night? Since—Since thou wast born: To know—To observe the punctual time when, and the point of the heavens where it should arise; which varies every day.

V. 14. It——The earth is changed in its appearance. By the seal——The seal makes a beautiful impression upon the clay, which in itself hath no form or comeliness. So the earth, which in the darkness of night lies like a confused heap without either form or beauty, when the light arises and shines upon it, appears in excellent order and glory. They—The men and things of the earth, whether natural, as living creatures, herbs and trees; or artificial, as houses or other buildings. Stand—Present themselves to our view. Garment—Wherewith the earth is in a manner clothed and adorned.

V. 15. Withheld——That light which is enjoyed by others is withheld from them, because they choose darkness rather than light. Arms—Their great strength which they used to the oppression of others.

V. 16. Depth——Hast thou found out the utmost depth of the sea, which in divers places could never be reached by the mariner? And how then canst thou fathom the depths of my counsels?

V. 17. Death

V. 17. Death—Hast thou seen, or dost thou know the place and state of the dead; the depths and bowels of that earth in which the generality of the dead are buried? Who but God can tell when or by what means we shall be brought to death; by what road we must go the way, whence we shall not return. We cannot describe what death is; how the knot is untied between soul and body, or how the spirit goes into that unchangeable state of bliss or woe, which are so clearly revealed from God to man.

V. 18. Breadth—The whole compass and all the parts of it!

V. 19. Dwelleth—Hath its constant and settled abode. And as there was a time when there was nothing but gross darkness upon the face of the earth, what way came light into the world? Which was the place were light dwelt at that time, and whence was it fetched? And whence came that orderly constitution and constant succession of light and darkness! Was this thy work? Or wast thou privy to it, or an assistant in it?

V. 22. Treasures—Dost thou know where I have laid up those vast quantities of snow and hail which I draw forth when I see fit?

V. 23. Trouble——When I intend to bring trouble upon any people for their sins.

V. 24. Distributed—In the air, and upon the face of the earth. This is variously distributed in the world, shining in one place and time, when it doth not shine in another, or for a longer time, or with greater brightness and power than it doth in another. All which are the effects of God's infinite wisdom and power, and such as were out of Job's reach to understand.

V. 25. Overflowing—For the showers of rain which come down orderly, and gradually, as if they were conveyed in pipes or channels; which, without the care of God, would fall and overwhelm the earth. Lightning and thunder—Who opened a passage for them out of the cloud in which they were imprisoned?

V. 26. To cause—That the clouds being broken by lightning and thunder might pour down rain. No man——To water those parts by art and industry, as in cultivated places.

V. 27. Hitherto God has put such questions to Job, as were proper to convince him of his ignorance. Now he comes to convince him of his weakness. As it is but little that he can know, and therefore he ought not to arraign the Divine counsels, so it is but little he can do; and therefore he ought not to oppose Divine providence.

V. 28. Father—Is there any man that can produce rain at his pleasure?

V. 31. Bind—Restrain or hinder them. Pleiades—The seven stars, which bring in the spring. Bands—By which it binds up the air and earth, by bringing storms of rain and hail, or frost and snow. Orion—This constellation rises in November, and brings in winter. Both summer and winter will have their course; God indeed can change them when he pleases, can make the spring cold, and so bind the influences of Pleiades; and the winter warm, and so loose the bands of Orion; but we cannot.

V. 32. Bring forth—Canst thou make the stars in the southern signs arise and appear? Arcturus—Those in the northern. His sons—The lesser stars, which are placed round about them; and attend upon them, as children upon their parents.

V. 33. Ordinances—The laws which are firmly established concerning their order, motion, and their powerful influences upon this lower world. Didst thou give these laws? Or dost thou perfectly know them? Canst thou—Manage and over-rule them.

V. 34. Cover thee—Thy land when it needs rain.

V. 38. Mire—By reason of much rain.

V. 39. Hunt—Is it by thy care that the lions who live in desert places are furnished with necessary provisions?

V. 41. Raven

Before Christ cir. 1520.

39 [p] Wilt thou hunt the prey for the lion? or fill † the appetite of the young lions,

V. 41. Raven—Having mentioned the nobleſt of brute creatures, he now mentions one of little eſteem; to ſhew the care of God's providence overall creatures, both great and ſmall. Their young ones are ſo ſoon forſaken by their dams, that if God did not provide for them in a more than ordinary manner, they would be ſtarved to death. And will he that provides for the young ravens, fail to provide for his own children?

CHAP. XXXIX.

V. 4. Young ones——Notwithſtanding their great weakneſs. Grow up—As with corn, as if they were fed with corn. Go forth—Finding ſufficient proviſions abroad by the care of God's providence.

V. 5. Sent—Who hath given him this diſpoſition that he loves freedom, and hates that ſubjection which other creatures quietly endure? Looſed—Who keeps him from receiving the bands, and ſubmitting to the ſervice of man.

V. 7. Scorneth—He feareth them not when they purſue him, becauſe he is ſwift, and can eaſily eſcape them. Driver——He will not be brought to receive his yoke, nor to do his drudgery.

V. 8. Mountains——He prefers that mean proviſion with his freedom, before the fatteſt paſtures with ſervitude.

V. 9. Unicorn—the Rhinoceros; or a kind of wild bull.

V. 16 Her labour—Is without fear, becauſe ſhe is without tender concern for them.

V. 17. Deprived—Becauſe God hath not implanted in her that inſtinct, and affection, which he hath put into other birds and beaſts toward their young.

V. 18. Liſteth—To flee from her purſuer. Scorneth—She deſpiſes them through her ſwiftneſs.

V. 19. Thunder—A ſtrong metaphor, to denote force and terror.

V. 21. Valley—Battles with horſes uſed to be pitched in valleys, or low grounds

V. 23. Quiver—The quiver is here put for the arrows contained in it.

V. 24. Swalloweth—He is ſo full of rage and fury, that he is ready to tear the very ground on which he goes. Believeth—He is ſo pleaſed with the approach of the battle, and the ſound of the trumpet calling to it, that he can ſcarce believe his ears for gladneſs.

V. 25. Ha, ha—An expreſſion of joy and alacrity, declared by his proud neighings. Thunder—The loud and joyful clamour begun by the commanders, and followed by the ſoldiers when they are ready to join battle.

V. 26. Fly—So ſtrongly, unweariedly, and ſwiftly. South—At the approach of winter, when wild hawks fly into warmer countries, as being impatient of cold. The birds of the air are proofs of the wonderful providence of God, as well as the beaſts of the earth.

V. 27. Mount

Before Christ cir. 1520.

V. 29. Her eyes—Her ſight is exceeding ſharp and ſtrong, ſo that ſhe is able to look upon the ſun with open eyes, and to behold the ſmalleſt prey upon the earth or ſea at a vaſt diſtance.

V. 30. She—With all the capacity that is given her to fly up to the very heavens, yet where the carcaſes are, there ſhe abides: and thus is it with the earthly-minded ſoul, with capacities to aſcend up to heaven, it deſires to remain on earth by the objects of its ſenſual deſires.

CHAP. XL.

V. 1. Anſwered—Having made a little pauſe to try what Job could anſwer. This is not ſaid to be ſpoken out of the whirlwind, and therefore ſome think God ſaid it in a ſtill, ſmall voice, which wrought more upon Job, (as upon Elijah) than the whirlwind did. Though Job had not ſpoken any thing, yet God is ſaid to anſwer him. For he knows men's thoughts, and can return anſwers to their ſilence.

V. 2. Reproveth—That boldly cenſureth his ways or works; it is at his peril.

V. 4. I am vile—When God ſpake to Job, then did he know what he was in his ſight.

V. 5. Anſwer—Speak again; I will contend no more with thee. Twice—Often.

V. 6. Whirlwind—Which was renewed when God renewed his charge upon Job, whom he intended to humble more thoroughly.

V. 8. Wilt thou—Art thou reſolved not only to vindicate thyſelf, but alſo accuſe me. Diſannul—Not only queſtion, but even repeal and make void, as if it were unjuſt, my judgment? My ſentence againſt thee, and my government of human affairs? Wilt thou make me unrighteous that thou mayſt ſeem to be righteous?

V. 10. Deck—Seeing thou makeſt thyſelf equal, yea, ſuperior to me, take to thyſelf thy great power, come and ſit in my throne, and diſplay thy Divine perfections in the ſight of the world.

V. 11. Caſt abroad the rage of thy wrath—Let thy experience convince thee of thy weakneſs, and that inſtead of thinking that thou art equal to the Moſt High in any of his perfections, thou mayſt know that without thy Creator's leave and aid, thou canſt not lift thy hand to thy head.

V. 12. Abaſe him—That is proud, as a proof of thy power. No, but for the infinite wiſdom of God, which knows how to hedge about the proud mind of man, and confound him with his own devices, and ſoften his heart by the influence of his All-ſufficient grace, pride would rule and reign in the ſoul of man ſo long as it remained in the body; and when death removed it to the world of ſpirits, pride would be its inſeparable companion, and one great, conſtant, and endleſs cauſe of its miſery.

V. 13. Hide—Kill every one of them. Bind—Condemn or deſtroy them. In ſecret—Bury them in their graves; ſee if thou canſt finally overcome the wicked.

V. 15. Behemoth—Thought to be the river-horſe, which may fitly be joined with the crocodile, both being well known to Job and his friends, as being frequent in the adjacent parts, both amphibious, living and preying both in the water and upon the land, and both creatures of great bulk and ſtrength. Made—As I made thee. Graſs——The river-horſe comes out of the river upon the land to feed upon graſs, as an ox doth, to whom alſo he is not unlike in the form of his head and feet, and in the bigneſs of his body, whence the Italians call him the ſea-ox.

V. 16. Strength—He hath ſtrength anſwerable to his bulk, but this ſtrength, by God's wiſe and merciful providence, is not an offenſive ſtrength, conſiſting in or put forth by horns or claws, as it is in ravenous creatures, but only defenſive and ſeated in his loins.

V. 19. The chief—He is one of the chief of God's works, in regard of his ſtrength.

V. 20. Mountains—Though he lives moſt in the water, yet he often fetches his food from the land, and from the mountains or hills food: where all the beasts of the field play.

which are nigh the rivers. Play—They not only feed securely, but sport themselves by him, being taught by experience that he is gentle and harmless.

V. 23. River—A great quantity of water, hyperbolically called a river. Hasteth not—He drinks not with fear and caution; but such is his courage, that he fears no enemy either by water or by land. He drinks as if he designed to drink up the whole river.

V. 24. Sight—Can any man take him openly and by force?

CHAP. XLI.

V. 1. Leviathan—Several particulars in the following description, agree far better with the crocodile than the whale. It is probable, that this is the creature here spoken of. Cord—Canst thou take him with a hook and a line, as anglers take ordinary fishes?

V. 2. Thorn—Or, with an iron hook, or instrument as sharp as a thorn.

V. 3. Supplications—Doth he dread thine anger or power? Or will he earnestly beg thy favour? It is a metaphor from men in distress, who use these means to them to whose power they are subject.

V. 7. Fill—A whale's may: but the skin of a crocodile is so hard that an iron spear will not pierce it.

V. 8. Lay—Seize upon him, if thou dareſt. Battle—But ere thou attempt it consider what thou art doing, and with whom thou art going to fight. Do no more—Proceed no further, draw back thy hand.

V. 9. Hope—The hope of taking or conquering him.

V. 10. Who then is able to stand before me—Who hath created him? Thus do the things that are made, discover to mankind the nature of God, and of his great power with whom all have to do as the righteous governor of the world, and the final judge of all his rational creatures.

V. 11. Prevented—Hath laid the first obligation upon me, for which I am indebted to him. Who can be before-hand with me in kindnesses, since all things under heaven are mine.

V. 13. Who can discover the face of his garment—By the garment is meant the skin which covers the whole body; who dare attempt to touch his very skin? much less to give him a wound. His double bridle—His fast jaws, which have some resemblance to a double bridle.

V. 14. Doors—His mouth.

V. 15. Shut—Closely compacted together, as things that are fastened together by a seal.

V. 18. Sneesings—This the crocodile is said frequently to do. Eyes—The eyes of the crocodile are said to appear dull and dark under the water, but as soon as they come above water, cast a bright and clear light; like the morning light, suddenly breaking forth after the dark night.

V. 21. Kindleth coals—An hyperbolical expression, denoting extraordinary heat.

V. 22. And sorrow—Sorrow is his companion and harbinger, which attends upon him wheresoever he goes.

V. 24. Nether millstone—Which being to bear the weight of the upper, ought to be the harder and stronger of the two.

V. 25. Raiseth

V. 25. Raiſeth—Upon the top of the waters. Mighty—Even the ſtout-hearted. Breakings—By reaſon of their great danger and diſtreſs. They purify themſelves—Thoſe who ordinarily live in the neglect of God, they cry unto him in their trouble, and endeavour to purge their conſciences from the guilt of their ſins.

V. 26. Hold—cannot pierce.

V. 28. Turned—Hurt him no more than a blow with a little ſtubble.

This diſcourſe concerning them was brought in, to prove that it is God only who can look upon proud men and abaſe them, bring them low, and hide them in the duſt; he it is that beholdeth all high things, and wherein men deal proudly, he is above them. He is king over all the children of pride, brutal or rational, and makes them either bend or break before him.

CHAP. XLII.

V. 1, 2. Then—When God had made known his power, Job anſwered the LORD and ſaid, I know now that thou canſt do every thing, and that there is nothing too hard for thee. (Jer. xxxii. 17.) And no thought that ariſes in the heart of man, can be withholden from thee—and thou therefore art alone able to judge whether chaſtenings or comforts, afflictions or proſperity, will produce the beſt effects on the minds of all the children of men, who, by thy merciful diſpoſals, thou art preparing to receive that knowledge of thyſelf, which ſhall lead them to love thee with all the powers of their ſouls.

V. 3. Who—What am I that I ſhould be guilty of ſuch madneſs! Therefore——Becauſe my mind was without knowledge. Knew not—I have ſpoken fooliſhly and unadviſedly of things far above my reach.

V. 4. Hear—Hear and accept my humble confeſſion. Inquire—I will no more diſpute the matter with thee, but beg information from thee.

V. 5. Seeth thee—The knowledge which I had of thy nature, perfections, and counſels, was hitherto grounded chiefly upon the inſtructions of men; but now it is clear and certain, as being immediately communicated to my mind by thy holy ſpirit; which makes theſe things as evident to me, as if I ſaw them with my bodily eyes. When the mind is enlightened by the ſpirit of God, our knowledge of Divine things as far exceeds what we had before, as knowledge, by ocular demonſtration, exceeds that by common fame; and to this gracious influence it is that all are indebted for every good and perfect gift. (James i. 17. 1 John ii. 20.)

V. 6. I abhor myſelf——On account of my utter ſinfulneſs, my great preſumption, my ingratitude and diſobedience; of which I repent in duſt and aſhes—With deep ſorrow and humiliation, entirely reſigning myſelf to thee my gracious God and Redeemer; of whom, if I am but accepted, I will not turn away my face any more with ſcorn from him that reproacheth me, nor again attempt to vindicate myſelf to men, whilſt I am ſo guilty as I now ſee myſelf before thee O my God, of whoſe mercy alone it is that I am not utterly conſumed, and becauſe thy compaſſions failed not. (Lam. iii. 22.)

V. 7. Eliphaz—As the chief of the three. The Lord ſaid to Eliphaz, My wrath is kindled againſt thee and thy two friends. Elihu is not included in this ſentence: Elihu had declared Job's ſinfulneſs and that of all mankind; he had alſo declared the majeſty and holineſs of God, and then that God had found out a ranſom for fallen ſinful man: on this account Elihu is not included in the declaration of God's wrath againſt the other three, becauſe what he ſaid agrees with the revelation which God hath given from the beginning. And why was the wrath of God kindled againſt Eliphaz and his two friends? Becauſe they laid the foundation of the favour of God to man, in man's ſincerity and integrity, ſaying in ſubſtance, That if man would be good he would be ſure to be bleſſed of God, and that Job's ſufferings were inflicted upon him, becauſe he was not what he pretended to be. And this is the language of all them that believe not the record which God hath given of his Son, and the diſcoveries he hath made in his word of the way of ſalvation; againſt which unbelief God's wrath was and is ever kindled, becauſe it not only denies the foundation which God hath laid for reconciling ſinful men unto himſelf, but alſo preſumes to lay inſtead thereof a foundation altogether falſe, and which muſt be fatal to all who finally truſt to it—that man can, in whole or in part, juſtify himſelf in the ſight of God, and obtain his favour by works of righteouſneſs which he can do. Againſt this moſt dangerous ſnare of ſatan, and deluſion of the human heart, Job is here made an eminent

8 Therefore take unto you now seven bullocks, and seven rams, and [d] go to my servant Job, and offer up for yourselves a burnt-offering, and my servant Job shall pray for you, for † him will I accept: lest I deal with you after your folly, in that ye have not spoken of me the thing which is right, like my servant Job.

9 So Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite went and did according as the Lord commanded them: the Lord also accepted ‡ Job.

10 [e] And the Lord turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends: also the Lord § gave Job [f] twice as much as he had before.

11 Then came there unto him all his brethren, and all his sisters, and all they that had been of his acquaintance before, and did eat bread with him in his house: and they bemoaned him, and comforted him over all the evil that the Lord had brought upon him: every man also gave him a piece of money, and every one an ear-ring of gold.

Before Christ cir. 1520.

12 So the Lord blessed the latter end of Job more than his beginning: for he had fourteen thousand sheep, and six thousand camels, and a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she-asses.

13 He had also seven sons and three daughters.

14 And he called the name of the first, Jemima, and the name of the second, Kezia, and the name of the third, Keren-happuch.

15 And in all the land were no women found so fair as the daughters of Job: and their father gave them inheritance among their brethren.

16 After this lived Job an hundred and forty years, and saw his sons, and his sons sons, even four generations.

17 So Job died, being old and full of days.

eminent witness—upright, patient, just and merciful as he was, when God speaks to him, he sees and abhors himself as the chief of sinners; he repents in dust and ashes, and he returns to the ransom which God had found out for the sinful human race: and God, to shew the only channel through which his mercy and grace flows to the souls of men, when Job thus came unto God to be saved for the sake of his Redeemer, utterly renouncing his own righteousness, then the Lord turned his captivity—saved him from his sinful and miserable state and from the power of satan, and bestowed all those blessings upon him, which he remained in possession of till his spirit ascended to that blessed world, which none can enter but those who receive forgiveness, and are partakers of holiness, as the free gift of God through Jesus Christ.

V. 8. My servant—Whom though you condemned as an hypocrite, I own for my faithful servant. Offer—By the hand of Job, whom I hereby constitute your priest to pray and sacrifice for you. Lest I deal—Lest my just judgment come upon you.

V. 9. The Lord accepted Job—Not only forgave him all the debt of sin which he had contracted during his sufferings, but accepted him into his favour, and called him his servant, and by adoption and grace made him his child, and an heir of the kingdom of heaven. And as Job prayed and offered sacrifice for those who had grieved and wounded his spirit, so Christ prayed and died for his persecutors.

V. 10. Captivity——All his bodily distempers were thoroughly healed, and probably in a moment. His mind was calmed, his peace returned, and the consolations of God were not small with him. Prayed—Whereby he manifests his obedience to God and his true love to them.

V. 11. Then—When Job had humbled himself, and God was reconciled to him. Sisters—His kindred. Eat—Feasted with him, to congratulate him on God's great mercy and favour. Bemoaned—They declared the sense which they had of his calamities while they were upon him, although they had hitherto wanted opportunity to express it.

V. 12. Blessed—Not only with spiritual, but also with temporal blessings.

V. 14. Jemima—The day, either because of her eminent beauty, or because she was born in the day of his prosperity, after a dark night of affliction. Kezia is the name of a spice of a very fragrant smell, commonly called Cassia. Keren-happuch signifies plenty restored.

V. 15. So fair——In the Old Testament we often find women praised for their beauty, but never in the New, because the beauty of holiness is brought to a much clearer light by the gospel, and compared with that spiritual beauty and excellence, no other is ever to be named or compared.

V. 16. After this Job lived an hundred and forty years—How contrary was this to Job's thoughts in his distress, when he said, The Lord should look for him in the morning, and he should not be found among the living, vii. 21. He lived to see his sons, and his sons sons, even four generations; thus did that God, whom he believed could do every thing, restore him to more than all he had lost.

V. 17. So Job died—Exchanged a life of danger for a state of endless safety and blessedness among the redeemed of the Lord. And when he died he was old and full of days—Fully ripe for everlasting glory.

PSALMS.

A short Account of the Life of DAVID, by whom the PSALMS were chiefly written.

DAVID the son of Jesse, of the tribe of Judah, of the lineage of Abraham, in the fourteenth generation, was born in Bethlehem, a town in the tribe of Judah, in the land of Canaan, when Samuel the Prophet was Judge of Israel. He was the seventh and youngest of all Jesse's sons, of least esteem among them, and employed in keeping his father's sheep. In the twenty-third year of his life, he was, by Samuel the Prophet, privately in Bethlehem anointed King over Israel, and the spirit of the Lord came upon him from that day forward. He was ruddy, of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to; a skilful player on the harp, a valiant man and prudent, and the Lord was with him: Who also gave him these testimonies and promises; I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will. I have laid help on one that is mighty, I have exalted one chosen out of the people, with whom my hand shall be established, mine arm also shall strengthen him; I will beat down his foes before his face, and plague them that hate him. In my name shall his horn be exalted; I will set his hand in the sea, and his right hand in the rivers; I will make him higher than the Kings of the earth. My mercy will I keep for him for ever, and my covenant shall stand fast with him; his seed will I make to endure for ever, and his throne as the days of heaven.

After David's anointing in Bethlehem, he went again and fed his father's sheep: but the spirit of God wrought mightily in him. He killed Goliah, the Philistian giant, from whose face all the men of Israel fled away for fear: David overcame him (in the name of the Lord of hosts) with a sling and with a stone. He was employed in wars against the Philistines: and whithersoever Saul sent him, he behaved himself wisely and prospered, and was accepted in the eyes of all the people; so that the women of Israel sang of him, Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands. But that praise procured him envy from Saul ever after, and he sought to slay him: but all Israel loved him. And though he after took to wife Michal, Saul's daughter, yet Saul continued his hatred against his son in law; and first secretly, then openly sought his life: so that David fled to hide himself in the land of Israel, and in strange countries, to the great affliction of his soul.

When Saul was dead, and David thirty years of age, the men of Judah anointed him King the second time, in Hebron, over the house of Judah. Ishbosheth, Saul's son, resisted him; but David waxed stronger and stronger Then all Israel anointed him King over them, and he reigned in Jerusalem. So the time of all his reign was forty years. In Hebron he reigned over Judah seven years and six months, and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty-three years over all Israel and Judah. During which space, the Lord still exercised him with many wars abroad, and troubles at home; as by the defiling of his daughter Tamar, the killing of his son Amnon, the treason and death of his son Absalom, the rebellion of Sheba, and other sorrows which God for his sins chastised him with, so many and so great, that the pangs of death compassed him about, the floods of Belial (the ungodly men) made him afraid, the cords of hell compassed him, the snares of death prevented him, his heart was sore pained within him, and the terrors of death fell upon him; fearfulness and trembling came upon him, and horror overwhelmed him. His life was spent with grief, his years with sighing, his strength failed, and his bones were consumed.

But always in his fears he trusted in God, and was not afraid what flesh could do unto him; in his distress he called upon the Lord, and cried to his God, who heard his voice out of his temple, and drew him out of many waters from his strong enemy, and from them that hated him, and brought him forth into a large place, and delivered him, because he delighted in him. He gave him the shield of his salvation, and girded him with strength, and gave him the necks of his enemies, that he destroyed those that hated him. Therefore he gave thanks unto the Lord among the nations, and sang praises unto his name among the people; he sang of his power, he sang loud of his mercy in the morning, that God had been his defence and refuge in the day of his distress.

And of this, the book of Psalms (most whereof David made) is a glorious testimony how he set forth the praises of God, his own faith in his word, exercise and delight in his law, with narrations of God's former and present mercies, and prophesies of future graces to be fulfilled in Christ, whom he (being a Prophet) knew that he should be the fruit of his loins concerning the flesh, and should sit upon his throne, whose incarnation, afflictions, death, resurrection, ascension, and eternal glorious kingdom and priesthood, he sang by the spirit, with such heavenly melody, as may not only delight, but draw into admiration every understanding heart, and comfort the afflicted soul with such consolation as David himself was comforted of the Lord.

And these his Psalms have ever since, by the church of Israel, by Christ and his Apostles, and by the Saints in all ages, been received and honoured as the oracles of God, cited for confirmation of true religion, and sung in the public assemblies, as in God's tabernacle and temple, where they sang praise unto the Lord, with the words of David, and with the instruments which he had made over their burnt-offerings and sacrifices.

The Psalms of David are a treasure of a peculiar kind. They are the devotional writings of a man of like passions with ourselves, under a great variety of religious experience, passing through many circumstances and conditions of life, which gave him occasion to know much of himself and of mankind; and the genuine feelings and thoughts of his heart being presented to our view in these his writings, they enable us to account for many things in our own experience, and furnish us with language to express the feelings of our minds under many of those conflicts and states, through which the human mind passes from nature's sinfulness, to a death unto sin and a life unto righteousness. And besides this, we find in them that instruction, compared with which, all that man can know is of little and will soon be of no value—the Psalms of David teach us how to pray and praise our God and Saviour; the one the most beneficial, the other the most happy employment that immortal spirits can be engaged in, short of that blissful state where holy joy and love will, with a constant increase, be expressed in heavenly songs of praise to God and to the Lamb for ever.

That which is to be observed in reading any part of the Scriptures, is in a particular manner to be kept in mind on reading the Psalms, and this is to look for the high and happy privilege which God, for his dear Son's sake, offers to us——to hold communon with Him in his word; by which the soul is led into the path of life.

CONTENTS.

To converſe with our fellow-creatures, when their ſouls are ſet on living to the glory of God, is an happy means of raiſing the ſoul into a purer air above the miſts and clouds of mere mortal life: but they who turn from creatures to the fountain of life, and converſe with the Author and Finiſher of their faith, and have communion with the true God and Jeſus Chriſt by the ſpirit, and are ever uſing his word as the means to this end, ſuch muſt find their minds ennobled from one degree to another, till they are joined to the LORD in one Spirit. (1 Cor. vi. 17.)

THE book of Pſalms begins with a deſcription of bleſſed perſons, Pſa. 1. and then ſhews wherein true bleſſedneſs does conſiſt, and the way how to attain it—By repentance and faith in the Redeemer of the world;—by becoming members of the kingdom of God's dear Son, and ſubmitting to him, Pſa. 2. And the book concludes with that which ſhall be the work of the bleſſed to all eternity.—The praiſes of God. Pſal. 145. 147. 148. 149. 150.

THE Pſalms are 150 in number:

PSALM I. The happineſs of the godly. The unhappineſs of the ungodly.—II. The kingdom of Chriſt: kings are exhorted to accept it.—III. The ſecurity of God's protection.—IV. David prayeth for audience: he reproveth and exhorteth his enemies. Man's happineſs is in God's favour.—V. David prayeth, and profeſſeth his ſtudy in prayer. God favoureth not the wicked. David, profeſſing his faith, prayeth unto God to guide him, to deſtroy his enemies, and to preſerve the godly.—VI. David's complaint in his ſickneſs: by faith he triumpheth over his enemies.—VII. David prayeth againſt the malice of his enemies, profeſſing his innocence: by faith he ſeeth his defence, and the deſtruction of his enemies.—VIII. God's glory is magnified by his works, and by his love to man.—IX. David praiſeth God for executing of judgement: he inciteth others to praiſe him, he prayeth that he may have cauſe to praiſe him.—X. David complaineth to God of the outrage of the wicked, he prayeth for remedy: he profeſſeth his confidence.—XI. David encourageth himſelf in God againſt his enemies. The providence and juſtice of God.—XII. David, deſtitute of human comfort, craveth help of God: he comforteth himſelf with God's judgements on the wicked, and confidence in God's tried promiſes.—XIII. David complaineth of delay in help: he prayeth for preventing grace: he boaſteth of divine mercy.—XIV. David deſcribeth the conception of a natural man: he convinceth the wicked by the light of their conſcience: he glorieth in the ſalvation of God.—XV. David deſcribeth a citizen of Zion.—XVI. David, in diſtruſt of merits, and hatred of idolatry, fleeth to God for preſervation: he ſheweth the hope of his calling, of the reſurrection, and life everlaſting.—XVII. PSAL. I.

V. 1. Bleſſed is the man that walketh not—Joins not with them in any evil. Nor—Continues in thoſe courſes, which they live in, who make ſin their trade and delight. Nor ſitteth—Reſolvedly perſeveres

4 The ungodly are not so: but are [e] like the chaff which the wind driveth away.

5 Therefore the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous.

6 For [f] the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous: but the way of the ungodly shall perish.

WHY [a] do the heathen * rage, and the people † imagine a vain thing?

2 The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord, and against his [b] anointed, saying,

3 [c] Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us.

4 [d] He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh: the Lord shall have them in derision.

5 Then shall he speak unto them in his wrath, and ‡ vex them in his sore displeasure.

6 Yet have I § set my king ‖ [e] upon my holy hill of Zion.

7 I will declare ‖ the decree: the Lord hath said unto me, [f] Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

8 [g] Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession.

9 [h] Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron, thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel.

10 Be wise now therefore, O ye kings: be instructed, ye judges of the earth.

11 [i] Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling.

12 [k] Kiss the son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little: [l] blessed are all they that put their trust in him.

PSAL. III.

¶ A Psalm of David, * when he fled from Absalom his son.

LORD, [a] how are they increased that trouble me? many are they that rise up against me.

perseveres to be one of them who mock and deride at all religion.

V. 2. But his delight is—In the study and practice of the word of God in all the parts of it. Meditate day and night—Diligently and constantly upon all occasions.

V. 3. And he—His soul shall be plentifully fed from heaven with the never-failing influences of grace and consolation, whereby he shall be made fruitful in every good word and work. His leaf—He shall persevere in holiness, and his happiness shall be fixed, and durable, even everlasting. Whatsoever he doeth shall prosper—Be crowned with such an issue as shall conduce most to his advantage, (Rom. viii. 28.)

V. 4. The ungodly are not so—Shall have no firm footing in any good condition. But are like the chaff—All their designs and endeavours to root themselves in the earth, shall be blasted and come to nothing.

V. 5. Therefore—Because they are ungodly. The ungodly shall not stand—Be able to justify themselves, or endure the wrath of the Almighty at the last day. Nor sinners—Have fellowship or share in the happiness of the righteous.

V. 6. For——And the reason of this different dispensation, is, because—The Lord knoweth—Approves of, and accordingly will bless and prosper them. The righteous: but the way of the ungodly—All their wicked designs and courses shall come to nothing, and they shall perish with them.

PSAL. II.

V. 1. Why do the heathen rage—It is both causeless and foolish. This psalm relates immediately to David, and the opposition he met with in his coming to the kingdom, wherein he was a type of Christ; of whom therefore it is chiefly meant. The Philistines, and others among us and about us, violently oppose my government, and refuse subjection to me. And the people—Yea, many of Israel too, entertain frivolous projects to their own destruction, particularly to hinder my government, and oppose the spiritual kingdom of Christ, which yet shall prosper. (Matth. xvi. 18.)

V. 2. The kings—The Roman governor Pilate, and Herod, and other wicked kings in all ages, resolvedly combine together. And the rulers—The Jewish rulers. Against the Lord—His counsel and command. And against his anointed—The Messiah—The Lord Jesus Christ.

V. 3. Let us break—Cast off their government, and free ourselves from subjection to their laws, which like fetters and shackles restrain us; this is the language of the human mind in its natural state, saying to the spirit of the Lord, We will not have thee to reign over us.

V. 4. He shall laugh——Despise and deride their contrivances, and fruitless attempts.

V. 5. Then—When they spun their thread to its full length, and are ripe for destruction, he will manifest his fury against them, by the punishments he inflicts upon them. Vex them—Whereby they shall be tormented both inwardly in their consciences, and outwardly in their bodies.

V. 6. Yet—In spite of them all I will establish the Messiah in his throne, in and over the church, whereof mount Zion and the temple built there, was a type. These are the words of God the Father concerning Christ. Have I—Set up my kingdom, and in this God the Son speaks in his own name.

V. 7. I will—These are also the words of God the Son. Declare—Publish and make known, partly in my own person, and partly by my ministers, to all the world my regal office. Thou art my son—Eternal Son. This day—Partly at his birth, and during his life, but chiefly at his resurrection. Have I begotten thee—Manifested and declared thee to be my Son. (Rom. i. 4.)

V. 8—10. Ask of me—By thy intercession the Gentiles shall become subjects of thy kingdom, to be redeemed, converted, governed, and saved by thee. Thou shalt break them—Such as refuse subjection to thee. Be wise now—While you have time and space for repentance and submission.

V. 11. Serve the Lord with fear—With an awful sense of his greatness and majesty, that you may be careful to please him, and fearful to offend him. And rejoice—In the sense of God's grace and goodness to you. With trembling—Lest you walk unworthy of it.

V. 12. Kiss the son——Submit to him, worship and love him. Lest he be angry—Turn that grace and favour he has offered you into heavy displeasure. And ye perish—Be cut off suddenly in the midst of your counsels. When his wrath is kindled but a little—The least spark whereof will be of dreadful consequence to the rebellious, much more when it flames out in a high degree.

2 Many there be which ſay of my ſoul, [b] There is no help for him in God. Selah.

3 But thou, O Lord, art a ſhield † for me; my glory, and [c] the lifter up of mine head.

4 I cried unto the Lord with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy hill. Selah.

5 [d] I laid me down and ſlept; I awaked, for the Lord ſuſtained me.

6 [e] I will not be afraid of ten thouſands of people, that have ſet themſelves againſt me round about.

7 Ariſe, O Lord, ſave me, O my God; [f] for thou haſt ſmitten all mine enemies upon the cheek-bone: thou haſt broken the teeth of the ungodly.

8 [g] Salvation belongeth unto the Lord: thy bleſſing is upon thy people. Selah.

¶ To the chief muſician upon Nehiloth, A pſalm of David.

GIVE ear to my words, O Lord, conſider my meditation.

2 Hearken unto the voice of my cry, my King, and my God: for unto thee will I pray.

3 [a] My voice ſhalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up.

a Pſal. 30. 5. & 130. 6.

PSAL. III.

V. 1, 2. Many—Moſt give me for loſt. There is no help for him in God—God will help me no more. Selah—Probably, this is a muſical note and direction for the raiſing up of the voice, but chiefly for the elevation of the heart, as being affixed to ſomething that deſerves obſervation; and ſo here it is the ſame as if it had been ſaid, How ſad indeed were my condition, if God ſhould not help me!

V. 3. Thou, O Lord, art my glory—The Author of that royal dignity to which I am advanced. And the lifter up of mine head—Who wilt reſtore me to my former dignity, and in the mean while doſt ſuſtain me in my troubles, that I am not overwhelmed thereby; yea, makeſt me cheerful and comfortable therein. (Luke xxi. 28.)

V. 4. The Lord heard me—This my confidence to find mercy, I care not who knows, ſo ſure am I of it.

V. 5. I laid me down—And this confidence in God my Saviour, has ſo comfortably ſecured me in my own mind, that I can ſleep quietly, and in ſafety.

V. 6, 7. Ariſe—Let it appear that I ſpeak the truth, and that thou owneſt me, by thy helping me. For—I do the more confidently now implore thy help from former experience of it. Thou haſt ſmitten—Put them to ſhame, and diſabled them from hurting me.

V. 8. Salvation—To preſerve and deliver me from this conſpiracy. Belongeth unto the Lord—O that I could believe this, and praiſe him for it.

PSAL. IV.

V. 1. O God of my righteouſneſs—The witneſs and defender of my righteous cauſe. Thou haſt enlarged me—Freed me from my former ſtraits and troubles.

V. 2. O ye ſons—Grandees. How long will ye turn—Seek to diſgrace and diſparage me for that which is my greateſt honour, viz. my deſignment for the kingdom; becauſe I am not yet put into actual poſſeſſion of the whole. How long will ye love vanity—Purſue your vain attempts to hinder me from, or diſpoſſeſs me of the kingdom. And ſeek—Endeavour, by your ſlanders and falſe reports, to make me odious.

V. 3. The Lord hath ſet apart him that is godly——Choſen my tribe, family, and perſon for the royal dignity: and alſo will own every truly pious perſon for one of his peculiar people. The Lord will hear when I call unto him—Relieve me, and give me the better of my enemies.

V. 4. Stand in awe—Be afraid of oppoſing me, and God in me, who has undertaken my cauſe and quarrel. Commune—Conſider ſeriouſly what you do. And be ſtill——Suppreſs your anger and rage againſt me, and give over oppoſing me.

V. 5. Offer the ſacrifices of righteouſneſs—Make your peace with God for your former miſcarriages, by ſacrifices offered by ſincerely holy perſons, in a right manner—by faith in the great ſacrifice made from the foundation of the world by God my Redeemer, by whoſe blood ſhedding you only can receive remiſſion of your ſins. And put your truſt in the Lord—And then truſt in him for mercy and grace, and not in your own power and policy.

V. 6. Many—The generality—Who will ſhew——Beſtow any outward good thing upon us, which they count the chiefeſt good. Lord, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us—Manifeſt thy love and favour to me and mine; for it is thy preſence that makes my heaven.

V. 7. Thou haſt put gladneſs in my heart—By the light of thy countenance. More—Above the joy of harveſt, which is a time of great rejoicing.

V. 8. I will—I am ſo comforted with the hopes of thy favour, and confident of thy faithfulneſs in protecting me, that all my troubles and dangers ſhall not diſquiet me, but I will compoſe myſelf to reſt with calmneſs of ſpirit.

PSAL. V.

V. 1, 2. O Lord, conſider my meditation—Prayer, which proceeds from my heart. Unto thee will I pray——I will never ceaſe calling upon thee, nor will I ſeek to any other but thee: being aſſured that thou wilt give whatever I aſk in humble confidence in thee, through thy beloved Son, and only delay to anſwer or refuſe

4 For thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness: neither shall evil dwell with thee.

5 [b] The foolish shall not stand * in thy sight: thou hatest all workers of iniquity.

6 Thou shalt destroy them that speak leasing: [c] the Lord will abhor † the bloody and deceitful man.

7 But as for me, I will come into thy house in the multitude of thy mercy: and in thy fear will I worship [d] toward ‡ thy holy temple.

8 Lead me, O Lord, in thy righteousness, because of § mine enemies; [e] make thy way straight before my face.

9 For there is no ‖ faithfulness * in their mouth, their inward part is ‡ very wickedness; [f] their throat is an open sepulchre, [g] they flatter with their tongue.

10 ‡ Destroy thou them, O God; let them fall § by their own counsels: cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions, for they have rebelled against thee.

11 But let all those that put their trust in thee, rejoice: let them ever shout for joy: because ‖ thou defendest them: let them also that love thy name, be joyful in thee.

12 For thou, Lord, wilt bless the righteous, with favour wilt thou * compass him, as with a shield.

¶ To the chief musician on Neginoth * † upon Sheminith, A psalm of David.

O [a] Lord, rebuke me not in thine anger, neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure.

2 Have mercy upon me, O Lord, for I am weak: O Lord, heal me, for my bones are vexed.

3 My soul is also sore vexed: but thou, O Lord, how long?

to give, when to do so is more consistent with thine own infinite wisdom and compassion.

V. 3. I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up—For a gracious answer from thee.

V. 4. For—And I expect acceptance of thee only for my Redeemer's sake. Thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness—So as to approve of those that practise it, or to hear their prayers. Neither shall evil dwell with thee—Find favour with, be acceptable to, or blessed by thee, so long as they either wilfully or carelessly continue in any known sin, and without true repentance for sins past.

V. 5. The foolish—Wicked men. Shall not stand—Be able to defend themselves when they come to be judged by thee.

V. 6. Thou shalt destroy them that speak leasing—Make it their business to raise and disperse false and scandalous reports. The Lord will abhor the bloody and deceitful man—Such as design mischief against me, or my friends, under a pretence of kindness and friendship.

V. 7. I will come into thy house—When I shall be delivered out of my troubles, which I do firmly believe will be, by thy abundant goodness and mercy to me. In the multitude of thy mercy and in thy fear—With a due sense and holy reverence of thy glorious majesty. Will I worship—Through the mediation of Christ my Lord.

V. 8. Lead me——Guide me by thy holy Spirit in the way of thy commandments, and according to thy faithfulness in the performance of thy promises; in which, if I did not entirely confide, all that has been reported to me by those that have known thee, and my own past experience of thy gracious dealings, would utterly condemn my unbelief, and leave me without excuse for doubting the truth of thy word, which all have so much cause to trust. Mine enemies—Who lay snares for me, and watch for some advantage against me. Make thy way straight—Plain and evident, that I may easily find it out, and walk uprightly therein.

V. 9. For—Otherwise I shall be ensnared by them; for they make no conscience of lying and dissembling. Their inward part—Their heart is full of all manner of wickedness; and therefore no wonder that it breaks forth at their mouth. Their throat—Their speech is most destructive and offensive. They flatter—They make a shew of friendship and piety, that they may the more easily deceive and destroy me.

V. 10. Let them fall by their own counsels—Make their counsels not only unsuccessful against me, but destructive to themselves. Cast them out—Of thy protection, and from among thy people. For they have rebelled against thee—In their opposition to me, whom thou thyself hath raised up; and by my words are they warned of their destruction, if they do not repent and sue unto thee for mercy, before their day of salvation is passed and gone for ever.

V. 11, 12. Let all those that put their trust in thee, rejoice—In their experience of thy goodness to them. Let them also that love thy name—Thy majesty, word, worship, and glory. Be joyful in thee—In their interest in thee, and thy love and favour to them, and all benefits flowing from thence: this peace and joy the natural man knoweth not of, nor can the world destroy it or take it from thy children; nay death itself, with all its terrors, will be gain unspeakable to all who are here, by thy unmerited goodness, able to rejoice in the knowledge of thy salvation.

PSAL. VI.

V. 1. O Lord chasten me in thy hot displeasure—When thou seest it necessary to afflict me, do it out of love, and according to thy fatherly compassion.

V. 2—4. My bones are vexed—The pain reaches to my bones and most inward parts. How long—Wilt thou suffer me to lie languishing in this condition? Oh save me for thy mercies sake—Deliver me from this sickness, and restore me to health and inward peace.

V. 5. For—And so shall I live to praise thee. There is no remembrance of thee in the grave—By way of thankfulness and praises before others in the land of the living.

V. 6, 7. Mine eye—My sight is decayed. Waxeth old—Is as dim as if I were grown old. Because—By reason of their multitude, rage, and treachery.

¶ To the chief musician upon Muthlabben, A psalm of David.

1018. I Will praise thee, O Lord, with my whole heart, I will shew forth all thy marvellous works.

2 I will be glad and rejoice in thee: I will sing praise to thy name, O [a] thou Most High.

3 When mine enemies are turned back, they shall fall and perish at thy presence.

4 For * thou hast maintained my right and my cause, thou sattest in the throne judging † right.

5 Thou hast rebuked the heathen, thou hast destroyed the wicked, [b] thou hast put out their name for ever and ever.

6 ‡ O thou enemy, destructions are come to a perpetual end: and thou hast destroyed cities, their memorial is perished with them.

7 [c] But the Lord shall endure for ever: he hath prepared his throne for judgment.

8 And [d] he shall judge the world in righteousness, he shall minister judgment to the people in uprightness.

9 [e] The Lord also will be § a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in times of trouble.

10 And they that know thy name will put their trust in thee: for thou, Lord, hast not forsaken them that seek thee.

Above the visible heavens; and which fills the highest heavens, where the angels celebrate thy praises, and Christ himself sits at thy right hand in glorious majesty. (Eph. iv. 10.)

V. 2. Out of the mouth—By the preachings and discourses of the disciples of Christ, who are weak, contemptible persons in the eyes of the world, thou hast made thy power wonderfully to appear, in that thou hast made use of these weak instruments to conquer, and subdue their most powerful and malicious enemies. Babes—In age and understanding. (Matth. xxi. 15, 16.) In disposition; such as resemble children in their humility, simplicity, weanedness from the world, &c. (Matth. xviii. 3. and xi. 25.) The apostles and disciples. Hast thou ordained strength—Made thy strength fully to appear in their weakness, (2 Cor. xii. 9.) which tends so much the more to the perfecting thy praise, and rendering it the more illustrious. Because of thine enemies—Thou hast endued them with this strength, that they might be able to overcome thy proudest enemies, and carry on thy work in despite of them all. Still—Confound, put to silence, and bring under all the enemies of thy people. The avenger—Such who bear an implacable enmity against thy people, and seek upon all occasions to wreak their spleen, and vent their malice upon them.

V. 3. When I consider the heavens—Such an immense, spacious, and wonderful fabric, and the place of thy glory. Which thou hast ordained—Appointed and disposed of, for their several excellent and universal uses.

V. 4. What is man—In comparison of thee, who hast manifested such infinite power, wisdom, and goodness in the making of these glorious creatures, and that for his use and service. That thou art mindful of him—Purposed to do him good. That thou visitest him—Exercisest such daily care and providence over him, and hast sent thy Son to redeem him by taking his nature, and so hast highly exalted it in the person of the Messiah.

V. 5. Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels—Restored him to his primitive condition, from which he was fallen by sin, which was but one degree below the angels; and this by thy Son's becoming for a while a little lower than the angels, by suffering death, which they are not capable of. And hast crowned him with glory and honour—And made him capable of eternal glory and happiness: by his Creator becoming his Redeemer.

V. 6. Thou madest him—Hast restored him, in and by Christ, to that right unto, and dominion over the creatures which he lost by the fall.

V. 7——9. How——In how many and sundry instances does thy power, wisdom, and goodness excel toward mankind, by what thou hast provided for him, and dost bestow upon him; furnishing every place, both above and below, throughout the whole world, with infinite store and variety of all good creatures for his sake.

PSAL. IX.

V. 1—3. Marvellous works—Wonderful deliverances wrought for me; and for thy church and people formerly. When—When the time comes that thou wilt foil them, and put them to flight. At thy presence—Upon thy appearance against them.

V. 4, 5. My right—My title to the kingdom to be right, and my cause to be honest. Rebuked the heathen—Punished my foreign enemies. The wicked—My wicked countrymen, and domestick foes. Their name—That renown they had gotten by their former exploits; yea, and sometimes destroyed their very memorial.

V. 6. Enemy—Of what sort or country soever. Destructions—All thy destructive plots and practices shall never trouble me more. Thou hast destroyed—True; thou hast formerly brought many famous places to utter ruin, and blotted out their very name from under heaven, but God shall judge thee at last.

V. 7. The Lord shall endure for ever—And this is sufficient matter of terror to the enemies, and comfort to the church. He hath prepared——He has been all this while fitting himself to execute judgment, when the time is come.

(Gal. iv. 29.)

V. 3. If the foundations be deſtroyed—Piety, juſtice, and the righteous adminiſtration of affairs be violated and overthrown. What can we do to preſerve public order? Or what can we expect but utter ruin?

V. 4. The Lord is in his holy temple—In heaven, which is ſufficient ground of hope and comfort in the worſt of times. The Lord's eyes behold the children of men—Sees innocency to reward it, and wickedneſs to defeat and puniſh it.

V. 5, 6. The Lord trieth the righteous—Takes ſpecial notice of him and his cauſe, to approve both him and it: and ſends him ſuch trials as ſhall prove the integrity of his heart, and make his faithfulneſs to God, and his upright dealings to all the world, appear both to angels and men. Upon the wicked he ſhall rain ſnares—Grievous judgments. Fire and brimſtone—Dreadful judgments in this world, and eternal vengeance in the world to come.

V. 7. For the righteous Lord loveth righteouſneſs—All that open their hearts to the influence of his grace, and do his holy will on earth, as it is done in heaven; he beholds them and loves the image of his Son in them; and the fruits of his Spirit appearing in their lives, renders them acceptable to God in Jeſus their living head, whoſe example they are carefully following. His countenance doth behold the upright—With favour and affection to defend and reward them.

HOW long wilt thou forget me, O Lord, for ever? [a] how long wilt thou hide thy face from me?

3 Consider, and hear me, O Lord, my God: lighten mine eyes, [b] lest I sleep the sleep of death;

4 [c] Lest mine enemy say, I have prevailed against him; and those that trouble me, rejoice when I am moved.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

THE [a] fool hath said in his heart, There is no God: [b] they are corrupt, they have done abominable works, there is none that doeth good.

2 [c] The Lord looked down from heaven upon the children of men; to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God.

3 They are all gone aside, they are all together become * filthy: [d] there is none that doeth good, no not one.

V. 2. They speak vanity—They seek, by lies and falshood, to do me a mischief A double heart—Pretending one thing and intending another.

V. 3. The tongue that speaketh proud things—Boasting of their own abilities, and what great things they will do.

V. 4. With our tongue will we prevail——By our slanders and reports we shall set both Saul and the people against him, and so destroy him. Our lips are our own—To speak without controul. Who is Lord over us—We acknowledge no superior. And this is the language of their lips and of their lives who neither know nor fear God; and are ignorant that for all they think, and say, and do, they must soon give an account of themselves to God, to whose judgment-seat all the living approach nearer and nearer, in every breath they draw.

V. 5. For—But this shall be the issue, that God will help. The poor—Speedily, and sooner than they imagine.

V. 6. The words of the Lord—The promises which God has made to me and his people have no deceit in them, but shall certainly be fulfilled in their season. Are pure words: as silver tried—And so purified from all dross of fraud and uncertainty.

V. 7. Thou shalt keep—Preserve the poor and needy from the malice of their enemies. From this generation—This kind of scornful oppressors.

V. 8. The wicked walk—Abound every where, and shew themselves openly without any check or restraint; they are countenanced and encouraged in their wickedness. The vilest men are exalted—Are advanced to places of authority and trust.

PSAL. XIII.

V. 1, 2. How long shall I take counsel—Be always consulting and considering which way to get out of my troubles, but can resolve upon nothing.

V. 3. O Lord, my God: lighten mine eyes—Vouchsafe some comfort and refreshment to me, by my deliverance out of trouble, and preservation of my life.

V. 4, 5. Moved—Overthrown. I have trusted in thy mercy—In the times that are past, and I have ever found thee faithful and most gracious to me; therefore for the time to come, My heart shall rejoice in thy salvation—The assurance that I have, that thou wilt preserve, and in due time deliver me.

V. 6. The Lord hath dealt bountifully with me—Which I am as sure of, as if it were already done.

PSAL. XIV.

V. 1. The fool—All men in their natural condition, and every wicked man. Hath said—Does not firmly believe that there is a God, or at least, that he is the governor of the world, to observe and reward, as appears by the impiety of his life. They are corrupt—In their hearts, and hence flows all manner of wickedness in their lives. There is none that doeth good—Till they are endued with grace to do that which is spiritually good, and acceptable to God. Works done before the grace of Christ and the inspiration of his Spirit, are not pleasing to God; because without this nothing is, or can be done as God willeth: Whatsoever is not of faith, (Rom. xiv. 23 as a living principle in the heart, having for its object the Mediator between God and man) is sinful in itself; because all that proceeds not from grace, proceeds from the heart of man, which is deceitful and desperately wicked. On this see the XIIIth Article of the Church of England.

V. 2. The Lord looked—Made trial in the first ages of the world, from Adam to the giving of the law. Any that did understand—Had any right apprehensions of God, so as to love, fear, trust, and obey him. And seek God—Labour to know and worship him as their Redeemer, get an interest in him, partake of his grace and favour, and enjoy communion with him.

V. 3, 4. Become filthy—Loathsome and abominable to God and all good men. There is none that doeth good, no not one—There is no exception from the general corruption—by nature all are evil. (Mark vii. 21.) No knowledge—Of me, or their own duty or interest. Who eat up—Oppress and undo my subjects. As they eat bread—Freely without fear or regret; with greediness and delight. And call not upon the Lord—Neglect God's worship; despise it.

V. 5. There—While they were practising these impieties, they were seized upon with a groundless fear. For God is in the generation ration of the righteous—Becauſe God appears ſo remarkably many times for his ſervants. And hereafter he ſhall appear to be their God, their Father, and their Friend, before the aſſembled hoſts of heaven, and in the ſight of the ſpirits of all the juſt for ever.

V. 6. You have ſhamed—Derided him for his truſting in God, and laughed at thoſe that made conſcience of their duty.

V. 7. O that the ſalvation of Iſrael were come—O that the time were come for the full deliverance of all God's people out of all their troubles, both temporal and ſpiritual. Out of Zion—From God that dwells in heaven. The Lord bringeth back the captivity of his people—Delivers them from that bondage and ſlavery wherein they are held by ſin and ſatan.

PSAL. XV.

V. 1. Who ſhall abide—Be accounted a true member of the kingdom of grace here, and glory hereafter.

V. 2. Uprightly—Sincerely, as the covenant of grace requires. And worketh righteouſneſs—Makes it his buſineſs to do juſtly. To render unto God the praiſes due unto his name, loving him and doing his will from the heart, and giving unto all their due. Speaketh the truth in his heart—According to what he thinks in his heart: his heart and tongue agree.

V. 3. Nor taketh up a reproach—Neither into his ears, to hearken to it; nor into his tongue, to ſpread it. (Rom. i. 30.)

V. 4. In whoſe eyes—That gives no countenance or encouragement to wickedneſs, or wicked men, but declares againſt it and them. Contemned—In reſpect of his wickedneſs; though in other reſpects he may be reverenced. Honoureth—Highly eſteems, heartily loves, and ſhews great reſpect and kindneſs to them for their goodneſs ſake, though they be never ſo mean in the world. He that ſweareth to his own hurt—When he has ſworn, or laid any obligation upon himſelf, though it tend to his own prejudice, yet he will make good his engagement.

V. 5. Putteth not—Does not violate the laws of charity and juſtice, but lends to them that are in want, without taking advantage of their neceſſity. Nor taketh reward againſt the innocent—Being in office or place of judicature, gives judgment uprightly, not ſuffering himſelf to be perverted by bribes. He that doeth theſe things, ſhall never be moved—He that hath fled for mercy to the hope ſet before them, and continueth to live by faith in God his Saviour, humbly depending upon his grace to help him, he ſhall never be moved from that happy condition in which he is placed. (2 Pet. i. 10.)

PSAL. XVI.

V. 1, 2. Thou art my Lord—I have choſen thee for my Lord, to ſerve thee, and be ſaved by thee. My goodneſs extendeth not to thee—I renounce all worth and goodneſs of my own, as any way meritorious for myſelf, or beneficial to thee, to lay any obligation upon thee.

V. 4. Their ſorrows—Idolaters, notwithſtanding all their zeal and coſt about their idols, gain nothing to themſelves but ſorrow and miſery. Their drink-offerings of blood—I will have no communion with them in their idolatrous worſhip. I will not—The heathens uſed to offer, and ſometimes to drink part of the blood of their ſacrifices: that never-to-be forgotten truth—that without bloodſhedding there is no remiſſion of ſin, being made clearly known from God to man after his fall, and faith in the atonement made by the Lamb ſlain from the foundation of the world, being the conſtant ſubject of the believers in all ages, ſatan, the deceiver of mankind, ever bent upon their deſtruction, has always endeavoured to lead men from the Author of life and ſalvation, by inducing them to ſubſtitute ſome reſemblance to the true worſhip, and then he more eaſily prevails with others to follow their inventions: and the fairer ſhew his idolatrous worſhip makes, and the nearer it is made to reſemble the true, the more likely is it to miſlead the mind, and divert mankind from looking to the Author and Finiſher of their faith, Jeſus Chriſt the only Saviour of the fallen ſinful race of man.

V. 5. The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance—He whom I have choſen for my happineſs, and who has beſtowed himſelf upon me, wherewith I am abundantly ſatisfied. Thou maintaineſt my lot—Preſerveſt me in my right to, and poſſeſſion of thyſelf.

V. 6. The lines—In having thee for my everlaſting portion, and in having my habitation in the land of Iſrael, a pleaſant land, and the place which thou haſt choſen for thy dwelling and worſhip, I am fully ſatisfied both in temporal and ſpiritual reſpects.

V. 7. The Lord hath given me counſel—Revealed to me the way of life and ſalvation, and inclined me to chooſe him for my portion.

8 [g] I have set the Lord always before me: because [h] he is at my right hand, [i] I shall not be moved.

Title. David the servant of the Lord—One wholly devoted to the service of God, both in his private and public capacity. In the day that the Lord delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul—Who was the most bitter and dangerous: and in these words may all address the God of their salvation, when by his grace he delivers them from evil, from the sin which did most easily beset them, and makes them partakers of the divine nature—the mind that was in Jesus. (Phil. ii. 5.)

V. 1, 2. The Lord is my rock—Protection from evil and foundation of good. My fortress—To defend me against all assaults. The horn of my salvation—He who saves and secures me.

V. 3, 4. The sorrows of death—Malicious enemies threatening present death and destruction to me. The floods of ungodly—The outrageous attempts of graceless and lawless persons struck terror into me.

V. 5. The sorrows of hell compassed me—Brought me to the very brink of the grave. The snares of death—Laid to take away my life, were ready to catch me before I was aware of my danger.

V. 6, 7. Then the earth shook—God appeared so wonderfully and miraculously for me, and manifested such displeasure against my enemies, as if he had sent some terrible earthquake. A poetical description to v. 16. of God's powerful appearing for him, and how he had appeared formerly for his people. Because he was wroth—Manifested his displeasure against my enemies.

V. 8, 9. There went up a smoke—He consumed my enemies as with fire and lightning. He bowed—He manifested his presence and power on my behalf. Darkness was under his feet—He used invisible and secret ways to rescue me.

V. 10—12. He rode upon a cherub—He used the ministry of angels in this work. Did fly—Came speedily to my rescue. He made darkness—He appeared terrible in dark watry clouds. At the brightness—At his glorious and powerful appearance, like lightning. Coals of fire—Flashes of lightning, like coals of fire, passed to and fro.

V. 13, 14. The Highest gave his voice—Which he utters for the terror of his proud enemies. He sent out his arrows—Lightnings.

V. 15, 16. Then the channels of waters were seen—He made the sea itself fordable for his people's safe passage, and his enemies ruin. At the blast of the breath of thy nostrils—By the winds that he raised to stop the course of the waters; and his spirit who did this, can by his powerful influence convert the foul, and sinful as it is by nature, he can remove all inbred corruption as he did the waters of the ſea out of their place, and keep them from returning upon thoſe that truſt in him. He ſent from above——He reached out help to me, even from heaven, in a miraculous manner. He drew me out of many waters—Delivered me from manifold and great dangers, and from the ſtrivings of the people. (Rev. xvii. 15.)

V. 17—19. My ſtrong enemy—Saul. They prevented me—They were beforehand with me in their cunning plots, and had almoſt ſurpriſed me. He brought me into a large place—He ſet me in a ſtate of liberty and freedom from thoſe ſtraits I was in; and ſo enlarging my heart with joy and gladneſs.

V. 20—23. My righteouſneſs—Innocence and uprightneſs in reſpect of my enemies. The cleanneſs of my hands—Juſt dealings with them. I have not wickedly departed from my God—Reſolvedly, purpoſely, delightfully, ſtubbornly; as wicked men do His judgments were before me—His word and law, according to which he will judge. I was alſo upright before him—Did approve myſelf to him. I kept myſelf from mine iniquity—That ſin which I am moſt eaſily overcome by; I not only did not commit ſin, but kept at the utmoſt diſtance from whatever I knew would offend God and grieve his holy Spirit, by which I was warned of my danger and enabled to ſhun it.

V. 24, 25. With the merciful thou wilt ſhew thyſelf merciful——Bleſſed are the merciful, for they ſhall obtain mercy—forgive and you ſhall be forgiven; yield a faithful obedience to his holy Spirit, by which you are influenced to ſhew mercy and to forgive, and by that grace which thus you receive, you ſhall have power to become the Sons of God. (John i. 12.) With an upright man thou wilt ſhew thyſelf upright——He that exerciſes faith and love towards thee, ſhall find both love and faithfulneſs from thee again; and therefore ſince by thy grace I have behaved myſelf thus, I may aſſuredly expect that thou wilt deal with me accordingly.

V. 26. With the pure—All that live with a ſingle eye—a pure intention and deſire to pleaſe thee, and to have fellowſhip with the Father and the Son by the Spirit; to theſe thou wilt ſhew thyſelf pure. Pure——Free from the leaſt mixture or appearance of unrighteouſneſs, unfaithfulneſs, or unkindneſs. With the froward—Him that proudly and perverſly diſobeys thy commands, and ſets himſelf in a way diſpleaſing to thee. Shew thyſelf froward—Puniſh him accordingly.

V. 27, 28. Thou wilt ſave the afflicted——One unjuſtly oppreſt by his mighty enemies. High looks—Proud perſons, who diſcover the pride of their hearts by their haughty looks; (and ſuch are my enemies.) Thou wilt light my candle—Make my condition proſperous. My God will enlighten my darkneſs—Comfort me in my afflictions, and bring me into a proſperous condition.

V. 29, 30. For—By experience of what thou haſt done I judge of what thou wilt do. By thee I have—Been enabled to overcome the greateſt difficulties. As for God, his way is perfect—Fulfilling his promiſes to a tittle; and ever governing all events for the beſt poſſible ends, by means that are ever the wiſeſt, the pureſt, and the beſt: and bleſſed are they who ſo entirely believe this as to ſtay themſelves upon Him, and whoſe hearts on all occaſions ſay, It is the Lord, let him do what ſeemeth him good. The word of the Lord is tried—It has been proved ſo often under all circumſtances to be true, that to diſtruſt it is to render ourſelves inexcuſable to God. He is a buckler——A ſafeguard and a defence, to all thoſe that truſt in him——Believe in him—commit themſelves to him in well-doing.

V. 31, 32. God maketh my way perfect—Proſperous and ſucceſsful, ſo that I fail not to accompliſh and perfect what I undertake.

V. 33, 34. He maketh—Enables me to diſpatch all my material affairs with eaſe and expedition. Setteth me upon my high places—Enables me to rejoice in him as my ſalvation. He teacheth—Has beſtowed military ſkill and conduct upon me, much above my education.

V. 35. The ſhield—Thy ſafeguard and protection. Thy right hand hath holden me——That I might not fall into thoſe dangers that threatened me. Thy gentleneſs—Thy clemency, whereby thou haſt

37 I have purſued mine enemies, and overtaken them: neither did I turn again till they were conſumed.

38 I have wounded them that they were not able to riſe: they are fallen under my feet.

39 For thou haſt girded me with ſtrength unto battle: thou haſt ‡ ſubdued under me thoſe that roſe up againſt me.

40 Thou haſt alſo given me the necks of mine enemies: that I might deſtroy them that hate me.

41 They cried, but there was none to ſave them: [h] even unto the Lord, but he anſwered them not.

42 Then did I beat them ſmall as the duſt before the wind; I did [i] caſt them out as the dirt in the ſtreets.

PSAL. XIX.

Title. Containing a ſweet meditation concerning the glory of God ſhining in the work of creation and providence, but eſpecially in the holy ſcriptures.

V. 1. Firmament—The viſible heavens afford matter and occaſion, in reſpect of their vaſt extent, glorious furniture, and powerful influences, to acknowledge and admire the glorious being, infinite wiſdom, and goodneſs of God. His handy-work—That they are the workmanſhip of an almighty all-wiſe God.

V. 2. Day and night—Every day and night ſucceſſively one after another, produced by the motion of the heavens, do as it were ſpeak aloud and proclaim conſtantly and abundantly the praiſes of their Creator. Sheweth knowledge—Evidently teach us, that there is a God, and that he is of infinite perfections.

V. 3. There is no ſpeech—There is no nation under heaven, however their languages are different and unintelligible one to another, to whom theſe things are not intelligible.

V. 4. Their line—That inſtruction which they give us, as by ſo many lines in a book; as the next clauſe explains it, reaches to all nations. He ſet a tabernacle for the ſun—Which is a moveable habitation, and therefore fitly applied to the ſun, which is in perpetual motion, v. 5, 6. and does not ſtand ſtill.

V. 5. As a bridegroom—Glorioufly adorned with the attire of light, heat, and influence, for the refreſhing the earth, and making it fruitful. Chamber—Where it has as it were lain hid all night. And rejoiceth—As being confident beforehand of victory.

V. 6. His going—His riſing is to the eaſt, and ſo fetches a compaſs to the weſt. There is nothing hid from the heat thereof—His piercing heat, in this his motion, reaches to the very loweſt parts of the earth, concocting minerals, and quickening vegetables, ſo that nothing is hid ſo deeply in the bowels of the earth, but does partake of his powerful influence.

V. 7. The law of the Lord—But, though the works of God do ſo evidently proclaim his glory, and teach ſo much of him; yet this is much more particularly and effectually done by his word, revealed to the church. Is perfect—Without fault or defect, and converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple.

8 The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart: [e] the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes.

9 The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring for ever: the judgments of the Lord are ‡ true and righteous altogether.

10 More to be desired are they than gold, [f] yea, than much fine gold: [g] sweeter also than honey, and † the honey-comb.

11 Moreover, by them is thy servant warned: and in keeping of them there is great reward.

12 [h] Who can understand his errors? cleanse thou me from [i] secret faults.

13 Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins, [k] let them not have dominion over me: then shall I be upright, and I shall be innocent from § the great transgression.

fully revealing to us the perfect and infallible way of life, and all things necessary to salvation, which the book of the creatures could not do. Converting the soul—Turning them from the misery of their natural condition, and bringing them into a state of favour and reconciliation with God, by directing them to himself, the fountain of living waters, to be baptized by his all-cleansing, healing, quickning Spirit. (John i. 33.) The testimony—The word, which testifies or declares what is to be known, believed, practised, and expected by us. Is sure——Of unquestionable truth, and so may be safely relied upon, and will infallibly bring to happiness if attended to. Making wise the simple—Sinful creatures, who have lost their understandings in spiritual things; yea, even those of the shallowest capacities, who, being sensible of their ignorance, do sincerely give up themselves to the instructions of the word of God, applied by his grace to their hearts and minds, making them wise unto salvation. (2 Tim. iii. 15.)

V. 8. The statutes of the Lord are right—Those laws which God has enacted in his word, that shew both our duty and our reward, are free from error, and shew the right way to happiness. Rejoicing the heart—By the manifold comforts contained therein. The commandment of the Lord is pure—Free from all mixture of any thing that might corrupt and defile it. Enlightning the eyes——Teaching all things necessary to salvation.

V. 9. The fear of the Lord—The holy law of God which works a due fear of God, and teaches men how to worship him. Is clean—Not requiring or allowing any wickedness, but cleansing from it. Enduring for ever—Not subject to such changes as human laws are, but the same for substance in all ages. The judgments of the Lord are true—The precepts and directions of the word, according to which God now governs the world, and will judge it at last. And righteous—Shewing what is just and righteous, and tending to make man such.

V. 10—12. By them is thy servant warned—I myself, and every one that desires to approve himself thy servant, is directed how to steer his course aright in every condition. In keeping of them there is great reward—The very exercise of piety is profitable, and delightful. Who can understand his errors—His transgressions against this pure and perfect law. Cleanse thou me from secret faults—Pardon my unknown sins.

V. 13. Keep back—Curb and restrain my natural inclinations to sins against knowledge, and with deliberation. Let them not have dominion over me—That I should yield up myself to be a slave to them. Then shall I be upright—Being thus pardoned and sanctified, I shall manifest myself both to others and my own soul, to be a sincere, upright person, notwithstanding my manifold past failings. From the great transgression—The guilt of presumptuous sins, which are heinous transgressions.

V. 14. Let—Not only my outward actions, but my words and thoughts be answerable to thy will and acceptable to thee. O Lord, my strength and my redeemer—Who alone canst enable me hereto. Who will deliver me from all my spiritual enemies.

Title. A Psalm of David——To be used by the people for the king.

V. 1. The Lord hear thee—Thee, O king. The name of the God of Jacob defend thee—The grace and providence of that God who is in covenant with his people, which he shewed to our father Jacob, and promised to us his seed.

V. 2—4. According to thine own heart—The success thou desirest; so far as may stand with his good pleasure. All thy counsel—Designs for his glory and his people's good.

V. 5. We will rejoice in thy salvation—In confidence and assurance that God will protect thee, and that by thy means we shall enjoy safety and deliverance from dangers. In the name of our God we will set up our banners—In confidence of victory, and token of triumph.

V. 6. Now know I—Every one in particular shall say, I am already assured, by former experiences, and consideration of God's power, faithfulness and love, that God will preserve our king.

V. 7—9. We will remember the name of the Lord—So as to trust in him. They are brought down——That boasted of their own strength, and trusted in it. Save, Lord—Both us and our king. Let the king hear us when we call—Be both willing and able to help us whensoever we have occasion to seek to him for it.

9 Save, Lord; let the King hear us when we call.

V. 4, 5. He asked life—When he was many times in imminent danger of death by his enemies. Even length of days for ever—A long life here on earth, and assurance of eternal life in heaven. His glory is great in thy salvation—His renown is greatly spread abroad by reason of those wonderful deliverances vouchsafed to him, and favours conferred on him.

V. 6—9. Thou hast made him glad with thy countenance—The discoveries of thy love and favour to him. Thine hand—Thy power, O God, shall meet with and punish. Thou shalt make them as a fiery oven—Bring unavoidable destruction upon them.

V. 10—13. Their fruit—Posterity. They intended evil—Men may be punished for their evil intentions, though they cannot bring them into action. Against thee—In thy people. Be thou exalted, O Lord, in thine own strength—The manifestation thereof in behalf of thy king and people.

PSAL. XXII.

V. 1. My God—Whom still I own, cleave unto, and claim an interest in. Why hast thou forsaken me—Not in respect of union, or communion, but the comfortable sense of thy love, which I have always hitherto enjoyed, and hast filled me with the sense of thy wrath. Why art thou so far from the words of my roaring—The first words in this verse, are the same words which Jesus made use of when upon the cross, (Matth. xxvii. 46.) and these latter words are applied to the Lord, (Heb. v. 7.) in the days of his flesh, when he had offered up prayers and supplications, with strong crying and tears unto him that was able to save him from death, and was heard in that he feared.

V. 2. Thou hearest not—According to the judgment of sense, or, seemest not to hear.

V. 3. But thou art holy—Free from the least shadow of sin, and consequently faithful in keeping covenant; and therefore I may encourage myself to wait upon thee for audience. That inhabitest the praises of Israel—Whom thy people are continually praising for one mercy or other; and therefore I hope I shall have occasion to praise thee also.

V. 4—6. I am—Though they were delivered, yet it is not so with me. A worm—Dealt with like the most contemptible creature, and trampled underfoot.

V. 7. They shoot out the lip—Make mouths at me.

V. 8. The Lord delighted in him—As he used to alledge and boast, but how vainly the event now shews. The words of this verse are in substance the same as those that were used by the people would deliver him: [h] let him deliver him, § seeing he delighted in him.

9 [i] But thou art he that took me out of the womb; thou ‡ didst make me hope, when I was upon my mother's breasts.

10 I was cast upon thee from the womb: [k] thou art my God from my mother's belly.

11 Be not far from me, for trouble is near; for there is ‖ none to help.

12 [l] Many bulls have compassed me: strong bulls of Bashan have beset me round.

13 [m] They ‡ gaped upon me with their mouths, as a ravening and a roaring lion.

14 I am poured out like water, [n] and all my bones are § out of joint: [o] my heart is like wax, it is melted in the midst of my bowels.

15 [p] My strength is dried up like a potsherd: and [q] my tongue cleaveth to my jaws; and thou hast brought me into the dust of death.

16 For dogs have compassed me, the assembly of the wicked have inclosed me: [r] they pierced my hands and my feet.

17 I may tell all my bones: [s] they look and stare upon me.

18 [t] They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture.

19 But be not thou far from me, O Lord; O my strength, haste thee to help me.

20 Deliver my soul from the sword: [u] § my darling ‖ from the power of the dog.

21 [x] Save me from the lions mouth: [y] for thou hast heard me from the horns of the unicorns.

22 [z] I will declare thy name unto [a] my brethren: in the midst of the congregation will I praise thee.

23 Ye that fear the Lord, praise him; all ye the seed of Jacob, glorify him; and fear him, all ye the seed of Israel.

24 For he hath not despised nor abhorred the affliction of the afflicted: neither hath he hid his face from him, but [b] when he cried unto him, he heard.

25 [c] My praise shall be of thee in the great congregation: [d] I will pay my vows before them that fear him.

26 [e] The meek shall eat and be satisfied: they shall praise the Lord that seek him; your heart shall live for ever.

27 [f] All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord: [g] and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee.

ple that reviled the Lord Jesus on the cross. (Matth. xxvii. 43.)

V. 9. That took me—By the miraculous operation of the Holy Ghost, who formed me there. Thou didst make me hope—Gavest me ground to hope and trust in thee, by reason of thy wonderful and watchful care over me.

V. 10. I was cast upon thee—My mother and supposed father being unable of themselves to protect and provide for me, without thy special providence.

V. 11—13. Bulls—Powerful and furious enemies. They gaped upon me—This may be meant of the devil's assaulting Christ at his death; of which he speaks, (John xiv 30.) saying, The prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me.

V. 14, 15. I am poured out—My spirits are spent, and I am left as weak as water. My strength—My moisture is wasted by my sufferings. My tongue cleaveth—Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst. (John xix. 28.) Thou hast brought me—By delivering me to the power of my enemies, and by thy terrors in my mind and soul. Into the dust—The grave, where dead men lie.

V. 16. Dogs—A company of vile malicious men.

V. 17—20. I may tell all my bones—By being stretched upon the cross. They look—With delight in my misery. They part my garments—This was done by the soldiers that attended the crucifixion of Jesus. (John xix. 24.) The sword—The rage and violence of my enemies.

V. 21. The lion's mouth—The furious assaults of satan, or the rage of my enemies. Thou hast heard me—When I was exposed to the rage and power of satan, and those that were continually set against me by his temptations, and the natural enmity of their hearts. (Matth. iv. 1, &c. John vii. 30.)

V. 22. I will declare—Make known, both in my own person, and by my ambassadors, to the end of the world, thy grace and mercy to mankind, for whom I came upon earth to suffer and die, that by the atonement made by the shedding of my blood, infinite justice might be satisfied, and salvation be ascribed to God and the Lamb for ever. My brethren—My disciples and all true believers. In the midst—Publicly, among the people of God. Will I praise thee—This was done by the Lord Jesus, when it is said of him and his disciples, That they sung an hymn. (Matth. xxvi. 30.)

V. 23. Ye that fear the Lord, praise him—For those benefits you have received by me.

V. 24. Despised nor abhorred—As men do, but laid to heart, and helped me. The afflicted—Me his Son, in my trouble. Neither hath he hid his face—But looked upon me and my affliction with compassion. He heard—And graciously answered all my desires. (Heb. v. 7.)

V. 25. My praise—I will celebrate thy praises, and preach the gospel, by my ministers, in the universal church both of Jews and Gentiles. I will pay my vows—Of praise and service, which I made in my distress.

V. 26. The meek—Such whose fierce unruly spirits are tamed and subdued by the grace of God, and made gentle, patient, and submissive to God's hand and word, and are willing and desirous to be directed and governed by him. Eat—Partake of the blessings of the gospel, Christ, with all his benefits, whereby they shall be abundantly refreshed. Your heart shall live for ever—Be greatly comforted with never-failing consolations. (John iv. 14.)

V. 27. All the ends of the world—All nations from one end of the world to the other. Remember—Some of them shall call to mind, consider and be affected with their manifold heinous sins, and their lost condition. And turn unto the Lord—By repentance and faith—Repentance towards God, turning by his grace from all known sin; and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, for whose sake the greatest sinners, by repentance and faith, shall be saved. (Acts xx. 21.)

V. 28. He is the governor among the nations—Gentiles as well

28 [h] For the kingdom is the Lord's: and he is the governor among the nations.

29 [i] All they that be fat upon earth, shall eat and worship: [k] all they that go down to the dust shall bow before him, and none can keep alive his own soul.

as Jews; and therefore shall set up his spiritual kingdom among them also.

V. 29. All they that be fat—Even many of the rich of the world. Shall eat and worship—Embrace the gospel, and submit to the sceptre of Christ. (Rev. xxi. 24.) They that go down——Such as are poor, and in great misery and distress, shall own, submit to, and adore him as their supreme Lord. (Phil. ii. 10.) And none can keep alive his own soul—Be able to help and save himself: all are dependant on him their common Lord and Saviour for the gift of spiritual life, and for the continuance of it: by faith in him can the strongest as well as the weakest only stand: without him to forgive, all would be condemned: without him to save by his grace, all would be lost.

V. 30. A seed shall serve him—Christ shall have some in all nations and ages of the world to worship and serve him: the Lord never was without witnesses: out of the mouths of babes his praise has been published for his power and infinite willingness to save. A generation—Of his people.

V. 31. They shall come—Some or other of them from time to time, the apostles and ministers of the gospel; and such as have by the spirit been made acquainted with the true God and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent. (John xvii. 3.) Declare his righteousness—That way of becoming righteous, that God has established under the gospel, by faith in Christ: the righteousness of God revealed from heaven, from faith to faith; by which the just shall live. (Rom. i. 17.) A people that shall be born—Succeding generations one after another. That he hath done this—That our salvation is his work alone. And happy are they that are made sensible of the inexpressible obligation, and, in consequence of being so, love the Lord their God and Saviour with all their hearts, and devote all the powers of their souls, with all the talents he has given them, to do his good and acceptable will on earth as it is done in heaven.

PSAL. XXIII.

Composed when he was quietly settled on the throne.

V. 1. The Lord is my shepherd—He provides for me, brings me out of the wrong way, and guides me in the right. I shall not want—Any thing that is truly good for me: the desire of my soul being after the God of my salvation—his kingdom, grace here, and his kingdom of glory hereafter, all other things shall be added to me; and so long as thus I live to my God alone, out of his fulness he will supply all my need, according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus. (Matth. vi. 33. Phil. iv. 19.)

V. 2. He—He has made plentiful provision for me, both in respect of soul and body, not only for necessity, but delight. He leadeth me——Has brought me into a safe and happy condition, void of danger, and full of outward and inward tranquillity: And thus shall it be with the redeemed for ever: the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes. (Rev. vii. 17.) Who can sorrow that hath this hope?

V. 3. He restoreth—Raised me from a languishing and dejected to a comfortable condition. Paths—Right paths, agreeable to his word, and will bring us at length to eternal happiness. For his name's sake—To manifest his grace, mercy, power, and love to all that look to him through his beloved Son, for whose sake he will freely give us all things. (Rom. viii. 32.)

V. 4. The valley--In the depth of the most terrible and affrighting dangers. Thou art with me—And therefore no evil can betal me. (Isa. xliii. 2.) Thy rod and thy staff—Those means or instruments which thou makest use of in thy care over me.

V. 5. In the presence of mine enemies—In spite of all their envy, rage, and malice against me. Thou anointest—Bestowest upon me the consolations of thy spirit. My cup runneth over—I have a plentiful portion: I see myself deserving of nothing, and yet thy bounty has left me nothing to ask.

V. 6. Surely goodness—The favour of God, and all the comfortable fruits and effects thereof, shall attend upon me wherever I am. I will dwell—I promise myself, that I shall now constantly enjoy that blessed privilege of serving and enjoying God in his sanctuary; and accordingly I will diligently attend upon him there.

PSAL. XXIV.

Penned to be sung when the temple was built, and the ark brought into it.

V. 1. The fulness—All creatures; and especially its reasonable inhabitants wherewith it is replenished; and therefore God's singular kindness to Israel, in choosing them above all others, is so much the more remarkable.

V. 2. The seas——Which being lighter than the earth, should naturally be above it; but God has so ordered it that the waters

9 The meek will he guide in judgment: and the meek will he teach his way.

10 All run down into channels, and caverns, and the bowels of the earth, so that the earth seems to stand upon the waters. (Gen. vii. 11.)

V. 3. Who—Though all the inhabitants of the world be the Lord's, and so bound to serve him; yet who are they that may and will do it acceptably, and whom he will own for his true servants? Ascend—Be admitted and accounted a true member of the church. Stand—Serve him acceptably and with advantage to themselves.

V. 4. Clean hands—A holy and unblameable conversation, free from all unrighteous and unjust dealings: A pure heart——Free from hypocrisy and all inward pollutions; being purified by faith, (Acts xv. 9.) and the sanctifying grace of God. Lift up his soul unto vanity—Set his affections immoderately and greedily on the empty, unprofitable things of this world. Nor sworn deceitfully—With a purpose to deceive.

V. 5. The blessing——He and he only shall be truly blessed. Righteousness——The reward of his righteousness, which God as a righteous Judge will bestow. (2 Tim. iv. 8.)

V. 6. This is the generation—Those before described are the persons, or sort of men, that do truly and acceptably seek and serve God; and not every one that is naturally descended from Abram or Jacob. (Matth. iii. 9. Rom. ix. 6, 7, 8.) O Jacob——Or, This is Jacob, The true church and people of God.

V. 7. Lift up—All ye, the true members of the church, raise up your hearts and souls, which are of an everlasting, immortal nature, from all earthly things, and set them wide open, (Rev. iii. 20.) to give full, free, and joyful entertainment to Christ, the Lord of glory, (James ii. 1.) as your Lord and King. A poetical passage, spoken with allusion to the entrance of the ark into the temple, when it should be built.

V. 8. The Lord strong and mighty—Who is able to destroy all those that will not submit to him, and to protect his people against all their enemies, and to make them victorious over them all.

PSAL. XXV.

Penned when he was in great distress; which makes him reflect upon his sins, the cause thereof, and beg pardon for them. His petitions are mingled with many sweet meditations.

V. 1, 2. I lift up my soul—Direct and make known my desires and prayers with hope of audience. Let me not be ashamed—Of my trust in thee, which I shall be, if I am disappointed of my expectations of relief and support from thee, O my God, who hast never failed them that put their trust in thy goodness and faithfulness. And if I am left and forsaken of thee, shame and confusion will cover me; as one to whom even thou canst not be gracious.

V. 3. Let none that wait—Patiently expect to see what the issue of thy dealings with me will be. Be ashamed—Frustrated in their wicked designs and carnal confidences. Which transgress—Oppose me and my government.

V. 4. Shew me—Teach me my duty, and cause me to keep close to it, notwithstanding all temptations to the contrary.

V. 5. Lead me in thy truth—In the right way prescribed in thy word, which is truth. (John xvii. 17.)

V. 6. Remember—(Isai. xliii. 26.) Consider thy own merciful nature, and thy former manifold favours vouchsafed to me and to other miserable sinners, and do to me, and all truly penitent minds, as graciously as thou hast always done, even from everlasting. (2 Tim. i. 9.)

V. 7. Transgressions—Any other sins committed since.

V. 8. Good and upright is the Lord—Gracious to sinners, and ready to do them good, and also sincere in all his promises and tenders of mercy to sinners, and ready to make them good. Teach—Guide by his word, spirit, and gracious providence, sensible humbled sinners.

V. 9. The meek will he teach his way—So as that they shall be able to discern and judge which is the right way; and then to walk in the way of his commandments, called his judgments. The way that God prescribes for the meek to walk in; and in which the meek will alone be taught to walk: none but the humble walk with God: the proud resist his grace, and so long as they remain in that spirit, they are resisted by him who only can guide and save poor, vain, sinful men.

V. 10. The paths of the Lord—Dealings and dispensations; even those that are most grievous and distasteful to flesh and blood. Are mercy and truth—The issue and product of God's goodness and faithfulness; being for our profit. (Heb. xii. 10.) Unto such as keep his covenant—Perform the conditions of the covenant of grace.

V. 11. For

10 All the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth, unto such as keep his covenant and his testimonies.

11 [g] For thy name's sake O Lord, pardon mine iniquity: [h] for it is great.

12 What man is he that feareth the Lord? him shall he teach in the way that he shall choose.

13 His soul shall † dwell at ease: and [i] his seed shall inherit the earth.

14 [k] The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him: * and he will shew them his covenant.

15 Mine eyes are ever towards the Lord: for he shall * pluck my feet out of the net.

16 Turn thee unto me, and have mercy upon me: for I am desolate and afflicted.

17 The troubles of my heart are enlarged: O bring thou me out of my distresses.

18 Look upon mine affliction, and my pain, and forgive all my sins.

19 Consider mine enemies, for they are many, and they hate me with ‡ cruel hatred.

20 O keep my soul, and deliver me: let me not be ashamed, for I put my trust in thee.

V. 11. For thy name's sake—The honour of thy goodness and truth, which is concerned therein. For it is great—And therefore I stand in great need of pardon, and do so earnestly beg it. None but such a God can pardon it, it will render thy mercy so much the more illustrious. (1 Tim. i. 13, 14. Rom. v. 20.)

V. 12. What man—Whoever he be. Him shall he teach—Direct him what course to take in any strait, doubt, or difficulty he meets with. (Prov. iii. 6.)

V. 13. His soul—He shall enjoy sweet inward content and satisfaction in his worldly comforts, and afterwards the fulness of all delight in heaven. Inherit—Partake of all the blessings of the covenant.

V. 14. The secret—The manifestation of the mysteries of the covenant, concerning our salvation by Christ, (Matth. xiii. 11.) and of his love and favour through him. (Rev. ii. 17.) Will shew them—Reveal to them the duties, and bestow on them the blessings of the covenant.

V. 15. Mine eyes—My expectation of help is only from him. Pluck—Deliver me out of all my temptations and tribulations.

V. 16—18 Desolate—Destitute of all other hopes and succours. My sins—The procuring and continuing cause of all my troubles.

V. 19—21. O keep my soul—My life. Let integrity—My just and honest dealing with all men, even mine enemies. Though it is true I have offended thee greatly. Preserve me—Be so far considered by thee, as to deal with me according to my carriage towards them.

PSAL. XXVI.

David being defamed by his enemies, appeals to God for his integrity, inoffensive walking, and holy purposes.

V. 1. I have walked—Behaved myself with a good conscience, and uprightly towards all men. Trusted—Committed my cause and affairs to thee. Slide—Fall from mine integrity, nor be overthrown by my enemies, but upheld by thee.

V. 2. Examine me—Because I may be mistaken, or be partial in my own cause, therefore I appeal to thee, and offer myself to thy trial concerning what my enemies charge me with.

V. 3. For—And I dare appeal to thee, because the sense of thy love unto me has made such a deep and durable impression upon my soul, that I dare do nothing to displease thee, nor be guilty of any of those indirect courses my enemies charge me with. In thy truth—According to the rule of thy word; which is truth.

V. 4. Not sat—Familiarly and delightfully conversed with wicked men, void of true piety, from whom nothing that is good can be expected or gotten. Neither will I go—Join in their counsels or courses.

V. 6. I will wash—Get my heart cleansed from hypocrisy and iniquity; by drawing nigh unto thee with a true heart in full assurance of faith; to have my heart sprinkled from an evil conscience, by thy grace communicated to me for thy own mercies sake. (Heb. x. 22.) Compass thine altar—Offer sacrifices of praise, and perform all other duties of thy worship.

V. 7—12. Gather not—Deal not with me as thou art wont to do with sinners, nor put me into the same miserable condition that they are in. My foot standeth in an even place—I am settled in a safe condition, because of my uprightness. (Prov. x. 9.)

PSAL. XXVI.

¶ A psalm of David.

JUDGE [a] me, O Lord, for I have walked in mine integrity: I have trusted also in the Lord: therefore I shall not slide.

2 [b] Examine me, O Lord, and prove me: try my reins and my heart.

3 For thy loving kindness is before mine eyes: and I have walked in thy truth.

4 [c] I have not sat with vain persons, neither will I go in with dissemblers.

5 I have hated the congregation of evil doers: [d] and will not sit with the wicked.

6 [e] I will wash mine hands in innocency: so will I compass thine altar, O Lord.

7 That I may publish with the voice of thanksgiving, and tell of all thy wondrous works.

8 Lord, [f] I have loved the habitation of thy house, and the place * where thine honour dwelleth.

9 † [g] Gather not my soul with sinners, nor my life with ‡ bloody men.

10 In whose hands is mischief: and their right hand is § full of bribes.

11 But as for me, I will walk in mine integrity: redeem me, and be merciful unto me.

12 [h] My foot standeth in an even place: in the congregations will I bless the Lord.

PSAL. XXVII.

¶ A psalm of David.

THE Lord is [a] my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear? [b] the Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?

2 When the wicked, even mine enemies and my foes, * came upon me to eat up my flesh, they stumbled and fell.

3 [c] Though an host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear: though war should rise against me, in this will I be confident.

4 [d] One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold ‖ * the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in his temple.

5 For [f] in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me, he shall set me up upon a rock.

6 And now shall [g] mine head be lifted up above mine enemies round about me: therefore will I offer in his tabernacle sacrifices § of joy; I will sing, yea, I will sing praises unto the Lord.

7 Hear, O Lord, when I cry with my voice: have mercy also upon me, and answer me.

8 * When thou saidst, [h] Seek ye my face; my heart said unto thee, Thy face, Lord, will I seek.

9 [i] Hide not thy face far from me, put not thy servant away in anger: thou hast been my help, leave me not, neither forsake me, O God of my salvation.

10 [k] When my father and my mother forsake me, then the Lord * will take me up.

11 [l] Teach me thy way, O Lord, and lead me in † a plain path, because of ‡ mine enemies.

12 [m] Deliver me not over unto the will of mine enemies: for false witnesses are risen up against me, and such as breathe out cruelty.

13 I had fainted, unless I had believed to see the goodness of the Lord [n] in the land of the living.

14 [o] Wait on the Lord: be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart: wait, I say, on the Lord.

PSAL. XXVIII.

¶ A psalm of David.

UNTO thee will I cry, O Lord my rock, [a] be not silent * to me: [b] lest if thou be silent to me, I become like them that go down into the pit.

2 Hear the voice of my supplications, when I cry unto thee: [c] when I lift up my hands † [d] toward thy holy oracle.

3 [e] Draw me not away with the wicked, and with the workers of iniquity: [f] which speak peace to their neighbours, but mischief is in their hearts.

4 [g] Give them according to their deeds, and according to the wickedness of their endeavours: give them after the work of their hands, render to them their desert.

5 Because [h] they regard not the works of the Lord, nor the operation of his hands, he shall destroy them, and not build them up.

V. 2, 3. In this—In his direction, and the experience of his favour.

V. 4. I desired—Chiefly and principally above all others. That I may dwell—Enjoy opportunities of constant attendance upon the public ordinances, and not be driven from them, as I have been. To behold—To exercise and delight myself in the contemplation of his amiable perfections and attributes. Inquire—Concerning his mind and will. Temple—Tabernacle, the same for substance with the temple. His heart being much set upon the temple, he calls the tabernacle so.

V. 5. For—And well may I prize his house and service so highly, since all my security depends upon him. Hide me—Secure me from danger, as if I were in the holy of holies where none may come. In the secret—By his secret power and providence, and by such ways which the world knows not, or does not take notice of.

V. 6. And now—By this means I shall be in a safe condition.

V. 7, 8. Thou saidst—Either inwardly, by thy spirit in my heart, fitting me in a more than ordinary manner for it; or outwardly, giving me by thy providence some special opportunity or occasion for it.

V. 9. Hide not—Withhold not, or withdraw not the sense of thy love and favour from me.

V. 10—12. When—Though all relations and friends should forsake me, the Lord, the rock of my salvation, will stand by me. (2 Tim. iv. 16, 17.) Breathe out cruelty—Discover their evil intentions against me in all their discourse.

V. 13. I had fainted, unless I had believed to see—To receive the mercy and favour God has promised in this world.

V. 14. Wait on the Lord—This he speaks to his own soul chiefly, as being conscious of his own weakness, and what need he had of God's strength. Be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart—Do not give way to despondency and faint-heartedness, but stir up the grace of holy courage that is in thee, and God shall add fresh supplies of it to thee. (Matth. xiii. 12.)

PSAL. XXVIII.

V. 1, 2. Be not silent—Refuse not to hear and help me. Like—No better than a dead man.

V. 3. Draw me not——To punishment, let me not be involved in the same punishment with them.

V. 4. Give them——These imprecations were used by him by the guidance of the holy Spirit against the incorrigible enemies of God, as predictions of what should befal them, and therefore not to be imitated without the like warrant.

V. 5. They regard not—— His providential dispensations in the world, whether of mercy to his people, or judgment on his enemies, nor towards me in particular.

V. 6—9. Saving

7 The Lord is my ſtrength, and my ſhield, my heart truſted in him, and I am helped: therefore my heart greatly rejoiceth, and with my ſong will I praiſe him.

8 The Lord is ‡ their ſtrength, and he is the § ſaving ſtrength of his anointed.

P S A L. XXIX.

V. 1. Give unto the Lord, O ye mighty—Acknowledge and aſcribe to him the praiſe of his glorious power, you great men of the world.

V. 2. The glory due—The honour which he deſerves; which is to forſake all your idols, and to own him as the only true God. Worſhip the Lord——Worſhip him in his holy temple, which is beautiful in regard of the excellent ornaments there uſed, and divine truths there prefigured, but eſpecially in regard of thoſe ſpiritual benefits there imparted and enjoyed.

V. 3. Is upon the waters—Among the thick watry clouds, which uſually pour down abundance of rain at that time.

V. 4—6. Is full of majeſty—An evident proof of his great majeſty. Breaketh the cedars—How much then ought reaſonable creatures to be affected therewith. Lebanon—The trees or people on thoſe mountains.

V. 7, 8. The voice of the Lord—Thunder breaks out of the clouds, and the lightnings ſuddenly diſperſe over the face of the earth. Shaketh—Affrights the beaſts of the wilderneſs.

V. 9. Diſcovereth the foreſts—By breaking down the trees, and laying the ground bare, which was covered before. In his temple doth every one ſpeak of his glory—Though thoſe glorious and dreadful effects of God's power ſhould affect all, and make them fear and obey him, yet only his people will be wrought upon thereby to praiſe and adore him in his temple.

V. 10, 11. The Lord ſitteth—Rules this unruly element; and alſo his raging enemies. The Lord will give ſtrength unto his people—To ſupport and preſerve them in the moſt dreadful tempeſts, and all other dangers, and againſt all their enemies. The Lord will bleſs his people with peace; for in himſelf all ſhall have peace that truly believe in him. (John xvi. 33.)

P S A L. XXX.

V. 1, 2. Lifted me up—Delivered me out of that danger I was in. Thou haſt healed me—Both in mind and body.

V. 3, 4. Give thanks—When you yourſelves call to mind, or others make mention of the holineſs of God manifeſted by his care of all them that put their truſt in him, as heirs of that bleſſed hope which he hath ſet before them through a Mediator.

V. 5. In his favour is life—When he withdraws his anger and manifeſts his favour, that is ſo refreſhing and reviving that they forget their former troubles, and may be truly ſaid to live, to live cheerfully and comfortably (whereas before they were in a manner dead.) Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning—Will ſucceed it in due ſeaſon: as the day does the night.

V. 6—8. Made—Firmly ſettled me in the kingdom, and eſtabliſhed my heart in his grace. And then is the mountain of every one made ſtrong, when in his light they ſee the channel through which all the mercies of God freely flow to them; and are aſſured

9 What profit is there in my blood, when I go down to the pit? [h] shall the dust praise thee? shall it declare thy truth?

10 Hear, O Lord, and have mercy upon me: Lord, be thou my helper.

11 [i] Thou hast turned for me my mourning into dancing: thou hast put off my sackcloth, and girded me with gladness:

12 To the end that ‖ my glory may sing praise to thee, and not be silent: O Lord, my God, I will give thanks unto thee for ever.

PSAL. XXXI.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

IN [a] thee, O Lord, do I put my trust, let me never be ashamed: [b] deliver me in thy righteousness.

2 [c] Bow down thine ear to me, deliver me speedily: be thou * my strong rock, for an house of defence to save me.

3 [d] For thou art my rock, and my fortress: therefore [e] for thy name's sake lead me and guide me.

4 Pull me out of the net, that they have laid privily for me: for thou art my strength.

5 [f] Into thine hand I commit my spirit: thou hast redeemed me, O Lord God of truth.

6 I have hated them [g] that regard lying vanities: but I trust in the Lord.

7 I will be glad, and rejoice in thy mercy: for thou hast considered my trouble; thou hast known my soul in adversities;

8 And hast not shut me up into the hand of the enemy: [h] thou hast set my feet in a large room.

9 Have mercy upon me, O Lord, for I am in trouble; [i] mine eye is consumed with grief, yea, my soul and my belly.

10 For my life is spent with grief, and my years with sighing: my strength faileth because of mine iniquity, and [k] my bones are consumed.

11 [l] I was a reproach among all mine enemies, but [m] especially among my neighbours, and a fear to mine acquaintance: [n] they that did see me without, fled from me.

12 [o] I am forgotten as a dead man out of mind: I am like ‡ a broken vessel.

13 [p] For I have heard the slander of many, [q] fear was on every side, while they took counsel together against me, they devised to take away my life.

14 But I trusted in thee, O Lord, I said, Thou art my God.

15 My times are in thy hand: deliver me from the hand of mine enemies, and from them that persecute me.

16 [r] Make thy face to shine upon thy servant: save me for thy mercies sake.

17 [s] Let me not be ashamed, O Lord, for I have called upon thee: let the wicked be ashamed, and [t] ‡ let them be silent in the grave.

18 [u] Let the lying lips be put to silence: which [x] speak § grievous things proudly and contemptuously against the righteous.

19 [y] O how great is thy goodness, which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee; which thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee, before the sons of men!

20 [z] Thou shalt hide them in the secret of thy presence from the pride of man: [a] thou shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues.

REjoice [a] in the Lord, O ye righteous, for [b] praiſe is comely for the upright.

2 Praiſe the Lord with harp: ſing unto him with the pſaltery, [c] and an inſtrument of ten ſtrings.

3 [d] Sing unto him a new ſong, play ſkilfully with a loud noiſe.

4 For the word of the Lord is right: and all his works are done in truth.

5 [e] He loveth righteouſneſs and judgment: [f] the earth is full of the ‖ goodneſs of the Lord.

6 [g] By the word of the Lord were the heavens made: and [h] all the hoſt of them [i] by the breath of his mouth.

7 [k] He gathereth the waters of the ſea together, as an heap: he layeth up the depth in ſtore-houſes.

V. 21, 22. Strong city—So that I have been as ſafe in woods and caves, as if I had been in a ſtrong city. For I ſaid in my haſte.—Raſhly; when the greatneſs of my danger had tranſported me with fear, and put me beſide the exerciſe of my grace. I am cut off—Caſt out of thy care, as if thou didſt not ſee me. The proud doer—Such as contradict the will of God and neglect his commandments.

P S A L. XXXII.

V. 1, 2. Whoſe ſin is covered—By the merits of Chriſt. Imputeth not—Charges it not upon him, ſo as to puniſh him for it. No guile—That does not deal deceitfully with God, but is free and ingenuous in his confeſſion of ſin, and hearty and ſincere in his profeſſion of repentance.

V. 3. When I kept ſilence—Concealed my ſins, and did not confeſs them and beg pardon, my ſtrength decayed through continual horrors of conſcience, and perplexity of ſpirit.

V. 4, 5. Day and night thy hand—Thoſe afflictions and terrors thou broughteſt me into. I ſaid—I fully reſolved at laſt. The iniquity—The guilt which oppreſſed my ſpirit; and alſo didſt remove the puniſhment thou hadſt laid upon me for it.

V. 6. For this—Becauſe thou haſt dealt ſo graciouſly with me, and ſo readily forgiven my ſins. In a time—While the day of grace continues, and God is inviting us by his word and ſpirit to be reconciled to him. In the floods—In time of the greateſt troubles and dangers. Shall not come nigh unto him——To hurt him.

V. 7. Compaſs me with ſongs—Vouchſafe ſo many deliverances to me as will afford matter for many ſongs of praiſe.

V. 8. I will inſtruct thee—O thou impenitent ſinner, whoever thou art, I ſpeak to thee in particular. I will guide thee—Watch over thee myſelf, directing thee in thy right way, and admoniſhing thee when thou turneſt aſide: thus does the Friend of ſinners wait to be gracious even to the evil and to the unthankful.

V. 9—11. No underſtanding——To hearken to good counſel. Bit and bridle——So God has ways to tame men, when ſtubborn and refractory. Ye righteous—Who have obtained pardon of your ſins, and ſo are bleſſed, v. 1.

P S A L. XXXIII.

V. 1. Rejoice—Let the conſideration of God's mercy in forgiving and ſaving, and his goodneſs manifeſted in the works of creation and providence, fill you with joy and praiſe. Praiſe is comely for the upright—It well becomes them to exerciſe themſelves in this work of praiſing and bleſſing God, who are reconciled to him, and have become his children by adoption and grace.

V. 2—4. A new ſong—With new, freſh, and lively affections. (Eph. v. 19.) The word of the Lord is right—All his purpoſes and precepts are juſt and equal. Done in truth—Agreeable with his word.

V. 5, 6. He

8 Let all the earth fear the Lord: let all the inhabitants of the world ſtand in awe of him.

9 For [l] he ſpake, and it was done: he commanded, and it ſtood faſt.

10 [m] The Lord ‡ bringeth the counſel of the heathen to nought: he maketh the devices of the people of none effect.

11 [n] The counſel of the Lord ſtandeth for ever, the thoughts of his heart * to all generations.

12 [o] Bleſſed is the nation whoſe God is the Lord: and the people whom he hath choſen for his own inheritance.

13 [p] The Lord looketh from heaven: he beholdeth all the ſons of men.

14 From the place of his habitation he looked upon all the inhabitants of the earth.

15 He faſhioneth their hearts alike: [q] he conſidereth all their works.

16 [r] There is no king ſaved by the multitude of an hoſt: a mighty man is not delivered by much ſtrength.

17 [s] An horſe is a vain thing for ſafety: neither ſhall he deliver any by his great ſtrength.

18 [t] Behold, the eye of the Lord is [u] upon them that fear him: upon them that hope in his mercy:

19 To deliver their ſoul from death, and [x] to keep them alive in famine.

20 [y] Our ſoul waiteth for the Lord: [z] he is our help and our ſhield.

21 For our heart ſhall rejoice in him: becauſe we have truſted in his holy name.

22 Let thy mercy, O Lord, be upon us according as we hope in thee.

V. 7—13. Store-houſes—The clouds and bowels of the earth.

V. 14, 15. He faſhioneth—Frames, diſpoſes, and inclines them which way he pleaſes. Alike—Equally, one as well as another, be he never ſo great, proud, or ſtout, all are alike ſubject to his juriſdiction. He conſidereth all their works——He is privy to the deepeſt plots of the moſt ſubtle, and conſiders the events, ſo as to order them according to his own mind.

V. 16, 17. There is no king ſaved by the multitude of an hoſt—But only by God's providence, who diſpoſes of victory and ſucceſs as he pleaſes.

V. 18. The eye of the Lord—His watchful providence and favour. Is upon them that fear him—But they that are deſtitute of the fear of God, can have no ground to hope for mercy. Upon them that hope in his mercy—So long as they will continue to live as without God in the world, and in a ſtate of rebellion againſt him.

V. 19—21. To deliver—When he ſees it good for them. Becauſe—Our hope and confidence is in God, therefore we may rejoice; and other ſolid ground of comforts there is none: and they that allow themſelves to live unpoſſeſſed of this truſt in the Creator and Redeemer of the world, could they gain the poſſeſſion of all their hearts can deſire, they would fall ſhort of the end for which they had a being: they that believe in Him ſhall be ſaved, as on the contrary, he that believeth not ſhall be damned. (Mark xvi. 16.) Can I now with an humble confidence truſt in the mercy of God my Saviour for the forgiveneſs of every offence I have committed againſt him ever ſince I have known right from wrong? Can I now truſt God my Creator, my Redeemer and Sanctifier, for grace to ſave me from the power and from the nature of ſin, and to enable me to do his will? Can I truſt him, as the God of all providence, and the governor of all things, for all that concerns me in this life? And do I live in the poſſeſſion of that calm confidence in him as the reſurrection and the life, and my great and everlaſting reward, that I can daily reſign myſelf to his all-wiſe diſpoſal for life or death, with Stephen, ſaying, Lord Jeſus receive my Spirit? (Acts vii. 59.)

PSAL. XXXIV.

V. 1—3. I will bleſs the Lord—For this miraculous deliverance. At all times—As long as I live. And they that would have an happy uſe of all their mercies, ought frequently to take opportunities of looking back to view the mercies of God to themſelves, and to thoſe with whom they are connected, by the various ties of kindred and affection; and whoever does this will ſoon find the ſum of the mercies of God to be far above their power to count, and by this they will ſee what cauſe they have for humiliation, that they have been ſo little penetrated with gratitude to the goodneſs of God, who has delivered them from ſo many evils and dangers, and beſtowed ſo many bleſſings upon them; and then with David they will ſee how much it is their duty to bleſs the Lord at all times, and have his praiſe continually in their hearts; and not only in their lips, but to breathe it in the language of a reſigned, thankful life, contented with all God gives, and all he takes away. Make her boaſt—Glory in this, that I have ſo powerful and gracious a Lord and Maſter. The humble—My well-wiſhers, who are meek, ſelf-denying believers, of a lowly diſpoſition: And this is the foundation of thankfulneſs and religious joy—none but they that are humble enough to ſee in ſome degree how much leſs they deſerve, than what the unmerited bounty of God has beſtowed upon them, will be thankful; and of courſe they who are moſt humble will ever be moſt thankful, and be bleſſed with the poſſeſſion of the moſt lively ſenſe of the goodneſs of God both to themſelves and others.

V. 4. How much is contained in theſe few words. The Lord's ways and dealings with mankind are equal: All that ſeek him are heard by him, and that which is beſt for them is done for them now, the ſame as in the days of David; God being the ſame from everlaſting to everlaſting. How great then are the advantages of ſeeking after the God of our ſalvation: And they that ſeek him with a mind fully ſet to be his ſubjects and to have him to reign

V. 5. They looked—Sought unto God in like diſtreſſes, waiting upon him for deliverance. Were lightened—Comforted and relieved.

V. 6. This poor man—Who hath no worth in himſelf to deſerve any favour, and perſecuted and deſpiſed of all men. The words of thoſe who admiring God's goodneſs to David, do plead it for their own encouragement.

V. 7, 8 The angel—Angels. O taſte—Labour to get an inward experimental knowledge of the goodneſs of God in Chriſt. See—Conſider it for your comfort and delight.

V. 9—11. Good—Which God knows to be truly good for them. Ye children—You that are willing to learn of me.

V. 12. Deſireth—In good earneſt; ſo as to be willing to uſe the means for attaining it. Life—A comfortable life here, and eternal life hereafter. See good—Enjoy proſperity and happineſs.

V. 13. Keep thy tongue—Watch over it narrowly, it being ſo prone to offend. From evil—Eſpecially all injurious and deceitful ſpeeches.

V. 14. From evil—All ſin in general, and particularly wronging of any. Do good——Be ready to perform all friendly offices to all men. Seek peace—Endeavour to live quietly with all about you; with all mankind, by living in that ſpirit of love and truth, by which you will be enabled to do to them as you would have them do to you. (1 Cor. xiii. 4, &c.) Purſue it—Uſe all poſſible endeavours to procure peace when it is wanting.

V. 15, 16. The face of the Lord is againſt them that do evil—That continue in any known ſin; in any thing contrary to a good conſcience towards God, their fellow-creatures, and themſelves.

V. 17—19. The Lord is nigh—Will ſhew himſelf preſent with them for their help. Contrite ſpirit—Deeply humbled for ſin, and the wrath of God following upon it.

V. 20—22. His bones—Every member of his body. Is broken—This was literally fulfilled in Chriſt Jeſus, (John xix. 36.) and holds true proportionably in all his members, that no miſchief ſhall befal them to their ruin, (Prov. xii. 21.)

PSAL. XXXV.

V. 1. Plead—Appear for me by puniſhing my enemies.

V. 2—7. Shield—To cover and defend me. Stop—That they may not come at me. Be turned—Put to flight.

V. 8—12. My ſoul ſhall be joyful in the Lord—In a holy manner,

9 And my soul shall be joyful in the Lord: it shall rejoice in his salvation.

10 [f] All my bones shall say, Lord, who is like unto thee, which deliverest the poor from him that is too strong for him, yea, the poor and the needy from him that spoileth him?

Title. The occaſion of this pſalm was the contemplation of the proſperity of the wicked; and the ſcope of it is chiefly to direct the people of God how to behave themſelves upon ſuch an occaſion, not to repine at it, or envy them for it, becauſe, alas! it will not laſt long; but to be diligent in the diſcharge of their duty, to delight themſelves in God, and then to commit themſelves to his care and providence, and to wait ſilently and patiently for a good iſſue.

V. 1—3. Fret not—Be not vexed and diſquieted at the proſperity of the wicked, v. 7. Envious—As if they were in a happy condition. Dwell—Continue in it with peace and ſafety. Fed—Comfortably provided for.

V. 4. Delight—Delight in the Lord is the ſoul's pleaſure and ſatisfaction that it has in the ſenſe of its intereſt in him, relation to him, and the benefits it receives thereby in and through Chriſt, and that notwithſtanding any outward troubles. Give—Mould thy deſires to compliance with his will, and then he will grant whatſoever thou ſo deſireſt.

V. 5. Commit—Refer all thy affairs to his diſpoſal, and wait patiently for the iſſue. Bring—Give ſuch an iſſue as he ſees moſt for thy good.

V. 6, 7. Bring—Manifeſt the ſincerity of thy intentions, and uprightneſs of thy actions, ſo that they ſhall be cleared from thoſe miſtakes and miſapprehenſions they lie under. Reſt—Quietly ſubmit to his will, without murmuring or repining.

V. 8, 9. Ceaſe from anger—Both againſt the ſinner for his ſucceſs, and againſt God for ſo diſpoſing of things. To do evil—So as to diſtruſt God's providence, or to diſlike his ways, or to imitate wicked men in hope of the ſame ſucceſs. Shall inherit—Shall enjoy ſuch a portion of theſe outward things as God ſees good for them, notwithſtanding the rage of their enemies, and their attempts to the contrary.

VIII. Day. Evening Prayer.

PSAL. XLI.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

B Lessed is he that considereth [a] † the poor: the Lord will deliver him * in time of trouble.

a Prov.14.21
† Or, the weak, or, sick.
* Heb. in the day of evil.

2 The Lord will preserve him, and keep him alive, and he shall be blessed upon the earth; [b] and § thou wilt not deliver him into the will of his enemies.

3 The Lord will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing: thou wilt ‖ make all his bed in his sickness.

4 I said, Lord, be merciful unto me; heal my soul, for I have sinned against thee.

5 Mine enemies speak evil of me: When shall he die and his name perish?

6 And if he come to see me, he speaketh vanity: his heart gathereth iniquity to itself, when he goeth abroad, he telleth it.

7 All that hate me whisper together against me: against me do they devise ‡ my hurt.

8 ‖ An evil disease, say they, cleaveth fast unto him: and now that he lieth, he shall rise up no more.

9 [c] Yea, * mine own familiar friend in whom I trusted, [d] which did eat of my bread, hath † lift up his heel against me.

10 But thou, O Lord, be merciful unto me, and raise me up, that I may requite them.

11 By this I know that thou favourest me, because mine enemy doth not triumph over me.

12 And as for me, thou upholdest me in mine integrity, and settest me before thy face for ever.

V. 8. I delight to do thy will—To yield absolute and perfect obedience thereto, by laying down my life, and making myself a sacrifice to thy justice for the sins of the world. Thy law is within my heart—I am ready to perform all that thou requirest of me as Mediator.

V. 9. I have preached—Published by myself and ministers, thy faithfulness in performing thy promise of sending me into the world, and thy justice in requiring satisfaction of me for man's sin.

V. 10—13. Mine iniquities—This must be applied only to David. Taken hold—Brought down these evils upon me. To look up—With any confidence; but am ashamed of myself. To deliver me—From my sins, and the punishment due to them.

V. 14—17. My soul—My life. Of their shame—Of their sinful endeavours to bring me to shame. That say unto me, Aha—That rejoice at my misery. Thy salvation—That only way and method of salvation thou hast appointed by Christ, (Luke ii. 30.) Say continually—Have continual occasion to say.

PSAL. XLI.

V. 1—3. That considereth—So as not to censure or condemn him as wicked, or hated of God; but pities and comforts him. The poor—One in sickness, or any affliction. The Lord will preserve him, and make all his bed in his sickness—Give him ease and comfort, and afford him all things necessary.

V. 4, 5. Heal my soul—Pardon my sins, and deliver me out of my distress. Mine enemies speak—Vent their ill wishes against me.

V. 6. Vanity—Falsehood; pretending sorrow, but intending mischief, and secretly rejoicing at my misery. Gathereth—Picks out something from my words or actions, or condition, to design some mischief against me. Telleth it—By way of triumph, and rejoicing at my misery.

V. 7—9. An evil disease—Some incurable disease, or irrecoverable mischief, such as God uses to inflict upon sons of Belial. Familiar friend—This chiefly relates to Judas's dealing with Christ. (John xiii. 18.) Lift up his heel—Behaved himself insolently, contemptuously, and injuriously.

V. 10, 11. Requite them—Punish them according to their deserts. Favourest me—Will make good thy promises to me. Doth not—Has not gotten me into his power, but is disappointed in his expectation.

V. 12, 13. Thou upholdest me—Hast kept my heart sincere towards thee, notwithstanding all my troubles. And settest me—Dost manifest singular respect to me, and so wilt continue to do both in this world and the world to come.

PSAL. XL.

Title. Containing a celebration of God's great goodneſs and mercy vouchſafed to him and all his people; wherein he ſpeaks many things in the perſon of Chriſt Jeſus.

V. 1, 2. An horrible pit—Terrible and deſperate dangers. The miry clay—Such evils as ſtuck cloſe to me. And ſet my feet upon a rock—Brought me into a ſafe condition, and enabled me to walk ſteadily, without falling into miſchief.

V. 3. Put—Moved me, by his ſpirit, to compoſe this pſalm upon this occaſion. Many ſhall ſee it—Both my danger and deliverance, and be thereupon induced to fear, worſhip, and ſerve this God, who ſheweth himſelf ſo evidently preſent to ſave and deliver all that call upon him.

V. 4. Reſpecteth not—Does not value ſo highly as to truſt in any of the great ones of the world, who are commonly proud of their power and wealth. Turn aſide to lies—Forſake God, and place their happineſs in worldly enjoyments.

V. 5. Thy wonderful works—Eſpecially that of redemption by the Meſſiah, which now he comes to ſpeak of.

V. 6, 7. Opened—Fitted, inclined, and obliged me to thy ſervice; as ſervants whoſe ears were bored. (Exod. xxi. 5, 6.) Then ſaid I—When I underſtood and conſidered thy pleaſure therein, I engaged myſelf unto thee, in the covenant of redemption. In the volume—And thus much is expreſt in the promiſes, propheſies, types and ceremonies of the law of Moſes. (Luke xxiv. 27. John v. 39.)

h Psa. 119. 16,24,47 92. Rom. 7. 22. § Heb. in the midst of my bowels

8 h I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is § i within my heart.

PSAL. XLI.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

a Prov. 14. 21 † Or, the weak, or, sick. ‡ Heb. in the day of evil.

BLessed is he that considereth a † the poor: the Lord will deliver him ‡ in time of trouble.

2 The Lord will preserve him, and keep him alive, and he shall be blessed upon the earth; b and § thou wilt not deliver him into the will of his enemies.

b Psa. 27. 12. § Do not thou deliver.

3 The Lord will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing: thou wilt ‖ make all his bed in his sickness.

‖ Heb. turn.

4 I said, Lord, be merciful unto me; heal my soul, for I have sinned against thee.

5 Mine enemies speak evil of me: When shall he die and his name perish?

6 And if he come to see me, he speaketh vanity: his heart gathereth iniquity to itself, when he goeth abroad, he telleth it.

7 All that hate me whisper together against me: against me do they devise ‡ my hurt.

‡ Heb. evil to me.

8 ‖ An evil disease, say they, cleaveth fast unto him: and now that he lieth, he shall rise up no more.

‖ Heb. a thing of Belial.

9 c Yea, * mine own familiar friend in whom I trusted, d which did eat of my bread, hath † lift up his heel against me.

c Job 19. 19 Psa. 55. 12, 13, 20 Jer. 20. 10. * Heb. the man of my peace. d Obad. 7. John 13. 18 † Heb. magnified.

10 But thou, O Lord, be merciful unto me, and raise me up, that I may requite them.

11 By this I know that thou favourest me, because mine enemy doth not triumph over me.

12 And as for me, thou upholdest me in mine integrity, and settest me before thy face for ever.

13 Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, from everlasting, and to everlasting. Amen, and Amen.

PSAL. XLII.

* Or, a psalm giving instruction, of the sons, &c. See 1 Chron. 6. 33. 37. & 25. 5. ‡ Heb. breyeth.

¶ To the chief musician, * Maschil, for the sons of Korah.

AS the hart ‡ panteth after the water-brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God. 2 My

V. 8. I delight to do thy will—To yield absolute and perfect obedience thereto, by laying down my life, and making myself a sacrifice to thy justice for the sins of the world. Thy law is within my heart—I am ready to perform all that thou requirest of me as Mediator.

V. 9. I have preached—Published by myself and ministers, thy faithfulness in performing thy promise of sending me into the world, and thy justice in requiring satisfaction of me for man's sin.

V. 10—13. Mine iniquities—This must be applied only to David. Taken hold—Brought down these evils upon me. To look up—With any confidence; but am ashamed of myself. To deliver me—From my sins, and the punishment due to them.

V. 14—17. My soul—My life. Of their shame—Of their sinful endeavours to bring me to shame. That say unto me, Aha—That rejoice at my misery. Thy salvation—That only way and method of salvation thou hast appointed by Christ, (Luke ii. 30.) Say continually—Have continual occasion to say.

PSAL. XLI.

V. 1—3. That considereth—So as not to censure or condemn him as wicked, or hated of God; but pities and comforts him. The poor—One in sickness, or any affliction. The Lord will preserve him, and make all his bed in his sickness—Give him ease and comfort, and afford him all things necessary.

V. 4, 5. Heal my soul—Pardon my sins, and deliver me out of my distress. Mine enemies speak—Vent their ill wishes against me.

V. 6. Vanity—Falsehood; pretending sorrow, but intending mischief, and secretly rejoicing at my misery. Gathereth it—Picks out something from my words or actions, or condition, to design some mischief against me. Telleth it—By way of triumph, and rejoicing at my misery.

V. 7—9. An evil disease—Some incurable disease, or irrecoverable mischief, such as God uses to inflict upon sons of Belial. Familiar friend—This chiefly relates to Judas's dealing with Christ. (John xiii. 18.) Lift up his heel—Behaved himself insolently, contemptuously, and injuriously.

V. 10, 11. Requite them—Punish them according to their deserts. Favourest me—Will make good thy promises to me. Doth not—Has not gotten me into his power, but is disappointed in his expectation.

V. 12, 13. Thou upholdest me—Hast kept my heart sincere towards thee, notwithstanding all my troubles. And settest me—Dost manifest singular respect to me, and so will continue to do both in this world and the world to come.

V. 6—11. Thou hast cast off, and put us to shame—By not helping us; as we boasted thou wouldest. Spoil—Take away our estates for their own use.

V. 12. Dost not increase—Advance thy honour and service thereby.

V. 13—17. My confusion—My distress and trouble of spirit thereupon is so great, that I can never put it out of my mind. Neither have we dealt falsly in thy covenant—Turned apostates, and renounced our relation to thee, but still own thee for our God.

V. 18—20. Our heart is not turned back—From thee, thy worship and service to idols. The place of dragons—Among fierce and cruel enemies. Shadow of death—Deadly horrors and miseries. The name of our God—His worship and service. Stretched—Prayed to, or worshipped.

V. 21—25. Our soul is bowed down—We are brought to the lowest ebb of misery, and ready to drop into the grave. Our belly cleaveth unto the earth—We stick there without hopes of recovery.

PSAL. XLV.

V. 1. Good matter—Not any light, vain matter, but of singular excellency and delight, being heavenly and full of majesty. Made—Composed by divine inspiration. The king—The Messiah. A ready writer—Apt to utter freely and readily what the spirit suggests to me.

V. 2. Fairer—Fuller of inward beauty. Grace—Thy words are exceeding acceptable to the hearers, and minister grace to them. God hath blessed thee for ever—For the perpetual good of thy people.

V. 3. Thy sword—The word of God, wherewith to vanquish thy enemies. With thy glory—Which sword, or word, is the great instrument of maintaining and propagating thy glory and kingdom.

V. 4. Ride prosperously—Thou shalt prosper and succeed in subduing the world by the ministry of the gospel. Truth—The truth of the gospel revealed by thee. Meekness—Dealing gently with all that submit to thee. Righteousness—Governing thy subjects with impartial justice. Thy right hand—Thy own Almighty power shall enable thee to do great and glorious exploits, which shall be terrible to thy enemies.

V. 5. Thine—The instruments thou usest to subdue thy enemies; whether the word, which turns the hearts of sinners to thee, or judgments to destroy the rebellious and impenitent. The king's enemies—Thy enemies, O King. The people fall under thee—As converted to thee, or conquered by thee.

V. 6. The ſceptre—Thy adminiſtration of affairs is moſt juſt, and therefore for ever.

V. 7. Anointed thee—Thou haſt manifeſted thyſelf to be an exact lover of righteouſneſs, and a perfect hater of wickedneſs by expoſing thyſelf to death, thereby to ſhew the heinous nature of ſin, and to ſave thy people from it. Exalted thee to a ſtate of dignity and eternal happineſs above all others.

V. 8. All—The whole courſe of thy life is adorned with all manner of graces, which render thee amiable and delightful to the ſaints. Out—When thou comeſt out of the heavenly manſions into the world. Whereby—Or, from which, from the effuſion of the gifts and graces of the ſpirit from thy Father's right hand in heaven. They have made thee glad—Or, thou art made glad by the glorious and everlaſting proſperity, which ſhall be the conſequence of thy coming to make an atonement for the ſins of the world.

V. 9. Kings daughters—Souls of particular believers, who are ſpiritual kings that are added to the church, they are of royal or princely deſcent. The queen—The church, made up of all particular believers, is adorned with the choiceſt gifts and graces.

V. 10. Hearken—Attend unto the preaching of the goſpel, and be inſtructed thereby. Having ſpoken before of Chriſt, here he ſpeaks to the church. Forget thine own people—All carnal relations, ſo far as they hinder from Chriſt. All thoſe prejudices, falſe perſuaſions, corrupt inclinations, and evil practices, which are ſo natural to, and even part of thyſelf.

V. 11, 12. Greatly—Thou ſhalt become very amiable and acceptable to him. For—Thou muſt forſake all others for him, becauſe he is thy Lord—Thy God, as well as huſband. The daughter of Tyre—Inhabitants, the Gentiles of every nation. A gift—In token of homage and ſubjection to thee. The rich among the people—Of other nations.

V. 13. The king's daughter—The ſpouſe of Chriſt; the church in general, and every true member thereof in particular. Is all glorious within—The glory of the church does not conſiſt in the largeneſs of her revenues, ſplendor of her officers, or pomp of her adminiſtrations, but in the truth of doctrine, purity of worſhip, power of godlineſs in her ſeveral members, and in the ſpiritual and inward endowments of the heart. Her clothing—Her outward converſation, called alſo a wedding garment, (Matth. xxii. 11.) is adorned with holineſs and good works. (Matth. v. 16.)

V. 14. Virgins—Particular believers, who are ſpiritually pure and chaſte. Follow her—Tread in the footſteps of all the faithful that have gone before. (Heb. vi. 12.) Be brought unto thee—Converted by the miniſtry of the word, applied by the holy Spirit to the heart.

V. 15, 16. The king's palace—The church. Inſtead—This may be applied both to Chriſt and the catholic church—When the Jewiſh church, of which thou art deſcended, are caſt off for their infidelity, thou ſhalt have the church for thy children. Thou mayeſt make—Endue with ſpiritual power and dignity.

V. 17. I will make thy name to be remembered—By this ſong, which I have compoſed to thy honour by the ſpecial guidance of the holy Spirit. And all that publiſh God's holy word, all who live to his glory, all who ſuffer for his ſake, cauſe His name—his gracious nature to be remembered.

PSAL. XLVI.

V. 1—3. Though—Though there be never ſuch terrible confuſions and deſolations in all nations round about us. The waters—The people of thoſe nations rage againſt us. The mountains—Kingdoms and great ones be endangered by theſe commotions.

V. 4. A river—The gracious preſence of God with them. The ſtreams—Bleſſings and benefits flowing from thence; particularly, the ordinances and miniſtry of the word. Place of the tabernacles—Where God has taken up his reſidence in his tabernacle and temple.

V. 5, 6. Raged—Againſt God and his people. Were moved—Did riſe up in a tumultuous manner. Uttered—Manifeſted his diſpleaſure displeasure against them. The earth melted—The inhabitants of the earth grew heartless, and were consumed.

V. 7—10. The God of Jacob is our refuge—Earnest prayer, mixed with firm faith in God his Saviour, was the way in which Jacob came unto God and found him his refuge; and all that look for every blessing from God through the Mediator by prayer and faith in him, to them will God by his all-comforting and supporting grace and protecting providence become a strong tower, and a place of refuge against every evil and every danger. In the earth—Among the enemies of his church and people. Unto the end of the earth—From one end of our land to the other, and when it pleases him over all the earth; and to him alone it belongs to give peace, and when he does so none can make trouble: When his justice does not call for this calamity, his grace and providence mercifully prevents and disappoints the designs of the violent, and such as would, by their passions and boundless desires, keep the world in perpetual war, if not restrained by the mighty power of God. Be still—Cease to make any further opposition against the church and peace of mankind; and God has equal power over the raging of the people, as he has over the winds and seas, which submitted to his command when he appeared amongst men in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ. (Matth. viii. 27.)

P S A L. XLVII.

Penned upon the removing the ark into the city of Zion. A type of Christ's ascension into heaven, and spreading his kingdom into all parts of the world.

V. 1—3. Is terrible—To his enemies. Subdue—Convert the Gentiles to the obedience of Christ, and so make them members of the same church with ourselves.

V. 4—7. Choose—Bestow himself and heaven upon them that believe—that hope in his redeeming love. Excellency—Excellent and glorious things. God is gone up—Christ is ascended into heaven in great triumph, as the ark was brought to Zion. With understanding—Not in a formal manner, but with due consideration of his greatness.

V. 8, 9. The princes—The Gentiles and many of their grandees do voluntarily submit themselves to God, and own his worship and service. The people of the God of Abraham—Which worship the God of Abraham; whether Jews or Gentiles. All that worship God as Abraham did by faith, are the people of God: As they who do not believe in him neither know him nor fear him, and are therefore living as without God in the world, and in a state of rebellion against him. Shields—Rulers and governors, whose office it is to be protectors of the people, are at God's disposal. He is greatly exalted—By all that he has enabled us to understand of his Almighty and gracious government.

P S A L. XLVIII.

It contains matter of praise for the deliverance of Jerusalem from some eminent danger.

V. 1, 2. In the city—There especially. Beautiful—Being the place of the temple. The joy—Because the doctrine of the gospel was to go from thence to all nations. On the sides of the north—Mount Moriah, whereon the temple stood, being on the northern part of Jerusalem, or of mount Zion.

V. 3, 4. Palaces—The temple, king's palace, and other magnificent buildings, to secure them by his special providence from the attempts of enemies. Passed—Came up together to surprise it, but yet departed without success.

V. 5—7. Marvelled—At God's strange protection of it. Fear——Consternation and perplexity, for that terrible slaughter, (2 Kings xix. 35.) Breakest—Destroyest these proud and raging enemies by some irresistible judgments.

V. 8. Heard

V. 4. I will—I myſelf will hearken to what God's Spirit does ſuggeſt to me, that I may deliver it to you, and will alſo myſelf attend to it. Open—Publiſh this profound matter which I have learned.

V. 5. Wherefore ſhould I fear—Be diſmayed and dejected, or diſtruſtful of God's providence in time of trouble and diſtreſs; particularly, when wicked men flouriſh, and good men are oppreſſed. The iniquity—The injurious dealings of my enemies, who maliciouſly obſerve my way, and deſign to trip up my heels.

V. 6, 7. None can redeem his brother—And conſequently not himſelf neither: thy Maker is thy redeemer, and beſides him there is no other Saviour; and bleſſed are they who look unto him alone from all the ends of the earth, for they ſhall be ſaved by grace received through faith in him.

V. 8—10. Ceaſeth—The preſervation of their life is difficult to compaſs, and is never to be procured by any human means. Seeth—Every one cannot but obſerve this.

V. 11, 12. Thought—Hope and deſire. They call their lands after their own names—A vain attempt of human pride to preſerve their remembrance by cauſing the houſe they live in, or the buildings that are raiſed upon their ground, to be called by their name, which, the moment they depart this life, belongs leſs to them than to thoſe who are yet to be born: by this is diſcovered the ſoul's longing for that immortality which is eſſential to its nature, but how ſtrangely miſplaced; for what would avail us to have our names written in the title deeds of all the world, and publiſhed on the walls of every ſtreet in every city, if when the names of the redeemed are finally called, ours are not among the number, but with thoſe who rejected the laſt offer of mercy and grace, left us criminals to be executed—unnumbered and unregarded, to be baniſhed with ſwift deſtruction from before the Judge of all, to be ſhut out among dogs, thoſe that will never ceaſe not to be tormented and to torment each other? Thus will it be with the man who will go on giving a preſent preference to this world, till the laſt offer of mercy is deſpiſed, and for ever withdrawn by him who bought it for every ſoul of man at the expence of his own blood. Nevertheleſs—Notwithſtanding all theſe fine fancies and devices to preſerve a name among men. In honour—Living in all the ſplendor and glory above-mentioned, cannot continue long, at beſt, in the poſſeſſion of theſe things. He is like the beaſts that periſh—He muſt die as well as beaſts do, and then he muſt part with all.

V. 13. This their way—Their contrivance to perpetuate their names, is that which will yield them no real advantage. Their poſterity approve—Manifeſt their approbation of the counſel their fathers gave them concerning theſe matters, by taking the ſame courſe, and walking in the ſame ways that they did.

V. 14. Like ſheep—Promiſcuouſly; without any difference between them and the meaneſt, as ſheep are put into a fold all together.

PSALM.

The scope of this psalm is to reprove the Jews for trusting to their external performances, and to instruct them in the nature of acceptable worship, and so to prepare them for that change that was to be made in the outward way of worship under the gospel.

V. 1. The earth—All the inhabitants thereof, (for all are concerned) whom he summons as witnesses of his proceedings in this solemn judgment of his people for their formality.

V. 2. Out of Zion—The places where he does especially manifest himself on earth. Perfection—The most beautiful and lovely place in the whole world. Shined—Appeared gloriously, as upon a judgment-seat.

V. 3. Our God shall come—Though the Lord be our God in covenant with us, yet that will not secure us from his judgments, if we pervert and corrupt his worship, but he will come to judge us for our formality and hypocrisy. A fire—He shall appear terrible in his calling men to account for the breach of his law, as he did at first in the giving of it.

V. 4. The heavens—To be witnesses of the judgment he passes.

V. 5. Gather—A poetical representation of these judicial proceedings. My saints—Those that make profession of my name, and are set apart for my service. Those—They who having entered into covenant with me, have confirmed it frequently by sacrifices, and yet do not perform the conditions of the covenant, by looking through the means of grace to the sole author of their faith, and of their present and eternal salvation.

V. 6. The heavens—The inhabitants thereof, who being summoned as witnesses, shall now give their testimony on his behalf. For—And it must needs be so, that the judgment is righteous, because it is passed by God himself.

V. 7. Speak—Declare my charge or indictment against thee. I am thy God—By that solemn covenant made at Sinai.

V. 8. I will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices—I shall not complain of thy neglect of sacrifices; no, I have other matters to charge thee with. To have been—Or, they have been, I confess you have done too much that way, and been officious in those things; regarding the forms of religion, and such observances as obtained you the praise of men and flattered your own pride, by which you excluded the life, the power, and comfort of God's holy spirit from your hearts.

V. 9. I will—Though you lay so much stress on these things, yet I value them not.

V. 13, 14. Offer—Bring to him a truly humble thankful heart, which is the most acceptable sacrifice. Pay thy vows—Promises and covenant of obedience and duty.

V. 15. Call upon me in the day of trouble—Acknowledge thy subjection to me, and dependance upon me by constant and fervent prayer, especially in time of trouble, James v. 13. Glorify trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.

P S A L. LI.

V. 1. Blot out—Though sins are pardoned already, as this was, yet we must pray for the continuance of that mercy, and that it may be further cleared to us.

V. 2, 3. Iniquity—The guilt and defilement of it.

V. 4. Only—This is that which most wounds me, that I should have sinned against thee, O! thou most holy and compassionate God, who in thy own body didst bear the weight of infinite justice for every offence. That thou mightest be justified—I acknowledge that I have justly deserved all that is threatned, and however thou shalt deal with me, thou wilt be just and righteous. When—If hereafter thou shalt afflict me.

V. 5. Shapen—I was not drawn to sin only by example, temptation, or the like, but by reason of that inward corruption that is natural to me, (James i. 14.) and wherewith I was defiled even from my mother's womb.

V. 6. Truth—Sincerity of heart. Make me to know wisdom—To walk wisely and conscientiously for the future.

V. 7. Purge me—Apply the blood of Christ, signified by those ceremonial usages, to my conscience.

V. 8. Make me—Give me some good assurance of the pardon of my sins, which may be matter of comfort and rejoicing to me. Bones—My wounded spirit.

V. 10. Create in me a clean heart, O God—By the Almighty power of thy sanctifying grace cleanse my heart more and more from its natural corruption. Renew—Revive and repair a fixed disposition of heart, agreeable to thy law, which is much impaired by my sin.

V. 11. Cast me not away from thy presence—Favour and communion with thee. Take not thy holy spirit from me—The influences, assistance, and comfort thereof, for without thy presence my soul is dark, weak, and miserable.

V. 12. The joy of thy salvation—A comfortable sense of my interest in thy special love, care, and providence, and an assurance of eternal tongue shall sing aloud of thy righteousness.

15 O Lord, open thou my lips, and my mouth shall shew forth thy praise.

16 For [m] thou desirest not sacrifice, § else would I give it: thou delightest not in burnt-offering.

17 [n] The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

18 Do good in thy good pleasure unto Zion: build thou the walls of Jerusalem.

eternal salvation hereafter. Uphold—Keep me from falling into sin, and infuse into me courage and resolution in thy service. Thy free spirit—Which frees from the bondage of sin, and inclines the heart to a ready and cheerful obedience.

V. 13. Then will I teach transgressors thy ways—Declare unto them, from my own experience, how ready thou art to forgive those that are penitent, thereby to draw them to repentance: to know therefore for ourselves the blessedness of the man whose sins are pardoned is the great qualification for every one, employed in making known to others the willingness of God to shew mercy and to forgive: and they that can allow themselves to live without possessing the pardoning love of God for themselves, cannot give any thing more than an ideal representation of God's great salvation; and they must not wonder if they win but few to look for that gift as the chief good, which in their hearts they do not pursue as such for themselves: but the weakest persons that enjoy the kingdom of God within them, and by living faith hold fast their confidence, these are assisted with words to convince and persuade sinners to come to God their Saviour far more wise and forcible than all the wisdom of this world, natural or acquired; and the words of the living members of the Lord's body are accompanied with power from their head: he gives them language which none can gainsay nor resist.

V. 14, 15. Thy righteousness—Or goodness in making me that by grace, which by all human means I could never have been. Open—Give me occasion and ability, both of heart and tongue, to praise thee.

V. 16. Thou desirest not sacrifice—Thou dost not value them in comparison of sincere, universal obedience flowing from faith in the only sacrifice which can procure pardon of sin.

V. 17. A contrite heart—A heart deeply humbled under the sense of sin and God's wrath for it. Wilt not despise—Graciously own and accept.

V. 18. Do good—Though I have provoked thee by my sins, and thou mightest thereupon punish not only myself, but all my people, yet let not them fare the worse for my sake; but do good to thy church and people, and save us from offending thee, till, by thy mercy and grace, we are saved from that wrath which is revealed from heaven against all unrighteousness of men. Build—Perfect the walls and buildings of that city; and especially let the temple be built and established there, notwithstanding its pollution by my sins, which I pray thee to forgive: the walls of the spiritual Jerusalem are built by the free grace of God in calling sinners to repentance and converting them unto himself, when they become living stones, and are used by him the Great Master-builder in repairing the breaches which sin has made.

V. 19. Then—Then, as we shall have abundant cause, so we shall readily offer such sacrifices as thou wilt be pleased with: When the soul is reconciled to God through the Redeemer, then in his name God will accept the smallest offering of duty and worship proceeding from his grace in the believing mind: but without that faith which worketh by love, nothing is acceptable to God.

PSAL. LII.

V. 1. Boastest—Of that service thou hast done Saul, that honour and favour thou hast gotten thereby to thyself, and that discouragement thou hast brought on David's party, by the destruction of some of his friends. O mighty man—Thou hast indeed given a famous instance of thy undaunted valour, by slaying a few unarmed men, spoken by way of scorn.

V. 2, 3. Deviseth—Utters those things which thou hast long been contriving, wherewith to do mischief.

V. 4. All devouring—Which were the ruin and destruction of a family of priests, and the whole city.

V. 5, 6. See—Vengeance executed on thee. And fear—Reverence God's just judgment on thee, and be afraid of provoking him to send the like judgment on themselves. Laugh—Deride him for his vain and carnal confidence in his wicked courses.

V. 7, 8. Strengthened—Sought to advance himself by such wicked courses. But I am—Rather, shall be. Like a green olive-tree—In a settled, flourishing condition. David's confidence was in the mercy of God, and he believed that he should be supplied with all the blessings of his grace and providence as certainly as the trees are supplied with their nourishment from the earth on which they grow. I trust in the mercy of God for ever and ever—They that do not cease to pray till they can truly use these words for themselves, will then soon enter upon a life of thankfulness and peace; God only requiring to be entirely trusted, in order to make all things work together for the good of them that do so.

V. 4. Chooſeſt—Out of mankind, to be one of thy peculiar people. Cauſeſt—Giveſt him a heart, and then affordeſt opportunities to draw nigh unto thee, and have communion with thee. Dwell—Be a conſtant attendant upon thy ordinances, and be a partaker of thoſe comforts and mercies thou art pleaſed to diſpenſe in thine ordinances.

V. 5. By terrible things—By executing ſtrange and unuſual judgments upon our enemies, which are terrible to them, and aſtoniſhing to us, and affect us with a holy awe and reverence of thee. In righteouſneſs—Which thou doſt work in faithfulneſs to thy people, and juſtice on thy enemies. Anſwer us—Shew that thou heareſt our prayers. The confidence—The ſupport and ſafeguard of all mankind. Upon the ſea—In the iſles beyond the ſea.

V. 6—8. Girded with power—Enabled to do whatſoever he pleaſes. Uttermoſt parts—Of the earth, and are the moſt barbarous. Tokens—Thunder, lightnings, ſtorms, earthquakes, comets, war, and the like, which are commonly counted ſigns of God's diſpleaſure. Out-goings—The ſucceſſive courſes of the morning and evening to afford matter and occaſion of rejoicing to men.

V. 9, 10. Thou viſiteſt—Beſtoweſt manifold bleſſings upon the world in general, and Canaan in particular. The river of God—Plentiful ſhowers from the clouds. So provided for it—Or, prepared it, the earth; which without this would be hard and barren. Thou bleſſeſt—All means without God's bleſſing will do no good.

V. 11, 12. Thou crowneſt—Thou enricheſt and adorneſt it with variety of fruits. Thy paths drop fatneſs—The clouds upon which God walks, or rides, pour down ſhowers, which make the earth fat and fruitful. The little hills rejoice—Being filled with fruits.

P S A L. LXVI.

Penned after an eminent deliverance from ſome grievous and general calamity.

V. 1, 2. All ye lands—All nations that have heard of God's great goodneſs to his people. Make his praiſe glorious—To be renowned and advanced, ſo as may conduce much to his glory.

V. 3—6. Works

6 [d] He turned the sea into dry land: [e] they went through the flood on foot, there did we rejoice in him.

7 He ruleth by his power for ever, [f] his eyes behold the nations: let not the rebellious exalt themselves. Selah.

8 O bless our God, ye people, and make the voice of his praise to be heard.

9 Which ‡ holdeth our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved.

10 For [g] thou, O God, hast proved us: [h] thou hast tried us, as silver is tried.

11 Thou broughtest us into the net, thou laidst affliction upon our loins.

12 [i] Thou hast caused men to ride over our heads; [k] we went through fire and through water: but thou broughtest us out into a * wealthy place.

13 [l] I will go into thy house with burnt-offerings: [m] I will pay thee my vows, 14 Which my lips have † uttered, and my mouth hath spoken when I was in trouble.

15 I will offer unto thee burnt-sacrifices of ‡ fatlings, with the incense of rams: I will offer bullocks with goats. Selah.

16 [n] Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul.

17 I cried unto him with my mouth, and he was extolled with my tongue.

18 [o] If I regard iniquity in my heart: the Lord will not hear me.

19 But verily God hath heard me: he hath attended to the voice of my prayer.

20 Blessed be God, which hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me.

V. 3—6. Works—Toward thy enemies. All the earth—The time will come when all nations shall own, worship, and serve thee. Come and see—Consider well of them. We rejoice—Our nation.

V. 7—10. He ruleth—He is as able to help us still as he was then. His eyes—He observes all their ways, and will over-rule them as he pleases. Exalt themselves—Against God and his people. Ye people—Of other nations. Which holdeth our soul in life—Preserves us from being destroyed by our enemies. To be moved—Fall into utter ruin, as our enemies designed. For thou—Though thou hast preserved us in trouble, and delivered us out of it, yet thou hast suffered us to be brought into it, for our trial and refining. Tried us—With very sore and manifold afflictions.

V. 11, 12. Into the net—Bondage and great straits and dangers on every side. To ride—To insult over us, trample upon us, and abuse us with all possible cruelty, scorn, and contempts. Fire—Divers and dangerous calamities. A wealthy place—A state of liberty, plenty, and prosperity.

V. 13—17. Incense of rams—The smoke whereof, when burnt, ascends up like incense. Come and hear—The work of the grace of God in the renewal of the soul of man, being the most glorious work of God, the king here calls upon all that were acquainted with that work in the least degree, that they might hear from his own lips what God had done for him, in turning him from darkness to light, and taking away from him an earthly, sensual, devilish mind, and by his grace giving of him a new heart, which made him acceptable to God through his beloved Son. I cried—For deliverance. With my mouth—Earnestly, and with a loud voice. He was extolled—For answering my prayers.

V. 18. If I regard iniquity in my heart—Have any liking to, and affection for, any sin, especially idolatry. The Lord will not hear me—My prayer will return unanswered back, and God will be as one that mocketh in the day of my distress.

PSAL. LXVIII.

V. 2—4. Before God—That preſence of God which is deſtructive to the wicked, is joyful to the godly. By his name JAH—Extol him who has manifeſted himſelf, both in his word and by his works, to be the only true, eternal, unchangeable God.

V. 5, 6. A father of the fatherleſs—His poor, oppreſſed people, when deſtitute of all outward ſuccours. In his holy habitation—He will manifeſt himſelf from heaven ſo to be. God ſetteth—Settles ſuch as are deſtitute, in comfortable habitations. The rebellious—Wicked oppreſſors are deprived of all true comfort, and expoſed to manifold miſeries.

V. 7—9. When thou wenteſt—In the pillar of cloud and fire. The earth ſhook—With an earthquake and thunder. The heavens dropped—In ſhowers of rain. Didſt ſend—Didſt from time to time water the land of Canaan, our inheritance, with ſeaſonable and plentiful ſhowers. Thou didſt confirm—Support and ſuſtain the ground when it was dried with ſcorching heat.

V. 10—12. Haſt prepared—Such a fruitful land and plentiful increaſe. The poor—Thy people Iſrael, when they were in ſuch a mean condition. Gave the word—Afforded matter of joy and thankſgiving. That publiſhed it—In ſongs of praiſe and triumph.

V. 13. Lien among the pots—Endured great hardſhips in Egypt, and been in an afflicted, contemptible condition there. Yet ſhall ye be as the wings of a dove—In a more beautiful and amiable condition for the future.

V. 14. In it—In Canaan. At the coming of the Iſraelites thither. It was white—The land and nation then was in a very flouriſhing, joyful condition, and reſplendent, by the eſtabliſhment of God's pure worſhip there.

V. 15. The hill—Mount Zion. An high hill—Though it be but a low, mean hill in outward reſpects, yet it is advanced, even above Baſhan itſelf, in ſpiritual reſpects, in regard of the glorious privileges of God's preſence and worſhip; ſo is the church.

V. 16. Why leap ye—Why boaſt you of your outward privileges, and look down upon Zion with ſcorn and contempt?

V. 17. The chariots of God—The armies of God are an innumerable company. The Lord is among them—The Meſſiah, God manifeſted in the fleſh, is among them as their Lord, having them all under his power and command, upon whom they attend, and who reveals his will unto them. As in Sinai—Where he is in as great majeſty and grace, as he appeared on mount Sinai in power and terror.

V. 18. Thou haſt aſcended on high—Thou, O Lord Chriſt, after thou hadſt humbled thyſelf to the very grave, didſt riſe again, and haſt aſcended triumphantly into the higheſt heavens. Thou haſt led captivity captive—Thou haſt led them captive who led others into captivity. Thou haſt received gifts—Thou art enriched in thy human nature with all the glorious graces and excellencies that heaven and the divine nature can furniſh thee with, and are neceſſary either to the perfection of thy nature, or diſcharge of thy office, or good of thy church. For men—And all this not for thyſelf, but that thou mighteſt diſpenſe them to thy people. Yea, for the rebellious—For the wilful and ſtubborn oppoſers of thy grace, to bring them into ſubjection to thee. That the Lord God might dwell among them—In his ordinances, and the tokens of his preſence, and in their hearts by faith. (Eph. iii. 17.)

V. 19, 20. Loadeth us with benefits—Makes us partakers of the happy fruits of Chriſt's aſcenſion; to whom we owe all our deliverances. The iſſues from death—Deliverance from the moſt deadly dangers.

V. 21, 22. The Lord ſaid—Reſolved, determined, and promiſed. From hence to the end of the pſalm, he ſeems to ſpeak of the glorious things God will do for the Jews in the latter days, by bringing them home from extreme difficulties, v. 22. giving them victory, v. 23. converting them to Chriſt, v. 24—29. ſubduing their enemies, v. 30. bringing all nations to embrace Chriſt, v. 31, &c. I will bring again—Do as great things for my people now, 23 [g] That thy foot may be † dipped in the ‖ blood of thine enemies, [h] and the tongue of thy dogs in the same.

24 They have seen thy goings, O God, even the goings of my God, my King, in the sanctuary.

¶ To the chief musician § upon Shoshannim, A psalm of David.

§ Psa. 45, title.

SAVE me, O God, for [a] the waters are come in unto my soul.

2 [b] I sink in ‡ deep mire, where there is no standing: I am come into ‡ deep waters, where the floods overflow me.

3 I am weary of my crying, my throat is dried: [c] mine eyes fail while I wait for my God.

4 They that [d] hate me without a cause, are more than the hairs of mine head: they that would destroy me, being mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty: then I restored that which I took not away.

5 O God, thou knowest my foolishness; and my § sins are not hid from thee.

6 Let not them that wait on thee, O Lord God of hosts, be ashamed for my sake: let not those that seek thee, be confounded for my sake, O God of Israel.

§ Heb. guiltiness:

as ever I did formerly, and make them as victorious as against Og, and at the Red Sea.

V. 23. Thine enemies—Such a slaughter shall be made among them, that thou mayest wade in their blood, and thy dogs lick it up.

V. 24. They have seen—Thy people have observed to their comfort, and thy enemies to their terror, the solemn removal and procession of the ark to Zion, and its placing in the tabernacle: A type of God's presence with his church.

V. 25. The singers—This notes the beauty, order, and harmony that shall be in the church in the latter days.

V. 26. Bless ye God—In all your assemblies. From the fountain of Israel—All ye people who are the offspring of Israel; all the true seed of Jacob.

V. 27. There is—Attending upon this solemnity. Little Benjamin—The least tribe. Their ruler—The head of the tribe. The princes of Zebulun—That were farther off; and so there was a general meeting of all the tribes; so all the ten tribes shall return as well as the two.

V. 28. Commanded thy strength—Effectually procured and bestowed upon thee all that strength which at any time thou hast put forth in thy battles with, and conquest over thy enemies. Strengthen—Increase our strength, and finish this good work thou hast begun among us.

V. 29. Because—In regard of the presence of God in the assemblies of his people, even the greatest shall come and render their praises to thee for thy goodness to them. At Jerusalem—Which shall be built there by Solomon; and the gospel church in after-times. Bring presents unto thee—In token of their subjection to thee, as was done when the Lord Jesus came.

V. 30, 31. Rebuke—Humble and chastise those that will not bring presents, and submit themselves, but still stand out, and are enemies to thy people. The multitude of the bulls—The great warriors and commanders. The calves of the people—The vulgar underlings. Shall come—To bring presents, and acknowledge their subjection to God. Ethiopia—The greatest enemies and persecutors. Stretch out her hands unto God—In prayer, offering gifts, &c.

V. 32, 33. Ye kingdoms—All other nations who partake of the same grace with God's people. Voice—The gospel published by Christ and his apostles, which is the power of God to salvation.

V. 34. Ascribe—Acknowledge his divine power, by a hearty submission to him. His excellency is over Israel—His excellent power and goodness is in a special manner manifested among his people. His strength is in the clouds—His power is eminently seen there in thunder, &c.

V. 35. Terrible—Thou puttest forth such acts of power from heaven, or in thy church, as may justly terrify thy enemies.

P S A L. LXIX.

V. 1—3. The waters—Troubles have so far invaded me, that my life is in danger. I sink—I am plunged into farther and greater troubles, and can find no means to help myself. I am weary—Tired with crying to thee for help.

V. 4, 5. I restored—I was forced to part with my own right to make them satisfaction for pretended wrongs. O God, thou knowest my foolishness—But though I be innocent as to them, yet I confess myself guilty of many sins and follies before thee.

V. 10, 11. That was to my reproach—I was upbraided for it, as if I had done it only in hypocriſy and deſign. I became a proverb to them—As if they ſhould ſay, I value him no more than I do David: Or, He is a mere David; juſt ſuch a one as he.

V. 12. They that ſit in the gate ſpeak againſt me—Magiſtrates and judges, to whom it belongs to right and vindicate me.

V. 13. But as for me—In all theſe troubles, and notwithſtanding all theſe diſcouragements. My prayer is unto thee, O Lord, in an acceptable time—I pray and ſeek unto thee in the time of my trouble, and having thee engaged to me by promiſe; which therefore I truſt will prove a time of favour and acceptance to me. Hear me, in the truth of thy ſalvation—According to thy faithfulneſs beſtow ſalvation and deliverance upon me

V. 14—16. The mire—This great diſtreſs, wherein I am in danger of periſhing. The deep waters—The diſtreſſes and difficulties wherein they have involved me. The pit—Irrecoverable deſtruction ſeizes upon me. Thy loving kindneſs is good—Grateful and refreſhing in a high meaſure.

V. 17—20. Draw nigh—Manifeſt thyſelf for my reſcue, O thou who ſeemeſt to be departed far from me. Becauſe—Becauſe their malice and rage is ſo great againſt me. I looked for ſome to take pity, but there was none—Few or none.

V. 21, 22. They gave—Inſtead of comforting me, they loaded me with reproaches. In my thirſt they gave me vinegar to drink—This was done to the Lord when ſuffering on the croſs for the ſins of the world, and of thoſe that thus inſulted him in his agonies Let—Let their food, both for body and ſoul, be an occaſion of ſin to them, and conſequently of deſtruction: God will give thoſe up to their own hearts deſires who will reſiſt his grace; and that which is here expreſſed in the form of a wiſh or a prayer, is but the ſame thing as declaring that which will as certainly follow as the conſequence does its cauſe. (Rom. xi. 9, 10.)

V. 23. Let their eyes—Their underſtandings and minds be left to their own wilful ignorance and error. Make—Deprive them of all ability to do good, or to follow that good counſel that is given them.

V. 24, 26. They talk—Scoff at them, reproach them with, and triumph in their calamities.

V. 27. Add—Give them up to a reprobate ſenſe that they may fill up the meaſure of their ſins. (Matth. xxiii. 32.) Let them not come—Not partake of thy pardoning mercy, nor of that righteouſneſs or faithfulneſs whereby thou art wont to juſtify and pardon thoſe that truly repent and believe.

V. 28. Let them—Let their wickedneſs be ſo notorious, and the tokens of God's wrath ſo manifeſt, that all may ſee, and fear, and turn unto the Lord.

V. 1. Give—Beſtow upon Solomon my ſon, whom I have now appointed king, and to all his poſterity that ſhall ſucceed him on the throne, a ſpirit of wiſdom and judgment, to know what is right and agreeable to thy law, and to govern himſelf and his people accordingly. Righteouſneſs—Uprightneſs of heart to perform every thing according to his underſtanding.

V. 2, 3. He ſhall judge thy people—If thou doſt this for him. With righteouſneſs and thy poor with judgment—Thy people, who are commonly in a low afflicted condition. The mountains ſhall bring peace—All places of the land, even the moſt unlikely, ſhall abound with peace, plenty, and proſperity. And the little hills, by righteouſneſs—By reaſon of the juſt and righteous adminiſtration of affairs by all that are intereſted therein.

V. 4—6. He ſhall judge the poor—Vindicate them from their powerful oppreſſors. They ſhall fear thee—Worſhip and ſerve thee, O God, ſo that together with peace, true religion ſhall flouriſh. He ſhall come down like rain—The adminiſtration of his government ſhall be ſo gentle and eaſy, that it ſhall refreſh and revive the hearts of his ſubjects, and make them a flouriſhing people.

V. 7, 8. In his days abundance of peace—This was moſt eminently fulfilled in Chriſt Jeſus, when at his coming the heavenly hoſt praiſed God, ſaying, Glory be unto God in the higheſt, and on earth peace, good-will toward men; and who himſelf ſaid to his diſciples, Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you. (Matth. ii. 11.) Daily shall he be praised—By all that know him on earth, and with the Father and the Spirit he shall be praised and adored as the Redeemer of all the family of heaven for ever, for it is said, Let all the angels of God worship him. (Heb. i. 6. Matth. ii. 11.)

V. 16. There—Such shall be the extraordinary fruitfulness of the land in his days, that a handful of corn sown on the top of the barren mountains, shall bring forth a plentiful crop. The fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon—The ears being so thick and tall shall make a noise with the wind, as the trees in Lebanon do. An emblem of the great success of the gospel, and the flourishing estate of the church and kingdom of Christ. They of the city shall flourish—The citizens of Jerusalem, and likewise all his subjects every where, shall flourish in numbers, in the true and spiritual riches of his kingdom, and in power to do his will on earth as it is done in heaven.

V. 17—20. His name—His honour and renown. This was chiefly fulfilled in Christ. Men shall be blessed in him—Through the merits and mediation of Christ Jesus and in no other name, there being no other name given whereby men may be saved. Let the whole earth be filled with his glory; Amen—Let his kingdom spread all the world over. The prayers of David are ended—Among the psalms, which consist much of petitions and prayers, this is the last which David composed; being made but a little before his death. And as he wrote as he was inspired by the Spirit of God, his prayers and praise may and will be made use of by all who by the same Spirit are enabled to call upon and praise the same God in all ages, and may have their use in that blessed world where assemblies never break up, but are engaged in everlasting praise.

P S A L. LXXIII.

V. 1. Truly God is good to Israel—Though God's dealings with his people many times seem to be very harsh and severe, and have raised many doubts and scruples in my mind, yet I am now fully satisfied, that, all things considered, he is really more bountiful and merciful to them than to sinners, notwithstanding the adversity of the one, and prosperity of the other. To such as are of a clean heart—Freed from the power of sin, and by the grace of sanctification have the very thoughts of their hearts cleansed.

V. 2. But as for me—But I must needs confess, though I am now satisfied, yet time was when it was otherwise with me. My feet were almost gone—I was extremely staggered, my faith in God's promises and providences was almost overthrown, and I was ready to repent of my piety. My steps had well-nigh slipt—I was even going to shift for myself, by carnal-policy, and creature-confidence, as I saw others do.

V. 3, 4. For I was envious at the foolish—I grudged and murmured at it, and was secretly desirous to partake of their prosperity. There are no bands in their death—They are not violently dragged to an untimely death by the hand of the magistrate, or by any dismal casualty, or any grievous torment of mind or body. But their strength is firm—They continue strong and healthful all their days, till at last they go out quietly, like a lamp when the oil is spent.

V. 5—7. They are not in trouble as other men—They escape even common calamities. They are without chastisement from God, and by that it is proved they are not his children. (Heb. xii. 8.) Therefore pride compasseth them about—Discovers itself on every side, in their countenance, speech, and carriage. Their eyes stand out with fatness—They live in great plenty and prosperity.

V. 8. They are corrupt—Dissolute and licentious, letting loose the reins to all manner of wickedness. And speak wickedly—Wickedly boast of their oppressions. They speak loftily—Bragging of their power to oppress, and breathing forth nothing but threatenings against the people of God.

V. 9. They set their mouth against the heavens—Bid defiance both to God and man, blaspheming God's name, denying or deriding his providence, reviling his servants. Their tongue walketh through the earth—Takes liberty to revile whom they please.

V. 10. Therefore—Because the wicked prosper, the godly are brought low. Waters of a full cup are wrung out to them—A cup full of waters, of afflictions; and yet God disappoints the wicked in their aims, and many times follows them with many and sore judgments.

V. 11—13. And they—The ungodly, mentioned v. 9. Say, How doth God know—Sure he takes no notice of affairs here below. Behold, these are the ungodly—This is their condition and carriage in it. I have cleansed my heart in vain—Get nothing by all my holiness and strictness. And washed my hands in innocency—Keep myself innocent and pure from evil practices, in vain.

V. 14—16. If I speak thus—Approve of ungodliness and ungodly ones in this manner. I should offend against the generation of thy children—By condemning them as neglected and disregarded by God, and so tempting them to forsake God and his ways. When I thought to know this—To find out by my own reason why God deals in this manner, I found it too hard a task to satisfy myself in that way.

V. 17. Until I went into the sanctuary of God—Consulted the oracles of the word, and was instructed by the preaching thereof in the sanctuary. Then understood I their end—That there would quickly follow a dark and dismal night of eternal misery, after their fair day of outward prosperity. They that neglect the word of God and his worship, deprive themselves of that which God himself hath made the means whereby a right understanding of his holy will is obtained.

V. 18—20. They are utterly consumed with terrors—Dreadful judgments unexpectedly seizing upon them. As a dream when one awaketh—As men awakened slight their most pleasing dreams, finding them to be but dreams. So, O Lord, when thou awakest—Comest to execute judgments on them, thou shalt make it appear that all their imaginary felicity was but a meer fancy and shadow; and that it was not in vain that thou hast commanded all to love thee as the only good which death cannot destroy.

V. 21—23. Thus my heart was grieved—So as I have formerly expressed. I was pricked in my reins—Inwardly grieved and disquieted. I was as a beast—Regarding only present things, and judging only by sense. Before thee—In thy sight and judgment. Nevertheless—Notwithstanding these failings and miscarriages of mine. I am continually with thee—In thy favour, and under thy care. Thou hast holden me—Upheld me from miscarrying by this or such-like temptations.

V. 24—26. Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel—Directions of thy word, motions of thy spirit, and passages of thy providence. And afterward receive me to glory—Translate me to everlasting glory in heaven; into which an entrance shall be ministered unto all that die in the faith of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. (2 Pet. i. 11.) There is none upon earth that I desire besides thee—God, and God alone, is all my salvation, and all the desire of my soul: blessed are they whose portion the Lord is; they, and they alone, are truly independant of the smiles and frowns of this dying changeable world for their peace: their end and their all is the unchangeable God, by whose sacred presence they are ever surrounded, in whose spirit they live and walk, and whose favour is to them better than life. My flesh and my heart faileth—I find, by sad experience, my own weakness and inability to encounter with such temptations, and to uphold myself under such troubles as I meet with; yea, I find myself a decaying creature, that shall shortly return to the dust. God is my portion for ever—He, by his unmerited grace, has enabled me to choose him for my comforter and everlasting reward.

V. 27. They that are far from thee shall perish—In a state of enmity and opposition to thee, and do wholly withdraw themselves from their obedience to thee. Thou hast destroyed all them that go from thee—Having profest subjection to thee, do revolt from thee, and set their affections on the creatures more than God. And equally will they perish who never drew nigh unto God, nor acknowledged any subjection to him.

V. 28. But it is good for me to draw near to God—Upon all occasions, by the exercise of faith, love, and by meditation, prayer, and the performance of all holy duties, is my highest privilege and honour, my chiefest interest and happiness. I have put my trust in the Lord God—Depend upon him alone for all my comfort and happiness. That I may declare all thy works—And hereby it will come to pass, that I shall have abundant cause of praising thee for all thy goodness and mercy to me.

shall receive—Be fully possessed of the government of the whole body of the nation.

V. 3. The earth—The whole land is in confusion by reason of the mal-administration of Saul, and the civil wars among us. I bear up the pillars of it—I endeavour to support its tottering condition, by setting up good magistrates, and maintaining religion and justice.

V. 4. I said unto the fools—I charged those that oppress me to desist from their wicked and injurious practices, which shall not now go unpunished as they have done. Lift not up the horn—Carry not yourselves proudly and insolently, persecuting and oppressing God's people.

V. 5—7. God is the judge—Therefore it is in vain to oppose him.

V. 8. There is a cup—Of vengeance and judgment. The wine is red—Strong, the judgments are grievous. Full of mixture—Variety of judgments. He poureth out of the same—Affliction is the portion of all. But the dregs the wicked shall drink—The most dreadful part of those judgments the wicked shall force from God, as if they wrung them out of his hands.

V. 9, 10. But I will declare for ever—The praises of God. The horns of the wicked will I cut off—Bereave them of their great power and dignity.

PSAL. LXXVI.

V. 1—5. In Judah is God known—Not only by his word, but by his miraculous works wrought among them. In Salem—Jerusalem. There brake he the arrows—Utterly ruined his enemies. Thou art more excellent than the mountains of prey—The most powerful enemies of thy people, who seek to make a prey of them. They have slept their sleep—They have slept now such a sleep as they shall never awake out of.

V. 6—8. The chariot and horse—The riders in and on them. Thou didst cause judgment to be heard from heaven—Execute judgment by an angel from heaven, the fame whereof was quickly spread abroad in the land and world. The earth feared—The neighbour nations were afraid to plot or act any thing farther against thy people.

V. 9—12. The wrath of man shall praise thee—Be so over-ruled by thy providence, as to turn to the good of thy people; whereupon they may have occasion to praise thee. The remainder—That which is over and above what may turn to thy people's good, and to advance thy praise. All that be round about—Neighbouring nations, who shall hear this mighty work of God. He shall cut off the spirit of princes—Their pride, insolence, and contempt of others.

PSAL. LXXVII.

V. 1—3. My sore ran—My sorrows seemed incurable. I remembered God, and was troubled—When I thought to assuage my grief with the meditation of God's goodness, employed formerly for me, it was but the more increased thereby, because I now apprehended him to be engaged against me. My spirit was overwhelmed—To consider that I got no relief by my complaints.

V. 4, 5. Thou holdest mine eyes waking—By the sharpness of my sorrows, and perplexity of my spirit. I have considered the days of old—Remarkable passages of providences in former times.

† Or, A pſalm for Aſaph, to give inſtruction.

GIVE ear, O my people, to my law: incline your ears to the words of my mouth.

2 [a] I will open my mouth in a parable: I will utter dark ſayings of old:

a Iſa. 49. 4 Matt. 13. 35

3 [b] Which we have heard and known, and our fathers have told us.

b Iſa. 44. 1

4 [c] We will not hide them from their children, ſhewing to the generation to come, the praiſes of the Lord; and his ſtrength and his wonderful works that he hath done.

c Deut. 4. 6 Joel 1. 3

5 For [d] he eſtabliſhed a teſtimony in Jacob, and appointed a law in Iſrael, which he commanded our fathers, [e] that they ſhould make them known to their children.

d Pſa. 147. 19

e Deut. 4. 9 & 6. 7. & 11. 19

6 [f] That the generation to come might know them, even the children which ſhould be born: who ſhould ariſe and declare them to their children:

f Pſa. 102. 18

7 That they might ſet their hope in God, and not forget the works of God; but keep his commandments:

g Exod. 32. 9 & 33. 3. & 34. 9 Deut. 9. 6, 13 & 31. 27 Pſa. 68. 6

h Verſe 37

V. 6. I call to remembrance my ſong—Former mercies, which engaged me to praiſe thee, even in the night. My ſpirit made diligent ſearch—To find out the cauſe of theſe dealings; and whether or when they may have an end, and what means I ſhould uſe to recover my former happy ſtate.

V. 7—13. Hath God forgotten to be gracious—If you, reader, are making a queſtion of this, remember, it is ſaid to all that fear the Lord, that obey the voice of his ſervant, that walketh in darkneſs and have no light, Let him truſt in the name of the Lord, and ſtay upon his God. (Iſa. l. 10.) And they that continue to believe in him, even againſt hope, will not fail to find, that though darkneſs may endure as for a night, yet light—grace, mercy, and peace will come in the morning. But I will remember the years—The great work which, by his almighty power, he has in all ages wrought for the deliverance of his people in like diſtreſſes. Thy way—The diſpenſations of thy providence in thus afflicting thy people, are above the reach of human reaſon, and the grounds thereof to be found only in thy word. Who is ſo great as our God—Who therefore can reſcue his people out of their troubles, when he ſees fit.

V. 14—19. The waters ſaw thee—Felt the viſible effects of thy divine preſence and power. The depths—The deep ſea was divided to the very bottom. Thine arrows—Lightnings and thunderbolts. Thy footſteps are not known—Such is the depth of the riches both of the wiſdom and knowledge of God, his judgments are unſearchable, and his ways paſt finding out, (Rom. xi. 33.) and therefore his government calls for our entire ſubmiſſion and reſignation to it without knowing why it pleaſes the Lord ſo to order whatever concerns us.

V. 20. Thou leddeſt thy people like a flock—With all poſſible care and tenderneſs, and therefore I truſt thou wilt take care of thy poor people.

P S A L. LXXVIII.

V. 1. O my people—Of the ſame country and lineage with myſelf. To my law—My doctrine which from God I ſhall deliver to you for the governing of your lives.

V. 2. I will open my mouth—I will with great ſeriouſneſs and earneſtneſs declare to you, ſuch things as may tend to your inſtruction and advantage. I will utter dark ſayings of old—Doctrinal truths, couched in hiſtorical examples, ſhewing God's tranſcendent goodneſs to an unworthy people, and their prodigious rebellion and ingratitude.

V. 3—5. The praiſes—The praiſe-worthy actions. A teſtimony—His law.

9 The children of Ephraim being armed and † carrying bows, turned back in the day of battle.

† Heb. throwing forth.

10 They kept not the covenant of God, and refused to walk in his law:

11 And forgat his works, and his wonders that he had shewed them.

12 Marvellous things did he in the sight of their fathers, in the land of Egypt, [i] in the field of Zoan.

13 [k] He divided the sea, and caused them to pass through, and [l] he made the waters to stand as an heap.

14 [m] In the day-time also he led them with a cloud, and all the night with a light of fire.

15 [n] He clave the rocks in the wilderness, and gave them drink as out of the great depths.

16 He brought [o] streams also out of the rock, and caused waters to run down like rivers.

17 And they sinned yet more against him, by [p] provoking the Most High in the wilderness.

18 And [q] they tempted God in their heart, by asking meat for their lust.

19 [r] Yea, they spake against God: they said, Can God * furnish a table in the wilderness?

20 [s] Behold, he smote the rock, that the waters gushed out, and the streams overflowed: can he give bread also? can he provide flesh for his people?

21 Therefore the Lord heard this, and [t] was wroth, so a fire was kindled against Jacob, and anger also came up against Israel;

22 Because they believed not in God, and trusted not in his salvation:

23 Though he had commanded the clouds from above, [u] and opened the doors of heaven,

24 [x] And had rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them of the corn of heaven.

25 ‖ Man did eat angels food: he sent them meat to the full.

26 [y] He caused an east wind ‡ to blow in the heaven: and by his power he brought in the south wind.

27 He rained flesh also upon them as dust, and † feathered fowls like as the sand of the sea.

28 And he let it fall in the midst of their camp, round about their habitations.

29 [z] So they did eat, and were well filled: for he gave them their own desire;

30 They were not estranged from their lusts: but [a] while their meat was yet in their mouths,

31 The wrath of God came upon them, and slew the fattest of them, and ‡ smote down the § chosen men of Israel.

32 For all this [b] they sinned still: and believed not for his wondrous works.

33 [c] Therefore their days did he consume in vanity, and their years in trouble.

34 [d] When he slew them, then they sought him, and they returned, and inquired early after God.

35 And they remembered that [e] God was their rock, and the high God their redeemer.

36 [f] Nevertheless, they did flatter him with their mouth, and they lied unto him with their tongues.

37 For [g] their heart was not right with him, neither were they stedfast in his covenant.

V. 6—7. That they might set their hope in God—That, by the consideration of God's gracious promises and wonderful works wrought for his people, they might be encouraged to trust in him.

V. 9—13. The children of Ephraim—The people of Israel, called here by the name of Ephraim, which was an eminent tribe, though they were sufficiently armed in all respects, yet were worsted. Forgat his works—Lived as if they had forgotten them.

V. 15—22. He gave them drink as out of the great depths—In great abundance. They tempted God—Desired a proof of his power. By asking meat for their lust—To satisfy their luxurious appetite. They were desirous that God should use his mighty power even to give them things which were not necessary for them; and O! what danger is there of tempting God as they did, and of falling under his displeasure: safe and happy are they who are humble enough to be satisfied with whatever it pleases God to allow them; and having his holy Spirit for their consolation and support, are therewith not only content but thankful. So a fire was kindled against Jacob—God's wrath. Because they believed not in God—That he both could and would save them from destruction by famine.

V. 23—26. Manna, the corn of heaven—That came down out of the air. Angels food—Such delicious food as were fit for angels. And they that live by faith in God their Saviour, and are feeding upon that spiritual bread which cometh down from heaven, they eat angels food, and are with them, though on earth, partakers of the nature of everlasting life. (1 Cor. x. 3. John xvii. 3.)

V. 27—30. They were not estranged from their lust—Still greedily desirous of more, to gratify their sensual appetite, though they had glutted themselves therewith already: And by this a sufficient proof is given that objects of sense cannot satisfy the desires of immortal souls: unless satisfied with God himself, they will hunger, thirst, and crave for ever.

V. 31—33. The fattest of them—Those that had fed most were first slain; and they that feed most on perishable food will sink the first and deepest into that misery which is the final consequence of living and dying in the neglect of God and of his great salvation. (Heb. ii. 3.) The chosen men—The ringleaders in this disturbance. They believed not, therefore their days did he consume in vanity—In tedious and fruitless marches up and down, to and fro, to no purpose, but only to consume them. And their years in trouble—In manifold diseases, dangers, and horrors of mind.

V. 34—37. They returned—Presently seem to repent and return to God. They remembered God their redeemer—That he only had, and could deliver them. Nevertheless they lied unto him—Made fair promises, but failed of performances.

V. 38—41. He

38 [h] But he being full of compaſſion, forgave their iniquity, and deſtroyed them not; yea, many a time [i] turned he his anger away, [k] and did not ſtir up all his wrath.

39 For [l] he remembered [m] that they were but fleſh; [n] a wind that paſſeth away, and cometh not again.

40 How oft did they † [o] provoke him in the wilderneſs, and grieve him in the deſart?

41 Yea, [p] they turned back and tempted God, and limited the holy One of Iſrael.

41 They remembered not his hand, nor the day when he delivered them § from the enemy.

43 How [q] he had ‖ wrought his ſigns in Egypt, and his wonders in the field of Zoan:

44 [r] And had turned their rivers into blood: and their floods, that they could not drink.

45 [s] He ſent divers ſorts of flies among them, which devoured them; and [t] frogs, which deſtroyed them.

46 [u] He gave alſo their increaſe unto the caterpillar, and their labour unto the locuſt.

47 [x] He † deſtroyed their vines with hail, and their ſycamore-trees with § froſt.

48 [y] § He gave up their cattle alſo to the hail, and their flocks to * hot thunder-bolts.

50 ‖ He made a way to his anger, he ſpared not their ſoul from death: but gave ‡ their life over to the peſtilence.

51 [z] And ſmote all the firſt-born in Egypt: the chief of their ſtrength in [a] the tabernacles of Ham:

52 But [b] made his own people to go forth like ſheep, and guided them in the wilderneſs like a flock.

53 And he led them on ſafely, ſo that they feared not; but the ſea [c] * overwhelmed their enemies.

54 And he brought them to the border of his ſanctuary, even to this mountain, [d] which his right hand had purchaſed.

55 He caſt out the heathen alſo before them, and [e] divided them an inheritance by line, and made the tribes of Iſrael to dwell in their tents.

56 Yet they tempted and provoked the moſt high God, and kept not his teſtimonies:

57 But turned back and dealt unfaithfully like their fathers: they were turned aſide [f] like a deceitful bow.

58 [g] For they provoked him to anger with their high places, and moved him to jealouſy with their graven images.

59 When God heard this, he was wroth, and greatly abhorred Iſrael:

60 [h] So that he forſook the tabernacle of Shiloh, the tent which he placed among men:

61 [i] And delivered his ſtrength into captivity, and his glory into the enemies hand.

V. 42—45. They remembered not his hand—The wonderful works of his Almighty power wrought for their deliverence. He ſent flies which devoured them—By their poiſonous ſtings. When the judgments of God are to be inflicted on a people, his Almighty power can make flies deſtroy a great nation. How are human weakneſs and the power of God diſcovered by the events that are here recorded for the information of mankind!

V. 46—49. The fierceneſs of his anger—Other moſt grievous plagues, which came thick upon them, and were the clear evidences of God's fierce indignation againſt them. By ſending evil angels among them—Which terrified them by frightful apparitions. When men will continue in diſobedience to God, the powers of darkneſs are by him let looſe upon them as the dreadful executioners of his divine diſpleaſure.

V. 50. He made a way to his anger—He afterwards inflicted greater judgments upon them, whereby he cleared a paſſage for his wrath, ſo that it might proceed without interruption, to do farther execution on the obſtinate Egyptians, by taking away the life both of man and beaſt.

V. 51—53. The tabernacles of Ham—The Egyptians; the offſpring of Ham. They feared not—That they ſhould be drowned as they paſſed through the ſea.

V. 54, 55. He brought them to the border of his ſanctuary—The very ſkirts of Canaan, the land deſigned for the ſpecial place of his worſhip. He made Iſrael to dwell in their tents—The habitations of the heathen.

V. 56—60. They were turned aſide like a deceitful bow—Utterly deceiving his expectation, by declining from the rule he gave them to walk by. When God heard this—Perceived. So that he forſook the tabernacle of Shiloh—Suffering the ark, the ſign of his preſence, to be taken by the Philiſtines.

V. 61—64. His ſtrength—The ark, the ſign and pledge of his ſtrength and power to be put forth on his people's behalf. His glory—The ſeat of his glorious preſence. The fire—God's wrath, v. 21. Widows made no lamentation—Being overwhelmed with the ſenſe of public calamities.

V. 65, 66. He

64 [l] Their priests fell by the sword: and [d] their widows made no lamentation.

65 Then the Lord [n] awaked as one out of sleep, and [o] like a mighty man that shouteth by reason of wine.

66 And [p] he smote his enemies in the hinder parts: he put them to a perpetual reproach.

67 Moreover, he refused the tabernacle of Joseph: and chose not the tribe of Ephraim.

68 But chose the tribe of Judah, the mount Zion, [q] which he loved.

69 And he built his sanctuary like high palaces, like the earth which he hath * established for ever.

70 [r] He chose David also his servant, and took him from the sheep-folds:

PSAL. LXXIX.

¶ A psalm ‖ of Asaph.

O God, the heathen are come into thine inheritance, [a] thy holy temple have they defiled: [b] they have laid Jerusalem on heaps.

2 [c] The dead bodies of thy servants have they given to be meat unto the fowls of the heaven, the flesh of thy saints, unto the beasts of the earth.

3 Their blood have they shed like water round about Jerusalem: [d] and there was none to bury them.

4 [e] We are become a reproach to our neighbours: a scorn and derision to them that are round about us.

5 [f] How long, Lord? wilt thou be angry for ever? shall thy jealousy burn like fire?

6 [g] Pour out thy wrath upon the heathen that have not known thee, and upon the kingdoms that have not called upon thy name.

7 For they have devoured Jacob, and laid waste his dwelling-place.

8 [h] O remember not against us ‖ former iniquities: let thy tender mercies speedily prevent us: for we are brought very low.

9 Help us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy name: and deliver us, and purge away our sins for thy name's sake.

10 [i] Wherefore should the heathen say, Where is their God? let him be known among the heathen in our sight by the † revenging of the blood of thy servants which is shed

11 Let [k] the sighing of the prisoner come before thee, according to the greatness of † thy power: * preserve thou those that are appointed to die.

12 And render unto our neighbours [l] seven-fold into their bosom, [m] their reproach wherewith they have reproached thee, O Lord.

13 So [n] we thy people and sheep of thy pasture, will give thee thanks for ever: we will shew forth thy praise § to all generations.

V. 5. A teſtimony—A memorial of that glorious deliverance mentioned in the following words. When he went—When God appeared as a captain in the head, and on the behalf of his people, to execute judgments upon the Egyptians. I heard a language—My progenitors, the people of Iſrael. That I underſtood not—Which was a great affliction and aggravation of their miſery.

V. 6, 7. From the pots—Thoſe veſſels wherein they carried water, lime, ſtraw, brick, &c. The ſecret place of thunder—The pillar of fire and cloud, from whence I thundered and fought againſt the Egyptians. I proved thee—Tried thy faith and obedience, the want whereof thou didſt diſcover and thereby thy unworthineſs of any mercy.

V. 8—11. I will teſtify—Declare thy duty in thoſe laws which I gave thee, by obedience whereto thou mayeſt be happy. Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it—Aſk freely, and then prepare thyſelf to receive abundantly—Aſk in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the ſea, driven with the wind and toſſed; and let not that man think that he ſhall receive any thing of the Lord, (James i. 5, 6) who in his heart doubts the faithfulneſs of his promiſes at the very time he is calling upon him with his lips. Iſrael would none of me—Rejected me and my ſervice.

V. 7—9. Thou haſt brought a vine out of Egypt—Thy church and people Iſrael. Thou preparedſt room before it—Didſt root out idolatrous nations. To take deep root—To be firmly ſettled, that it might flouriſh the more.

V. 10—13. The hills were covered—They were ſo numerous, that they inhabited the hills as well as valleys. Like the goodly cedars—A ſtrong and luſty people. Why haſt thou then broken down her hedges—Withdrawn thy protection. The boar out of the wood—Fierce and furious enemies.

V. 14, 15. The branch—Thy people whom thou did eſtabliſh and ſupport, as men do vines by ſtakes. For thyſelf—For thy own ſpecial delight, ſervice, and honour.

V. 16. It is burnt with fire, it is cut down—Thy people are deſtroyed with fire and ſword. They periſh—By reaſon of thy diſpleaſure.

V. 17. Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand—Let thy power and grace appear in protecting us, for the ſake of thy Son our Saviour.

V. 12. So I gave them up unto their own hearts lust—Withdrew my grace, and left them to their own wicked inclinations. This of all the divine judgments was and is the most dreadful: for the heart of man without grace, with all its acquirements, being in its very nature desperately wicked, to have all the influences and restraints of grace withdrawn, it pursues the objects of its selfish desire by means that covers it with shame, and misery flows from itself as from a fountain of evil—itself is hell; and a soul forsaken of God on earth wants but the infernal fellowship of devils, of finally impenitent souls, and the external flames, to complete its torments. Well may they, who have known the terrors of the Lord in their own souls, cry to him not to take his holy Spirit from them—well may they spend their very lives in warning their fellow-mortals of their danger, and in persuading them to fly from the wrath to come.

V. 13—16. The haters of the Lord—The enemies of God and his people. Submitted themselves—Been forced to stoop, though but feignedly. But their time—The Israelites flourishing condition.

PSALM. LXXXII.

V. 1—4. God standeth in the congregation of the mighty—In all the assemblies of the great. He judgeth among the gods—Observes the proceedings of magistrates, who are his deputies, and will deal with them accordingly.

V. 5. They know not—But, alas! it is in vain to speak to these wicked, corrupt rulers, who have no sense of good or evil, right or wrong; or at least carry themselves as if they were wholly ignorant thereof. Neither will they understand—They shut their eyes against the light, and are wilfully ignorant. They walk on in darkness—Persist and proceed in their ways of ignorance, sin, and folly. All the foundations of the earth are out of course—All rulers and governors, that should settle and establish justice and order, have disturbed it by their irregular and disorderly proceedings.

V. 6. I have said, Ye are gods—I have given you that title of Gods, because you have a commission from God to act in his name and stead, as it is expounded. (John x. 34, 35) All of you are children of the Most High—Even heathen magistrates (Rom. xiii. 1.) are representees of God's person, and intrusted with his authority.

V. 7, 8. But ye shall die like one of the princes—As other princes have done before you. Arise, O God, judge the earth—Since rulers and judges are so corrupt that there is no hope of relief from them, be thou pleased to take the work into thine own hands, and render to every one according to his works. Thou shalt inherit all nations—Rule all the nations of the world as thy own, and govern them by thy word and spirit.

PSALM. LXXXIII.

Penned upon occasion of that conspiracy and attempt made against Judah and Jerusalem by Sennacherib.

V. 1—3. Be not still, O God—Do not carry it as if thou wert unconcerned in our condition, but bestir thyself for us. Make a tumult—A tumultuous noise, by their reproaches and threatenings. Thy hidden ones—Thy people, whom thou hidest as a precious treasure, and protectest from the rage of their enemies.

V. 13—18. Like a wheel—Uncertain in their counsels, and unstable in all their ways. Setteth the mountains on fire—Trees and woods on the mountains. Fill their faces with shame—By crossing their their designs, disappointing their hopes, and confounding their confidence. That they may seek thy name, O Lord—Be wrought upon, or forced, to own and worship thee. Here we see what was the end for which afflictions and judgments are desired to be inflicted on the enemies of David and those that were united to him, who are the types of the Lord and of his church. And what David desires to be inflicted upon those whose wicked and persecuting conduct he describes, being no other than the mind and will of God, whoever are guilty of the same crimes, will, as the consequence of them, suffer the punishments which are thus mentioned, unless they avoid them by true repentance, and seeking the forgiveness of God against whom all sin is committed. So that in reading the psalms, it is to be observed whatever are the characters or conduct of the persons which are in this manner desired to be visited with the divine chastisements, that persons of the same character, and who are guilty of the same conduct, stand exposed to the same punishments from God in every age all the world over. Let them be put to shame and perish—Those of them that will not seek to thee. That men may know—Find by experience. That thou whose name alone is JEHOVAH, art the—Righteous judge of all the earth, and who at the same time that thou art ready and infinitely willing to shew mercy and forgive the penitent, wilt in no wise clear those that will continue to offend against thy holy will, by living in unbelief, and without the spirit of charity, of justice, of mercy and truth in their hearts, and a suitable conduct in their lives.

P S A L. LXXXIV.

V. 1—4. How amiable—How affecting and delightful are the public ordinances to those that know the worth and use thereof! My soul longeth, fainteth for the courts of the Lord—By the long deferring of my hopes, and earnest desire after them. They will be still praising thee—Exercising themselves in thy praises, and other duties of thy public worship.

V. 5. Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee—Who, disclaiming his own strength, seeks to thee alone for assistance and ability, and accordingly receives strength for every duty, (Phil. iv. 13) and thereupon desires to be much in the use of the ordinances, to increase his strength thereby. In whose heart—Whose heart is bent upon it, and is fully resolved to associate himself with those that go to thy house to enjoy communion with thee there.

V. 6. Who passing—Who in their passage meet with many incommodious places, by reason of drought and other inconveniencies, and thereupon dig many wells and pits for the benefit of passengers, to encourage them in their way, and render their journey as easy and delightful to them as may be. The rain also filleth the pools—And God blesses their endeavours, and sends rain to fill those places, and refresh the thirsty traveller.

V. 7, 8. They go from strength to strength—They gather fresh strength as they pass along, so far are they from being tired and wearied with their journey, by their strong desires and earnest expectations of communion with God in his ordinances. Hear my prayer—To restore me to thy house and service.

V. 9—12. Look upon the face of thine anointed—Cast a favourable eye upon me, for the sake of my Redeemer, who ever appeareth at the throne of grace in my behalf. The Lord God is a sun—To enlighten, quicken, direct, and comfort his people. And shield—To protect and preserve them from evil. The Lord will give grace—His favour and loving kindness, and all the blessed fruits of it. And glory—Honour from himself in this world, and eternal glory in the world to come. No good thing will be withhold from them that walk uprightly—Worship God by faith, doing his will from the heart.

world appeared on earth; and it is the happy privilege of all believers to the end of the world, that, by the knowledge of God's merciful loving kindneſs, they may love him, and devote themſelves to do his good and acceptable will on earth as it is done in heaven. Thou haſt taken away all thy wrath—Thoſe calamities which were the fruit of thy wrath. Turn us, and cauſe thine anger to ceaſe—Free us fully from the remainders of thoſe evils we yet groan under.

V. 6—8. Revive us—Bring back the remainder of thy captives, as thou haſt done ſome of them. I will hear—Diligently obſerve. What God the Lord will ſpeak—By way of anſwer to my prayers. For he will ſpeak peace unto his people—Send freedom from the evils.

V. 9. Surely his ſalvation is nigh—Our compleat deliverance and redemption by Chriſt draws on apace. That glory may dwell in our land—That our land may recover its former glory, by having the worſhip of God reſtored in the purity of his ordinances; but eſpecially that the glorious preſence of God, yea the God of glory himſelf, the Lord Chriſt, who is the glory of Iſrael, may come and dwell viſibly among us.

V. 10. Mercy and truth are met together—And when that time ſhall come, there will be a happy conjunction of mercifulneſs and faithfulneſs, of juſtice and peaceableneſs among men; but eſpecially there ſhall be an admirable diſcovery of theſe ſeveral attributes of God in the work of our redemption by Chriſt: mercy in ſparing the ſinner; truth in fulfilling the promiſes of ſending his Son and Spirit; righteouſneſs in puniſhing ſin in his Son to the full; and peace in the reconciliation wrought between God and man thereby.

V. 11. Truth ſhall ſpring, and righteouſneſs ſhall look down from heaven—God's juſtice being fully ſatisfied, he ſhall graciouſly and favourably look down from heaven upon men; and then alſo theſe graces ſhall ſo abound in the days of the Meſſiah, as if the earth brought forth nothing but truth, and the heavens rained down nothing but righteouſneſs.

V. 12, 13. The Lord ſhall give that which is good—All ſpiritual and temporal bleſſings. He is a fountain of good, and nothing but bleſſedneſs flows from him to all that hope in his mercy, as their God and Saviour. Righteouſneſs ſhall ſet us in the way of his ſteps—That righteouſneſs which is imparted to the ſoul by his grace, ſhall enable us to do what the Lord our God requires of us. Righteouſneſs and holineſs ſhall then flouriſh, and have a free paſſage in every place.

P S A L. LXXXVI.

V. 1—5. I am poor and needy—Unable to help myſelf. Preſerve my ſoul, for I am holy—Sanctified by thy grace, and devoted to thy ſervice. Thou, Lord, art plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee—In truth, and with an upright heart deſire to be reconciled unto thee, however their repentance and forſaking their former courſes, may cauſe them to be deſpiſed by the companions of the former part of their lives, and by all who will not regard how much they are required to turn unto God for mercy and for grace, that they may be ſaved from the wrath to come.

V. 10. Thou art God alone—There being but one Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, one faith, one baptiſm of the Holy Spirit, and one God and Father of all. (Eph. iv. 5, 6.)

V. 11. I

V. 11, 12. In the dark—The grave. In the land of forgetfulness—The grave, wherein men are forgotten. Now since none of all these can be, and this is like to be my condition very speedily, therefore prevent it.

V. 13—18. In the morning shall my prayer prevent thee—Come to thee before the usual time. While I suffer thy terrors, I am distracted—Despair and madness are ready to take place upon me. And are not the terrors of a guilty conscience the frequent cause of melancholy and madness? If they are, what means of cure can be equal to that of prayer to Him whose mercy extends to the most guilty, and with whose power nothing is too hard? (Jer. xxxii. 17.) Lover and friend hast thou put into darkness—Made them to hide themselves from me.

P S A L. LXXXIX.

V. 1. I will sing of the mercies of the Lord for ever—As long as I live, and which shall be conveyed, by this psalm, to all generations. With my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness—Manifested not only in those mercies thou hast bestowed upon us, but in those judgments thou hast inflicted on us, which are acts of truth and faithfulness.

V. 2, 3. For I have said—Concluded thus within myself. Mercy shall be built up for ever—Thy mercy to David's family, and thy people Israel, shall be carried on to all generations, till at last it be perfected in glory. And that provision which thou hast made for shewing mercy consistent with thy justice to the end of the world, shall cause thy love and good-will to fallen man to be admired and adored for ever. Thy faithfulness shalt thou establish in the very heavens—As firmly and durably as the heavens themselves. And this my confidence is built on God's decree and promise, who said, I have sworn unto David my servant—As the type of my beloved Son.

V. 4—7. Thy seed will I establish for ever—Which was literally and fully accomplished in Christ Jesus, who descended as man from David. (Matth. i.) The heavens shall praise thy wonders—The angels and all the spirits of the redeemed in heaven—Who among the sons of the mighty—The highest angels. Can be likened unto the LORD—My Saviour, he being the everlasting God, and far above all principalities and powers. God is greatly to be feared in the assembly of the saints—Both saints on earth and angels in heaven.

V. 8—12. Thy faithfulness round about thee—Which appears in all thy works. Thou hast broken Rahab—Destroyed the Egyptians. The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine—How full of comfort are these words, to all them that have the Lord for their God. Tabor and Hermon shall rejoice in thy name—Be fruitful by thy favour.

V. 13—15. High is thy right hand—Exalted and put forth for thy

V. 43—46. The days of his youth hast thou shortened—The most flourishing time of David's kingdom for strength, wealth, valour, &c.

V. 47. Remember how short my time is—And therefore make it not shorter by thy judgments. Wherefore hast thou made all men in vain—To so little purpose, to be so suddenly destroyed as soon almost as we have a being, and before we can feel where we are, and for what we were made.

V. 48—50. What man is he that liveth—Every man by the necessity of nature must soon die; and therefore do not take us away by such untimely deaths. I do bear in my bosom—Lay it sadly to heart.

V. 51. They have reproached the footsteps of thine anointed—The hope and expectation of thy people concerning the coming of the Messiah, all which seem now to be blasted by their present distresses.

V. 52. Blessed be the Lord for evermore—But notwithstanding all these seeming discouragements and cross providences, I do firmly believe and hope for the accomplishment of thy promises, and thereupon bless thee for them.

A prayer of Moses—Penned upon occasion of that severe doom, (Numb. xiv. 29.) that their carcases should fall—should perish in the wilderness.

V. 1—3. Lord, thou hast been our dwelling-place—Refuge, shelter, and protection to us in all our wanderings. And sayest—Didst pass that sentence. Return, ye children of men—To the dust.

V. 4, 5. For a thousand years—Yea, though he should live a thousand years, what is that in thy account, and in comparison of thee? Thou carriest them away as with a flood—Violently and irresistibly. They are as a sleep—Suddenly gone.

V. 6—9. We are consumed by thine anger—All men in general, and especially we of this nation, at this time do moulder away by frequent judgments. Thou hast set our iniquities before thee—To call us to account, and punish us for them. We spend our years as a tale that is told—Without any great regard.

V. 10. The days of our years—The ordinary rate of man's life. Yet is their strength labour and sorrow—Those remains of strength which the best do then enjoy, are full of trouble through the infirmities of age. We fly away—Hasten apace to our end.

V. 11. Who knoweth the power of thine anger—How few do rightly apprehend, firmly believe, or seriously consider, so as to be awakened thereby to true repentance! And none can fully comprehend, how able thou art to destroy those that provoke thee to wrath, and what are the dreadful effects of thy displeasure. According to thy fear, so is thy wrath—As men are more or less possessed with a sense and dread of thy infinite majesty and almighty power, and live under the awe thereof, so dost thou proportionably manifest thy wrath against them.

V. 12, 13. So teach us to number our days—To consider and be affected with the frailty and uncertainty of our lives. That we may apply our hearts unto wisdom—To the obtaining true spiritual wisdom, we may rejoice, and be glad all our days.

15 Make us glad according to the days wherein thou haſt afflicted us, and the years wherein we have ſeen evil.

16 Let thy work appear unto thy ſervants, and thy glory unto their children.

V. 1. A new ſong—Upon this new and great occaſion, the coming of the Meſſiah into his church on earth, typified by the removal of the ark to Sion. All the earth—Who ſhall then be brought to the knowledge of the true God.

V. 2—7. His ſalvation—That redemption and ſalvation which is purchaſed for us by Chriſt Jeſus. Declare his glory—This glorious and wonderful work. Strength and beauty are in his ſanctuary—In the church doth God ſhew forth his honour, majeſty, ſtrength and beauty.

V. 8—10. Worſhip the Lord in the beauty of holineſs—In the aſſemblies of his ſaints. Say among the heathen—You converted Gentiles declare this to thoſe that yet remain in the darkneſs of heatheniſm. That the Lord reigneth—God has ſet up his throne and kingdom in the world over all nations. The world alſo ſhall be eſtabliſhed—The chriſtian church, gathered out of the world, ſhall be firmly ſettled.

V. 11—13. Let the ſea roar—Which is all the expreſſion of joy it can make. And the fulneſs thereof—All the creatures that belong to it. Before the Lord—When the Lord Chriſt ſhall ſhew himſelf to the world. To judge the earth—To govern his church, and ſet up his ſpiritual kingdom and government among all nations. He ſhall judge the people with his truth—According to his word and the Spirit of truth, by which every one that cometh into the world is enlightned to know his will.

PSAL. XCVII.

V. 1, 2. Let the earth rejoice—The inhabitants of the world every where, that they are under the conſtant government of a Being infinitely wiſe, and juſt, and good; and that all this is ſo clearly and certainly ſhewn them in the revealed will of God. The multitude of iſles—The Gentiles even in the remoteſt parts. Clouds and darkneſs are round about him—Chriſt's coming will be terrible to his enemies, and thoſe that will not ſubmit to him. They ſhall not only be covered with darkneſs, but them that neglect or deſpiſe the beſt offers of his great ſalvation, to them will the Prince of Peace himſelf become a conſuming fire. But they that fear they may have offended God beyond forgiveneſs, and are caſt down with ſorrow and diſtreſs on this account, theſe may have juſt cauſe to hope that they are feeling from his grace, that godly ſorrow, which if yielded to by confeſſion of ſin (unto him whom they have offended) and by forſaking of ſin, that it will lead them to preſent and everlaſting ſalvation.

V. 3—5. A fire goeth before him—Dreadful judgments ſhall befal the unbelieving Jews for their infidelity and rejecting the Meſſiah, and all other refuſers of goſpel-grace. The hills melted like wax—The grandees of the world who reject the Meſſiah. At the preſence of the Lord—When he comes in judgment againſt them.

V. 6. The heavens declare his righteouſneſs—The angels, yea God himſelf, gives teſtimony from heaven of the righteouſneſs of Chriſt. All the people ſee his glory—Both Jews and Gentiles ſhall partake of the glorious fruits and benefits of his coming.

V. 7, 8. Confounded—They ſhall be aſhamed of their folly, when they ſee the glory and majeſty of Chriſt, and ſo ſubmit to him; or elſe be utterly deſtroyed. (Rev. xiv. 9, 10.) Worſhip him, all ye gods—Ye angels of heaven and all ye powers on earth. And the daughters of Judah rejoiced—Thy church and people. Becauſe of thy judgments, O Lord—Deſtruction of enemies, and advancement of the kingdom of Chriſt.

V. 9, 10. For thou, Lord—Chriſt. Art high above all the earth—Having a name given above every name. Ye that love the Lord—Many indeed ſhall then be pretenders to, and followers of him, but if you are ſuch as do ſincerely love him, ſhew it by your hatred of idolatry, and all other wickedneſs; and by loving all mankind, but eſpecially thoſe that fear the Lord, and let this love be without diſſimulation, abhorring the very appearance of evil.

V. 11, 12. Light—Heavenly wiſdom to direct. Is ſown for the righteous—Prepared, and laid up in ſtore, and therefore bear your affliction for Chriſt with patience and cheerfulneſs, ſince your labour of love, and your ſuffering for his ſake, ſhall not be in vain. Rejoice in the Lord—In a full perſuaſion that all that he has promiſed to do, for all them that hope in his mercy, he will faithfully perform. At the remembrance of his holineſs—Conſideration of that faithful covenant he has made, and for ever proved by ſending the Meſſiah into the world, for whoſe ſake he will freely give all things neceſſary to this life, to godlineſs and to future glory.

PSAL. XCVIII.

V. 1, 2. The Lord hath done marvellous things—By his providence, but infinitely more ſo by ſending his Son into the world, to die in the place of guilty men, that by grace through faith in him all might be ſaved. His holy arm—His own immediate power. Hath gotten him the victory—Over ſin, ſatan, death, and hell. The Lord hath made known his ſalvation—Publiſhed, by the preaching of the goſpel, the way to eternal life and ſalvation, and by accompanying the ſame with his grace, applying it to the hearts and minds of thoſe that hear it, giving them that faith whereby they are ſaved.

V. 3—9. All have ſeen the ſalvation of our God—Been made partakers of that grace of God which hath appeared unto all men, teaching us that, denying ungodlineſs and worldly luſts, we ſhould live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly in this preſent world, looking for that bleſſed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt; who gave himſelf for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himſelf a peculiar people, zealous of good works. (Tit. ii. 11, &c.) The Lord, ſhall he judge the world with equity—He who knows the hearts and actions of all, ſhall ſo govern and determine all things, that the greateſt and moſt exact juſtice ſhall be done to every individual among the whole human race, whether it be in the public affairs of nations, or the concerns of men in private life.

PSAL. XCIX.

V. 1—4. The Lord reigneth—How often is this truth repeated? And by this we may underſtand how neceſſary it is that all ſhould keep it in mind, that all may be reſtrained from offending him in thought, word, or deed, who is the king, the ruler and judge of all the earth; and no leſs able to protect and ſave thoſe that believe in him, than he is to puniſh thoſe that do not fear him, but will do wickedly as to themſelves, or act injuriouſly to others, all which is done againſt God himſelf; for he that wrongs or deſpiſes the pooreſt and moſt miſerable of mankind, reproacheth his Maker and Redeemer. Let the people tremble—His enemies. Let the earth be moved—The inhabitants be ſtricken with fear and trembling. Thy great and terrible name—viz. To thy enemies. For it is holy—In making good all thy promiſes. The king's ſtrength—This moſt ſtrong King, the Almighty God. Thou doſt eſtabliſh equity—Fix that as the rule of all thy proceedings.

V. 5—7. Moſes and Aaron—Theſe perſons interceded with God for the people with good ſucceſs, which may encourage you to praiſe and worſhip God. They called upon the Lord, and he anſwered them—And this is written that we alſo might aſk in faith, without doubt or wavering, that, for the Mediator's ſake, He that is in heaven will hear and anſwer all them that call upon him. They kept his teſtimonies—For otherwiſe God would not have heard them. V. 8, 9. Thou waſt a God that forgaveſt them—The body of the people, though thou didſt ſeverely puniſh many particular perſons.

PSAL. C.

This pſalm contains principally an exhortation to all the earth, to praiſe God, in variety of expreſſions; preſſed from his glorious nature; his goodneſs to us; our relation to him. A renewed exhortation to praiſe, thank, and bleſs him, preſſed by the conſtancy of his goodneſs, mercy, and truth.

V. 1—5. It is he that hath made us—For we are his workmanſhip, created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we ſhould walk in them. (Eph. ii. 10.)

PSAL. CI.

This pſalm contains David's religious reſolution concerning the well governing of himſelf, his family, or his court, and his kingdom. Wherein is his reſolution of good government, which he particularly ſpecifies: In reſpect of his perſon: Governing himſelf with prudence and integrity: Shunning of evil, in reference to his family or court: Not admitting profane perſons: Removing ſlanderers and proud perſons: Admitting and employing only faithful and unblameable perſons: Rejecting deceitful and lying perſons: In reference to his kingdom; puniſhing the wicked, that the church may be rid of them.

V. 1. I will ſing of mercy—To myſelf, in making good thy promiſe of beſtowing the kingdom on me, and in all other particulars throughout my life. And judgment—In the deſtruction of my enemies; and accordingly I do by this ſong engage myſelf to govern with mercy towards the good, and juſtice on incorrigible offenders.

V. 2. I will behave myſelf wiſely—Manage all my affairs with wiſdom and integrity. O when wilt thou come unto me—Settle me in the kingdom, that I may then have opportunity to perform this engagement, and by the obedience of my heart and life to thy grace and will, I may be bleſſed with greater communion with thyſelf, who art the ſole fountain of health, and life, and happineſs to my ſoul. I will walk with a perfect heart—Govern my family, as well as my kingdom, ſo as I may manifeſt the uprightneſs of my heart, and my ſincere deſire of doing good to them, and bringing glory to thy name.

V. 3, 4. I will ſet—Not ſeek occaſions of doing evil, nor ſuffer myſelf by any temptations, or perſuaſions of others, or ſuggeſtions of my own heart, to be drawn to that which is evil, but rather ſhun it with deteſtation. I hate them that turn aſide—To ſinful courſes. A froward heart ſhall depart from me—Perſons of a wicked diſpoſition, diſaffected to God and goodneſs, ſhall be caſt off and ſent out of my family. I will not know a wicked perſon—Own or countenance them. And to them that do wickedly and die in their ſins, the Lord and Judge of all will declare, that he has no knowledge of them as belonging to him, and he will command them to depart from him. (Matth. vii. 23, & xxv. 41.)

V. 5—8. Mine eyes—I will ſeek out and employ ſuch. Shall be upon the faithful—And the Lord of lords and King of kings beholds all that are faithful to his grace in every ſtation; and they that continue to be ſo unto death, they ſhall dwell in his kingdom of glory. (Rev. xvii. 14.) That they may dwell with me—Become my miniſters, and be always near my perſon. He that worketh deceit

PSAL. CIII.

V. 1. Bleſs the Lord—Bleſſing God is for his mercies and benefits to us. Praiſing him is for his own excellencies and profeſſions. O my ſoul—All the powers and faculties thereof.

V. 2—5. Who healeth all thy diſeaſes—Both of ſoul and body. Who redeemeth thy life from deſtruction—Both temporal and eternal. Who ſatisfieth thy mouth with good things—Juſt deſires and neceſſities. So that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's—So that thy bodily health and ſtrength continues vigorous and lively, as the eagle's doth, even till old age.

V. 6—9. He made known his ways unto Moſes—The gracious ways of his providence. His acts—His extraordinary and miraculous works. He will not always chide—With ſinners by his judgments, but is ready to be reconciled to them upon their true repentance.

V. 10—14. So great is his mercy toward them that fear him—Above their higheſt expectations. So far hath he removed our tranſgreſſions—Fully pardoned them. For he knoweth—Conſiders it ſo as to deal with us accordingly. Our frame—The weakneſs and frailty of our natures.

V. 15—22. His righteouſneſs—In performing his promiſes. The Lord hath prepared his throne—Eſtabliſhed his univerſal dominion. Ye his angels that excel in ſtrength—Are free from the impotencies and infirmities of mankind.

PSAL. CIV.

V. 1—4. Who maketh the clouds his chariot—Does manifeſt his preſence there, in thunder, lightning, &c. A flaming fire—Like lightning;

14 [p] He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herb for the service of man: that he may bring forth food out of the earth:

15 And [q] wine that maketh glad the heart of man, and ‡ oil to make his face to shine, and bread which strengtheneth man's heart.

16 The trees of the Lord are full of sap: the cedars of Lebanon [r] which he hath planted.

17 Where the birds make their nests: as for the stork, the fir-trees are her house.

18 The high hills are a refuge for the wild goats, and the rocks for the conies.

19 [s] He appointeth the moon for seasons: the sun knoweth his going down.

20 [t] Thou makest darkness, and it is night: wherein † all the beasts of the forest do creep forth.

21 [u] The young lions roar after their prey, and seek their meat from God.

22 The sun ariseth, they gather themselves together, and lay them down in their dens.

23 Man goeth forth to his work, and to his labour until the evening.

24 [x] O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches.

25 So is this great and wide sea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great beasts.

26 There go the ships: there is that leviathan, whom thou hast ‡ made to play therein.

27 [y] These wait all upon thee: that thou mayest give them their meat in due season.

28 That thou givest them, they gather: thou openest thine hand, they are filled with good.

29 Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled; [z] thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust.

30 [a] Thou sendest forth thy spirit, they are created: and thou renewest the face of the earth.

31 The glory of the Lord § shall endure for ever: the Lord shall rejoice in his works.

32 He looketh on the earth, and it trembleth; [b] he toucheth the hills, and they smoke.

33 [c] I will sing unto the Lord as long as I live: I will sing praise unto my God, while I have my being.

34 My meditation of him shall be sweet: I will be glad in the Lord.

35 Let the sinners be consumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more: bless thou the Lord, O my soul. Praise ye the Lord.

PSAL. CV.

O [a] Give thanks unto the Lord; call upon his name; make known his deeds among the people.

2 Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him: talk ye of all his wondrous works.

3 Glory ye in his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord.

4 Seek the Lord and his strength: seek his face evermore.

lightning; speedy and irresistible in the execution of his commands.

V. 5—12. At thy rebuke—Powerful command. They go up—Become springs, which usually rise in mountains and hills. He sendeth the springs into the valleys—Which run thither from the mountains. And as the waters run into the valleys, so does the healthful streams of his grace freely flow to the hearts of the lowly and contrite; God ever giving his grace to the humble, as certainly as that water descends, when unrestrained, from higher to lower ground.

V. 13—16. From his chamber—With rain from heaven. The fruit of thy works—The effects of those sweet showers which are thy work. That he may bring forth food—That God, by means of the rain, may cause the earth to bring forth food. The trees of the Lord—Which are of his planting and feeding, without man's industry.

V. 17—20. He appointeth the moon for seasons—To distinguish the months, and to govern the ebbing and flowing of the sea, and the humours in man's body.

V. 26—30. Thou hidest thy face—With-holdest thy grace and favour, and the care of thy providence. Thou sendest forth thy spirit, they are created—Quickening power, whereby life is produced in the creatures from time to time, as by the Spirit of God they were at first created. Thou renewest the face of the earth—Still preserveth the succession of creatures one after another.

V. 31—33. The glory of the Lord shall endure for ever.—These glorious works of God's infinite power, wisdom, and goodness. The Lord shall rejoice in his works—Take pleasure in the preservaion of them from time to time. He looketh on the earth—In anger. And it trembleth; he toucheth the hills—With his fiery presence.

V. 34, 35. My meditation of him—Concerning the goodness of God in his wonderful works. Shall be sweet—Refreshing and delightful to me. I will be glad in the Lord—In the meditation of his works of creation; of providence, but most of all in those of his grace, by which the fallen souls of sinful men are restored to the glorious image of God, and are made in themselves, by his grace, holy and happy. Let sinners be consumed—Who consider not nor regard these works of God, to praise and glorify him for them, but rather dishonour him by the abuse of his creatures.

PSAL. CV.

V. 1—3. O give thanks—They who are careful to give thanks for mercies received, may with confidence call upon him for what they want. For God meeteth those that rejoice and remember him in their ways, with grateful thankful hearts. Let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord—Endeavour to know and trust in him. And as all that seek the knowledge and possession of everlasting life through God their Redeemer, have his promise that they shall find him, they may begin to rejoice with a blessed hope from the moment they find the witness of his Spirit within them, and by which they are made conscious that they do desire his forgiveness and acceptance, and which will increase till they esteem the favour of the Lord more than riches, honour, pleasure, or life itself.

V. 4—7. Seek the Lord—Labour to get an intereſt in God your Saviour and his ſtrength. Remember the judgments of his mouth—Threatened and executed by his command. His judgments are in all the earth—The judgments which he executed on his enemies are known all the world over, and therefore you have great cauſe to praiſe him, who have had ſo much experience of his mercy.

V. 8—10. Which covenant he made with Abraham—The promiſe which he eſtabliſhed with, and will make good to all ſucceeding generations. And confirmed for a law—To be inviolably obſerved like a law.

V. 15. Touch not mine anointed—Hurt not the people conſecrated to myſelf by the gifts and graces of my Spirit, nor thoſe eſpecially among them to whom I do familiarly reveal my will, that they may teach others. By him the very hairs of their head are numbered; and he that hurteth them toucheth the very apple of his eye.

V. 16—20. The word of the Lord tried him—God's word, which came firſt to Pharaoh in a dream, and then to Joſeph concerning the interpretation of it, which diſcovered him to Pharaoh and his courtiers, how innocent and knowing a perſon he was. And by what various and gracious ways does God chaſten and try the faithful obedience of all, that are in the way that leadeth to himſelf, and to that fulneſs of joy which is in his preſence for ever.

PSAL. CVI.

V. 1—4. Who can shew forth all his praise—Praise-worthy actions. Blessed are they that keep judgment—Observe that which is just and right both towards God and man. And he that doeth righteousness at all times—Both in prosperity and adversity.

V. 5—8. That I may rejoice in the gladness of thy nation—In that cause of rejoicing thou affordest them. Our fathers understood not thy wonders in Egypt—Were not duly affected with them, so as to be led thereby to fear and trust in thee, and to obey thee.

V. 9—13. They waited not for his counsel—The discovery of his counsel and purpose concerning them, in those gracious supplies and provisions he made for them from time to time. And how many are the difficulties that would be avoided, and the miseries we should be saved from, did we but patiently wait for his grace to apply the sure truths of his word, and shew us not only what was his holy will, but when it was the season both to begin and end every duty. How patiently do the attendants wait upon their employers and masters to know their pleasure, and shall self-will refuse to wait for the discoveries of the will of the Most High, whose will is ever the wisest and best for all his creatures invariably to follow?

V. 14, 15. But lusted exceedingly—Inordinately desired flesh. He sent leanness into their soul—Their persons, which were not nourished thereby, but were destroyed upon that occasion. And they that give way to the natural desires of their souls, will have leanness—want of peace—heart-felt misery; and this, as the necessary consequence of desiring some other good, in preference to that which is only so—Christ by his Spirit in them the hope of glory.

V. 16, 17. Aaron the saint of the Lord—Set apart for the priesthood, by the appointment of God himself.

V. 18—23. Moses his chosen stood before him in the breach—Which they had made by their sin, and at which God was ready to enter with his judgments against them, as an enemy into a besieged town. This breach has sin made between every soul of man and God; and if Jesus the Mediator stood not in that breach, the consuming fire of God's wrath would burn us up, whilst we were living in a fearless impenitent state of mind, in the sight of that holy and Almighty Being, against whom every sin hath been committed.

V. 24. They believed not his word—His promise of subduing their enemies, and giving them possession of it. And because they believed not his word, they did not obtain what he had promised them. Reader, Do you believe in the forgiveness of sins, and in the Holy Ghost, as that blessed influence which is to cleanse the thoughts of your heart? God has promised to pardon sin, and to give his grace to save them that believe. And these promises being made us, let us fear lest we fall short of them, as many thousands of Israel did by unbelief.

V. 25, 26. And

23 [u] Therefore he said that he would destroy them, had not Moses his chosen stood before him in the breach: to turn away his wrath, lest he should destroy them.

24 Yea, they despise [y] ‡ the pleasant land, they believed not his word:

25 [z] But murmured in their tents, and hearkened not unto the voice of the Lord.

26 [a] Therefore he lifted up his hand against them, to overthrow them in the wilderness:

27 § [b] To overthrow their seed also among the nations, and to scatter them in the lands.

28 [c] They joined themselves also unto Baal-peor, and ate the sacrifices of the dead.

29 Thus they provoked him to anger with their inventions: and the plague brake in upon them.

30 [d] Then stood up Phinehas, and executed judgment: and so the plague was stayed.

31 And that was counted unto him for righteousness, unto all generations for evermore.

32 [e] They angered him also at the waters of strife, so that it went ill with Moses for their sakes:

33 [f] Because they provoked his spirit, so that he spake unadvisedly with his lips.

34 [g] They did not destroy the nations, [h] concerning whom the Lord commanded them:

35 [i] But were mingled among the heathen, and learned their works.

36 And they served their idols: [k] which were a snare unto them.

37 Yea, [l] they sacrificed their sons and their daughters unto devils,

38 And shed innocent blood, even the blood of their sons and of their daughters, whom they sacrificed unto the idols of Canaan: and [m] the land was polluted with blood.

39 Thus were they defiled with their own works, and [n] went a whoring with their own inventions.

40 Therefore was the wrath of the Lord kindled against his people, insomuch that he abhorred his own inheritance.

41 And he gave them into the hand of the heathen; and they that hated them ruled over them.

42 Their enemies also oppressed them, and they were brought into subjection under their hand.

43 [o] Many times did he deliver them, but they provoked him with their counsel, and were ‡ brought low for their iniquity.

44 Nevertheless, he regarded their affliction when [p] he heard their cry.

45 [q] And he remembered for them his covenant, and repented according to the multitude of his mercies.

46 [r] He made them also to be pitied of all those that carried them captives.

47 [s] Save us, O Lord our God, and gather us from among the heathen, to give thanks unto thy holy name, and to triumph in thy praise.

48 Blessed be the Lord God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting: and let all the people say, Amen. * Praise ye the Lord.

PSAL. CVII.

O [a] Give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 Let the redeemed of the Lord say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy:

3 And gathered them out of the lands, from the east and from the west, from the north and * from the south.

4 They wandered in the wilderness in a solitary way, they found no city to dwell in,

V. 47. Save us, O Lord our God—As thou hast done formerly. And gather us—From our dispersion or captivity. From among the heathen—The psalmist here, by the spirit of prophecy, foresaw that for their sins they would be carried captives into strange lands, and so fits this psalm for such a season. To give thanks unto thy holy name—Rejoice in that we have such an occasion to praise thee.

PSAL. CVII.

V. 1—3. Let the redeemed of the Lord say so—Whom the Lord has delivered out of the following, or any other calamities. And how much more shall those praise him, who are delivered by his grace from spiritual captivity, and from eternal death. Gathered them—Brought them back from captivity, to their own country and habitation.

V. 4—9. They found no city to dwell in—No place inhabited where they might refresh themselves. Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness to the children of men—Not only to themselves, but to all mankind. He satisfieth the hungry soul with goodness—

V. 12—14. Therefore he brought down their heart with labour—Their proud minds with ſome trouble or other. They fell down—Sunk under the burden of their trouble.

V. 16. He hath broken the gates of braſs—Removed all impediments.

V. 17—22. Fools, becauſe of their tranſgreſſion, are afflicted; they cry unto the Lord, he ſaveth them. O that men would praiſe the Lord, and declare his works with rejoicing—In ſickneſs God's mercy is proved, in anſwer to the prayer of the afflicted. Through the power of diſeaſe their appetite fails, medicine is vain, and death hovers on their eyelids, ready to cloſe them for ever in the duſt. Every ſuffering of our bodies ſhould remind us of, and humble us for the ſin of our ſouls. However wiſe ſinners may think themſelves, in caſting off the reſtraints of God's law, and indulging their paſſions, they will be found at the laſt the greateſt fools. But they that cry for mercy, God reſcues them from the jaws of death, raiſes them from the bed of languiſhing, rebukes the diſeaſe, and by his Spirit reſtores their loſt health and ſtrength again. Is any ſick? let him pray. Prayer can do more than medicine. Sin is the ſickneſs of the ſoul; but when Jeſus by his ſpirit ſpeaks to the heart, he healeth our ſpiritual maladies, breaks the power of corruption, reſtores our ſouls to the life of grace below, and ſecures to us the eternal life of glory above. Great Phyſician, let me daily feel thy healing power! Gratitude is the bounden duty of thoſe, whoſe life through mercy is reſtored. Let them acknowledge the goodneſs of God they have taſted, and ſhew forth his praiſes, not only with thankful lips, but by devoting to his glory the days he hath prolonged; rejoicing in his ſalvation, and publiſhing to his praiſe the wonders his grace has done for them.

V. 23—32. They that go down to the ſea in ſhips—The mariners who plough the main, dwelling in the midſt of dangers, and daily beholding God's wonders in the deep, have peculiar obligations lying upon them to bleſs and praiſe him for the preſervations they

¶ A ſong or pſalm of David.

a Pſa. 57. 7 O a God, my heart is fixed, I will ſing and give praiſe, even with my glory.

experience. Their dangers are great and imminent. At God's command the ſtormy winds ruſh from their hollow caverns, and with tremendous roar raiſe up the foaming billows. Mounting the dreadful ſteep, the veſſel ſeems to climb the ſkies: then ruſhing down the precipice, appears ſunk within a watery grave. How prepared to die ought they to be, who are in deaths ſo often! They cry unto God. Then inſtant help appears: he who rides on the whirlwind, and directs the ſtorm, checks with a word its fury: the winds are huſhed, the waves ſubſide. He who bids the ſtormy waves be ſtill, and they obey him, can as eaſily ſpeak peace to the tempeſtuous ſoul, and calm the diſtreſſes of the deſparing ſinner. Let them praiſe him—For ſuch deliverance and diſtinguiſhed goodneſs, how can we but adore the hand that ſaves us, and offer up our thankſgivings, the expreſſion of our lively gratitude, and the encouragement for others in the like diſtreſs to call upon the God who heareth prayer!

V. 33—43. He turneth rivers into a wilderneſs—Various are the changes which God worketh in the earth. He makes the fruitful land barren for the iniquity of its inhabitants, turning the rivers into a wilderneſs, as in the caſe of Sodom. Again, when his bleſſings reſt on people, the wilderneſs changes its face, and bloſſoms as the roſe. On the other hand, when he turns the current of his favour back again, they wither and decay; oppreſſed, afflicted, their numbers and ſtrength decreaſe. Thus, when princes abuſe their power, He, by whom kings reign, pours contempt upon them, whilſt by his providence he ſometimes raiſes the poor from the dunghil, ſetteth them on high, crowns them with dignity. In theſe diſpenſations we may admire and adore the ſovereign juſtice and power of God. Sinners are the plague of the earth; for their ſakes the land mourneth, whilſt the righteous procure bleſſings on their abode. If we are exalted, or brought low, let us ſee and acknowledge God's hand in his dealings with us. The righteous ſhall ſee it—The effects theſe changes will produce. The righteous will rejoice; happy to behold the humble exalted, the creſt of pride fallen, and God glorified in his providential diſpenſations: and all iniquity ſhall ſtop her mouth; the ſinner, confounded, ſhall be forced to own the righteous judgment. Who is wiſe? let him ſhew it by his attentive regard to theſe ways of providence, and obſerve theſe things, and then they ſhall underſtand the loving-kindneſs of the Lord, ſee and experience it in their own ſouls, the happineſs which ariſes from a full perſuaſion that the LORD he is God and reigneth over all; that the greateſt are not above his power, nor the leaſt beneath his care; and that they are never left to be confounded, who look to him as their Redeemer for grace to ſave them, and as their God and King to reign over them.

PSAL. CVIII.

V. 1. O God, my heart is fixed—The pſalmiſt here diſcovers the bleſſed frame of his own ſpirit, and teaches us how our praiſes ſhould be offered up to God: with hearts fixed on the ſacred ſubject.

V. 2. I myſelf will awake early—To the pleaſing taſk, uniting voice and inſtruments to raiſe the ſound, and openly, with every expreſſion of grateful affection.

V. 3—5. I will ſing praiſes unto thee among the nations—Proclaiming in the midſt of the people his mercy and faithfulneſs, his greatneſs and glory; mercy more extenſive than the heaven, truth which reaches to the clouds, and glory infinitely beyond all bleſſing and praiſe that men or angels can offer.

V. 6—13. Thy beloved—Theſe verſes contain, The pſalmiſt's prayer in behalf of himſelf and people. And this prayer all may apply to themſelves, for every believer is a David, a beloved, and may confidently expect to ſee the ſalvation of God. He already triumphs, aſſured of ſucceſs, ſince he hath the truth of God engaged. What God promiſes, faith can rejoice in, as already done.

The beloved Son of David hath an everlasting kingdom, and his all-sufficient grace is ever nigh, to help the weakest that believe in his power and willingness to save. Who will bring me into the strong city—Whatever difficulties were in the way, by human power insurmountable, he looks to God. Thus may the believer, in the view of the spiritual foes of his soul, and the strong fortresses of corruption: there is help laid on one mighty to save: through Christ strengthening us we can do all things; and it is he that shall tread down all our enemies, and bring us to share his triumphs over sin, death, and hell, in the eternal world of glory.

PSAL. CIX.

Whatever particular person gave occasion to the penning this psalm, it hath a farther respect to Judas, to whom it is applied, (Acts i. 20.)

V. 1—3. The psalmist in the person of the Messiah, addresses his prayer to God under the oppressions of the wicked. He lodges his appeal with God, under the calumnies of his enemies. Hold not thy peace, as if disregarding his sufferings, O God of my praise, or my glorying, for even the Lord Jesus, as man, regarded his Father, as the object of his worship and glory. He describes the invenomed malice of his enemies, from whom he sought deliverance. Wicked in temper and practice, deceitful, with fair professions covering the black designs; liars, whose tongues distilled poison into the incautious ear, filled with hatred, bent on mischief, they compassed him about; and violent, they with rage fought against him; returned his love with ingratitude and enmity, and rendered evil for the good he shewed them. Thus was Jesus treated, reviled, traduced, attended by those who called him master, and sought only to ensnare him; things laid to his charge he knew not; persecuted, though innocent, with the most implacable malice; all his love repaid with hatred, and the astonishing miracles of kindness he wrought, exasperating their resentment even to his crucifixion.

V. 4. But I give myself unto prayer—Or, I am a man of prayer; herein he exercised himself day and night, and even on the cross ceased not to cry, Father, forgive them. May we learn of our divine Lord thus to pray for those who despitefully use and persecute us!

V. 6—20. They who have blamed David's spirit, as if he appeared vindictive, have mistaken him greatly. When he speaks as a prophet, he foresees and foretells what would be the end of the wicked; when he speaks, in the person of the Son of God, he denounces the just judgment due to the children of perdition. Terrible are the woes herein contained; Judas felt them: may we never provoke the same punishment, by not believing that Jesus is the Christ the only Saviour of sinners, and the Mighty God and judge of all. We have the sentence pronounced. Satan, as the executioner of vengeance, is permitted first to tempt, and then set over him to torment him. At God's bar he is found guilty, and prayer then is vain. Cut off in the midst of his days, the office and apostleship which he forfeited is transferred to another. Let this be the reward of mine adversaries from the Lord—God's righteousness is observed in the judgment. The sin of his fathers, and of his mother, are remembered. They that despise the mercy offered for thy name's ſake: becauſe thy mercy is good, deliver thou me.

22 For I am poor and needy, and my heart is wounded within me.

23 I am gone [a] like the ſhadow, when it declineth: I am toſſed up and down as the locuſt.

24 My knees are weak through faſting: and my fleſh faileth of fatneſs.

25 I became alſo a reproach unto them: [o] when they looked upon me they ſhaked their heads.

26 Help me, O Lord, my God: O ſave me according to thy mercy:

27 That they may know that this is thy hand: that thou, Lord, haſt done it.

28 Let them curſe, but bleſs thou: when they ariſe, let them be aſhamed: but let thy ſervant rejoice.

29 Let mine adverſaries be clothed with ſhame: and let them cover themſelves with their own confuſion, as with a mantle.

30 I will greatly praiſe the Lord with my mouth: yea, I will praiſe him among the multitude.

offered to all penitents for their actual ſin, will have all the miſeries of their ſinful nature inflicted upon them. And thus is the ſin which the parents tranſmitted, viſited upon the children that would not have that grace whereby they might have been ſaved. And as we have ſeen the dreadful vengeance which has fallen upon Judas, the Jews, and all the betrayers and perſecutors of the Lord Jeſus, let it ſerve for a warning to us not to deſpiſe and oppoſe his grace, leſt we ſhare in their plagues; for ſuch will be the dreadful puniſhment of all his adverſaries, and of all the revilers, perſecutors, and blaſphemers of himſelf and his members.

V. 21—31. We have here the Incarnate Redeemer's complaint and prayer, and his joy in being heard and anſwered. His condition is poor and needy, born in a ſtable, and having no place to lay his head; a man of ſorrows, and acquainted with grief; his heart wounded with bittereſt indignities, and more deeply ſtill with the wrath of God due to the ſins he bore: hurried to the grave by a violent death: toſſed to and fro, from Pilate to Herod, from Annas to Caiaphas: weak with faſting, and his body emaciated: reproached as a Samaritan, a magician, a mover of ſedition, and, even on the croſs, inſulted by thoſe who ſhook their heads at him, mocking at his high pretenſions of being the Son of God. If our Head thus ſuffered, let not his members murmur at their lot, under the preſſures of poverty, a ſorrowful ſpirit, a decaying body, or a reviling world: Jeſus hath endured the croſs before us. His prayer is, Deliver, help, and ſave me: and to this end he pleads God's own glory, concerned in vindicating his righteous cauſe; his mercy, ever ready to ſuccour the poor deſtitute. Such interpoſition alſo would carry conviction of God's intereſting himſelf on his behalf; others would acknowledge his hand, and theſe enemies themſelves be confounded and aſhamed: aſhamed, as penitent; or confounded, as criminals. Thus, if God helped and bleſſed him, he could ſit eaſy under the curſes of his enemeis. If God bleſs us, we need not care how much men curſe us. All our hope muſt be placed on God's boundleſs mercy and grace: he alone can help and ſave us, not we ourſelves. His praiſes ſhall be heard for this great ſalvation. For he ſhall ſtand at the right hand of the poor—The Meſſiah ſhall ſtand by all his poor people, to ſupport and protect them. To ſave him from thoſe who condemn his ſoul—At the laſt day, none ſhall appear to lay one charge againſt the redeemed of the Lord.

PSAL. CX.

This pſalm is only concerning Chriſt; ſo the Jews of old underſtood it. (Matth. xxii. 41—46.) Chriſt, as our Redeemer, executes the office of a prophet, of a prieſt, and of a king, both in his ſtate of humiliation and exaltation; and of each of theſe we have here an account.

V. 1. He is exalted to the higheſt dignity in heaven, and David owns him his adored Lord. The Lord, Jehovah the Father, ſaid unto my Lord, Jeſus the Meſſiah, Sit thou at my right hand, on the ſeat of moſt tranſcendant glory and honour, until I make thine enemies thy foot-ſtool; enemies innumerable hath our Lord to conflict with, the world, ſin, ſatan, death, but he ſits upon the throne, and they muſt bow before his foot-ſtool; ſome are already ſubdued, and ſhortly the conqueſt will be compleat, when the laſt enemy ſhall be deſtroyed, and all his redeemed people made to triumph with him. Haſten, O Lord, this happy day, by ſending forth thy light and thy truth to turn ſinners from under the power of ſatan to obey thy grace and live to thy glory.

V. 2. The Lord ſhall ſend forth the rod, or ſceptre, of thy ſtrength, the everlaſting goſpel, the power of God unto ſalvation; which by the ſpirit's energy is made effectual to the converſion of the ſouls of ſinners, bowing them to ſubmit to the ſceptre of his righteouſneſs; and this went forth firſt out of Zion, and hath ſpread to the remoteſt corners of the earth: rule thou, or thou ſhalt rule, in the midſt of thine enemies; the Redeemer's kingdom will be eſtabliſhed in ſpite of all oppoſition, and his church riſe ſuperior to all the malice of men and devils: ſuch will be the working of his mighty power, that the ſouls of ſinful men ſhall be convinced, humbled, ſue for mercy, and be converted unto him.

V. 3. His ſubjects ſhall be a willing people, inclined to offer up themſelves, their bodies, ſouls, and ſpirits, to his bleſſed ſervice, cheerfully liſting under his banners in the day of his power; when in the preaching of the word, accompanied with the demonſtration of the Spirit, they ſhould be drawn to him by cords of love, and arrayed in the beauties of holineſs, meet to attend their glorious Head, from the womb of the morning, as ſoon as ever the morning light of goſpel grace appears. Thou haſt the dew of thy youth. None ever chooſe Chriſt's ſervice till he firſt inclines their hearts: it is of grace that we become his willing people; and which grace from God as freely deſcends upon as many as will recive it, as the dew of heaven deſcends upon the earth. (John i. 12.)

V. 4. The Lord hath ſworn by himſelf, ſince he can ſwear by no greater, and will not repent, for he is ever without variableneſs, or ſhadow of turning; Thou art a prieſt for ever, after the order of Melchizedek;

Melchizedek; a prieſt, to make reconciliation for the ſins of his people; for ever, the efficacy of the one oblation he offered abiding the ſame, and he at the right hand of God, ever living to plead it, and make interceſſion for us; after the order of Melchizedek, an order of prieſthood, prior to that of Aaron, unchangeable and eternal. The believer's hope is fixed upon the moſt ſolid baſis, on the all-ſufficiency of Jeſus, and the oath of the eternal Jehovah. With what humble confidence then ſhould we expect pardon, grace, and all the bleſſings of ſalvation, from the great high prieſt of our profeſſion; and how great is the diſhonour we caſt upon him, when for a moment we queſtion his power and grace, and ſtagger at promiſes confirmed by two immutable things, the word and oath of that God who cannot lie?

V. 5. The Lord at thy right hand, the Almighty Jeſus, ſhall ſtrike through kings, deſtroy the mightieſt who oppoſe his kingdom, in the day of his wrath, that great and terrible day, when no rock nor mountain can cover the guilty.

V. 6. He ſhall judge among the heathen—Executing vengeance on the deſpiſers of his goſpel; he ſhall fill the places with dead bodies, (Rev. xix. 17, 18.) He ſhall wound the heads, or head, over many countries—Satan, the prince of this world, and Antichriſt, whoſe uſurped dominion extends over many people, and nations, and tongues, (Rev. xvii. 2—10.) The greateſt men, who lift their arm againſt the Lord's Chriſt, will ſoon be made to feel how unequal is the conteſt. There is a day of wrath appointed and approaching, when ſinners will find it a fearful thing to fall into the hands of him who ſitteth on the throne.

V. 7. He ſhall drink of the brook in the way—The delight and joy which would fill his heart on ſeeing the glorious victory gained, and the ſalvation of his people compleated: therefore, or ſo, ſhall he lift up his head, the conqueror of death and hell in the reſurrection-day, and aſcending to the throne of glory, where angels, principalities, and powers, are made ſubject unto him, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but in that which is to come. Let his faithful people rejoice in his triumphs, and expect to ſhare them ſhortly with him; when he ſhall take them to ſit down with him on his throne, as he is ſet down with the Father on his throne.

V. 1—5. With his whole heart—With unfeigned ſincerity, and warm affection. In the aſſembly of the upright, and in the congregation—In ſocial worſhip, or the courts of the ſanctuary. He would take the matter of his ſong from the works of the Lord, the works of creation, providence, and redemption, which are each of them ſo great and wonderful, and ſought out of all them that have pleaſure therein; who make theſe the delightful ſubject of their contemplation, and long to increaſe their knowledge of them, that they may be more enlarged in love and praiſe. His work is honourable and glorious in itſelf, and ſuited to exalt the glory of the Divine artificer. His righteouſneſs endureth for ever—All the diſpenſations of his providence and grace are altogether and everlaſtingly righteous and true. He hath made his wonderful works to be remembered—They well deſerve to be treaſured up in our memories; and God hath graciouſly been pleaſed to tranſmit to us, in his word, his wonders of old time, to excite ſtill our wonder and praiſe. The Lord is gracious and full of compaſſion—As ſinners, to their unutterable comfort, experience in the ſalvation of Jeſus Chriſt, and the great and precious promiſes that are in him: and as appears alſo, in all the inſtances of his providential care: for he hath given meat to thoſe that fear him—He feeds his choſen daily with bread from heaven, which giveth life unto the world. He will ever be mindful of his covenant—None of the promiſes of it ſhall ever fail, nor any of the bleſſings of it be with-held from thoſe that believe in him; and therefore they are bound to ſay Hallelujah, for mercies ſo ineſtimably precious, and ſo ſovereignly free.

V. 6. He hath ſhewed his power—The miracles he ſhewed them in their journey to the promiſed land, and his wonders in diſpoſſeſſing the heathen to make room for them.

V. 7, 8. All his commandments are ſure—Whatever he commands muſt be accompliſhed, whatever he promiſes be fulfilled. They ſtand faſt for ever and ever—Both his law and goſpel, and all the precepts and promiſes contained in them, and are done in truth and uprightneſs; they are conſonant to the rules of eternal righteouſneſs, and will be obeyed in ſimplicity by all that truly ſerve him.

V. 9. He hath ſent redemption unto his people—Delivered them from Egypt, and repeatedly reſcued them from the hands of their oppreſſors; and, above all, hath ſent that eternal redemption unto them which was wrought out by Jeſus Chriſt in the fulneſs of time. He hath commanded his covenant for ever—It is everlaſting, ordered in all things, and ſure to all the ſpiritual ſeed of David. Holy and reverend is his name—So it appears in all his works and ways, and worthy to be reverenced and adored by ſaints on earth, and angels in heaven.

PSAL. CXII.

V. 1—5. The pſalmiſt begins this pſalm with praiſe to God, who is to be acknowledged in all he doth for the children of men, for by his grace alone they are what they are. He deſcribes the character of the truly bleſſed and happy man. He feareth the Lord—And only him. He delighteth greatly in his commandments—He counts obedience his higheſt privilege, and God's ſervice perfect freedom. He is upright, ſincere before God in his profeſſions, and in all his dealings with men juſt and true. He is gracious, full of compaſſion—Senſibly touched with the diſtreſſes of others, and ready to relieve them. And righteous—What he beſtows on the neceſſitous is honeſtly come by. He ſheweth favour, and lendeth—Not with a view to his own advantage, but of pure charity to aſſiſt the poor, hoping for nothing again. He will guide—He is careful of what he ſpeaks, that neither haſtily, falſely, or imprudently, his tongue may offend, but that all he ſaith may be the reſult of reflection; and in the management of his affairs he acts with prudence and œconomy. Wealth and riches, as much as God ſees will be profitable for him, ſhall be in his houſe: nor ſhall his worldly proſperity turn away his heart from God. His righteouſneſs endureth for ever—God will preſerve him faithful, and make the moſt afflictive diſpenſations end in his good.

V. 6—10. His ſtability is enſured, firm as God's everlaſting love and power can make it. The memory of his piety ſhall deſcend to ages to come, and his righteouſneſs God will to all eternity remember. No dangers ſhall terrify, no evil tidings diſmay him; nor ſatan, nor corruption, the world, nor death with all its terrors, ſhall be able to ſhake his confidence; for his heart is fixed, truſting in the Lord. He ſhall ſee his deſire upon his enemies—Expecting in faith the ſalvation of God, he ſhall ſee all his ſpiritual and temporal foes ſubdued, and himſelf made more than conqueror. He ſhall be exalted to honour—The higheſt honour, that which cometh from God, who will remember his faith, his labours of love, his charity, liberality, and continuance in well-doing; and at the reſurrection of the juſt crown him with glory, honour, and immortality. This bleſſedneſs of the righteous will be the envy and torment of the wicked; they ſhall ſee it with grief; till at laſt they ſhall be cut off from all the good things on which their deſires were placed, and doomed to that place of eternal torment, where there is weeping, and wailing, and gnaſhing of teeth. Lord ſave from that forgetfulneſs of thee and that neglect of thy great ſalvation, which leaves the ſouls of men expoſed to endleſs miſery! (Luke xvi. 19, &c.)

PSAL. CXIII.

V. 1—9. The Spirit of the Lord, by the pſalmiſt, exhorts the ſervants of the Lord to the happy work of praiſe. In all ages redeeming love muſt be celebrated; and from the riſing to the ſetting ſun, whither the tidings of goſpel grace ſhall ſpread, the name of Jeſus ſhould reſound. He humbleth himſelf to behold the things that are in heaven and earth—When he accepts the ſervices of archangels, and with his care to preſerve their beings, which he gave; he turns his eye on worms of earth, and upholds them in life, and with his bounteous hand ſupplies their wants: but moſt aſtoniſhing of all, that he ſhould humble himſelf for us to death, even the death of the croſs, at this the believing ſoul can only bow down in ſilent admiration, and wonder and adore. The poor in ſpirit, the needy, deſtitute of all righteouſneſs and ſtrength, lying on the dunghil of ſin, and in the duſt of ſpiritual death, by the Almighty power of his Spirit he raiſes from their low eſtate, pardons, and delivers them from guilt and ſin, adopts them as Sons of God, clothes them with ſalvation, and makes them reign in glory everlaſting, with the princes of his people; with Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and all the ſaints, who are made kings and prieſts unto God. He maketh the barren woman—Sarah, Rachel, Hannah, proved this grace, and rejoiced: and this was in a beautiful ſenſe fulfilled,

PSAL. CXIV.

This psalm is the celebration of Israel's deliverance from Egypt, and is justly to be applied to the much greater work of our redemption by Christ, and encouraging ourselves and others to trust in God in the greatest straits.

V. 1—8. The wonders of former days deserve to be kept in everlasting remembrance, both that God may be glorified for them, and we take encouragement from thence to hope still in his mercy. The redeemed of the Lord are thus brought up out of spiritual Egypt, and called from this strange country the world, to join those who speak the pure language of Canaan. Judah was his sanctuary—His presence rested visibly in the midst of them. Thus doth his presence dwell in his living temples, the souls of his redeemed; holiness is written upon their hearts, and, obedient to all his commands and ordinances, they desire to approve themselves his faithful subjects. To open a passage for them, the sea fled, and Jordan rolled back his streams. Whatever difficulties are in the way from seas of tribulation, and mountains of unbelief and corruption, as easily and certainly shall they be all removed by faith in him, whose power is now the same as it was when he did these things, that they and we might believe. He gave them waters out of the rock. That rock was Christ; from him still flow, for every believer's use, streams of grace to cheer them in their passage through this world's wilderness; nor will he ever leave or forsake them, till, from drinking at the stream below, he shall bring them to the fountain head above, and fill them with eternal consolations and glory in the heavenly Canaan.

PSAL. CXV.

V. 1—8. The occasion of this psalm seems to be some distress of God's church and people, under which the psalmist endeavours to comfort their hearts, encouraging them to exercise faith in God, shewing them the vanity of idols, and engaging them to give him praise for their sure deliverance. He bids them ascribe to God the glory of their salvation, as derived from his boundless mercy, and secured by his unchangeable faithfulness and truth. To his grace every good in us, or done by us, must be ascribed, and at his feet our crowns in glory will be for ever laid. He answers the heathen, who, puffed up with their success, spurned at Israel's God, as unable to deliver them. But our God is in heaven, and from his throne laughs them to scorn; he hath done whatsoever he pleased, able to save or destroy. How unequal to this is all human power and wisdom, or all that can be done by means of riches: as much now the world's idols as the stocks and stones the heathens worshipped.

V. 9—18. All they that fear the Lord, shall find him their help and shield. Their help in every time of need, to deliver them; their shield in every hour of danger, to defend them. They cannot fail, whose faith doth not; this ensures the victory. (Eph. vi. 16.) He hath been mindful of us, as past experience testifies, and which should engage us still to commit ourselves to him. He will bless us with all needful things of this life, and all the spiritual blessings in Christ Jesus. He will bless the house of Israel, the congregation of his church in general, and the house of Aaron, his ministers, who labour in the word and doctrine: yea, all that fear the Lord, every believer, whatever his circumstances and condition may be, shall find the blessings of providence and grace suited to his necessities. The Lord shall increase—So far as he sees fit with worldly worldly goods, and success in earthly affairs; but especially with that best increase of the gifts and graces of his spirit, enabling them to bring forth fruit unto God; for whom he blesseth must be blessed; he who made heaven and earth having all power to communicate the blessings he pronounces on his people. They who trust in him will praise him, and find abundant matter for their songs. The dead praise not the Lord—Those who are gone down into the silent grave, can no more join the sacred choir; those who are dead in trespasses and sins, have no heart to praise him. But we, who are maintained in life by the bounties of his providence, and are by his spirit quickened to a better life of grace in our souls; we will bless the Lord, whilst sojourners below, in this delightful work will we be employed, and when removed to that better world, our service there shall be everlasting praise.

PSAL. CXVI.

V. 1—9. We have here the psalmist's profession of his love to God for the mercies he had tasted, and of his determined dependance upon him. I love, because the Lord hath heard my supplications—His answering his desires, affected his soul with deepest gratitude, and engaged him to make the warmest returns of affection, and to persevere in waiting still upon him. Every answer to our prayers is a fresh obligation, and encouragement to pray without ceasing. That soul is happy that can with David truly say, I love the Lord. In prayer should our very parting breath expire, and then we shall go where all will be praise. He mentions the deep distress from which God delivered him. The sorrows of death compassed me—Such as dying men feel in their agony; the pains of hell, such as arise in the conscience from the sting of guilt, or of the grave, which brought me to its very gates, gat hold upon me, and seized me as their prey. I found trouble and misery—Trouble which none but God could assuage, and misery which he alone could remove. Blessed be God for Jesus Christ, who giveth the victory over the world, the flesh, and the devil, to all that believe that their Redeemer died to atone for their sins, and ever liveth to send salvation by his grace. David by experience found Gracious is the Lord—I have proved him so to my unspeakable comfort, pardoning my guilt, delivering my helpless soul. And righteous—Faithful to his promises. The Lord preserveth the simple—Those who place on him their sole dependance. I was brought low, to the very brink of ruin; and he helped me; my soul was delivered from death, temporal, eternal death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling into sin, and the pit of death and hell. And but for these compassions of our God, our souls had dropped into hell, where there is weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth. Well may we say, Our God is merciful. He bids his soul now rest in peace, under the guardian care of this gracious God. Return unto thy rest, O my soul—Whatever hath troubled thy repose, whether affliction, persecution, temptation, or corruption, since all thy burdens are now cast on the Lord, confidently expect, and quietly wait to see the salvation of God, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee in all his past dispensations, and therefore deserved to be trusted for all that is to come. Learn, my soul, thus to reason, and trust still in God! He resolves to devote to God's service the life preserved by his mercy. I will walk before the Lord—Seeking to glorify him upon earth, by letting his light shine before men, and telling of his salvation.

V. 10—19. He declares his unshaken confidence in God. I believed the promises of his grace, of protection here, and glory hereafter, therefore have I spoken; to God in prayer, assured of being heard; to men with boldness, knowing the truth of what he declared. Faith inspires the heart with freedom of speech, and no danger can discourage the faithful minister from proclaiming the gospel truths, nor the faithful christian from the profession of them. (2 Cor. iv. 13.) In his greatest afflictions, even when an exile, and all despaired of ever seeing him return, he could trust God; and though all men concluded it was impossible he should ever come to the throne, he could rest on the promise of God. (Rom. iii. 4.) I will take the cup of salvation—The drink-offerings that should attend his sacrifice of thanksgiving, and call upon the name of the Lord, praying to him, and praising him for all his mercies, in public, in the presence of all the people, and the courts of the Lord's house, paying the vows he made in trouble, glorying in the profession of his deep obligations to the God of his mercies, and encouraging others to the like open professions of his service; nor should his lips only be employed in thanksgiving, his life should be for ever devoted to his service. O Lord, truly I am thy servant—in all fidelity and zeal; he repeats it to shew the heartiness of his surrender. I am thy servant: thou hast loosed my bonds—The bonds of sin, corruption, affliction. The sacrifice of thanksgiving is the tribute we are ever bound to pay. To be the servant of God is the most honourable of all titles. When grace hath loosed the bands of sin, the powerful cords of love shall bind our hearts to God.

V. 1, 2. This ſhort pſalm is full of the moſt bleſſed tidings to the Gentile world, who in the fulneſs of time ſhould be called into the fellowſhip of the goſpel, and with the converted Jews become one fold under one ſhepherd. The redeemed out of all nations are called upon to praiſe the Lord: to them the goſpel was to be preached, and in conſequence of their obedience to the faith, they would be admitted into the aſſembly of the church, and join in the ſongs of redeeming love: kindneſs and mercy, vaſt as the waters of the deluge, abounding to the chief of ſinners, therefore praiſe ye the Lord.

P S A L. CXVIII.

V. 1—18. I called upon the Lord in diſtreſs, and the Lord anſwered me—Thus did Jeſus in the garden, and on the croſs cry out, and was anſwered in his reſurrection and aſcenſion to the right hand of God, to reign till his foes ſhould be made his footſtool. The Son of David met the combined hatred of earth and hell, and more than conqueror triumphed over them; and every believer, dependant on his almighty ſtrength, need never fear what the world without, or corruption within, can do againſt him; he may boldly ſay, The Lord is my helper, I will not fear what man can do unto me—He rejoices in this ſalvation of God. The Lord is my ſtrength, to uphold me, on him alone my ſoul truſteth, and my ſong; for ever am I bound to praiſe him for the power he hath beſtowed, and the comforts I have received: every ſoul, accepted in Jeſus, juſtified by his death, and renewed by his grace, is called upon to rejoice with joy unſpeakable, and full of glory. He aſcribes the glory of all to God; it was not his own power or policy, but the right hand of the Lord which ſaved him. Paſt experience emboldens his hope, that he ſhall not die, but live, notwithſtanding the malice of his foes, and ſtand a living monument of his power, grace, and faithfulneſs. The Son of David lives, and death hath no more dominion over him; though for a moment, under the chaſtiſement of our peace, his ſoul was put to grief, and the humanity bruiſed to the duſt for our iniquities; yet he is now alive for evermore, to declare the great ſalvation of God accompliſhed; and in him every believer may ſay, I ſhall not die eternally; becauſe he liveth, I ſhall live alſo.

worldly goods, and success in earthly affairs; but especially with that best increase of the gifts and graces of his spirit, enabling them to bring forth fruit unto God; for whom he blesseth must be blessed; he who made heaven and earth having all power to communicate the blessings he pronounces on his people. They who trust in him will praise him, and find abundant matter for their songs. The dead praise not the Lord—Those who are gone down into the silent grave, can no more join the sacred choir; those who are dead in trespasses and sins, have no heart to praise him. But we, who are maintained in life by the bounties of his providence, and are by his spirit quickened to a better life of grace in our souls; we will bless the Lord, whilst sojourners below, in this delightful work will we be employed, and when removed to that better world, our service there shall be everlasting praise.

PSAL. CXVI.

V. 1—9. We have here the psalmist's profession of his love to God for the mercies he had tasted, and of his determined dependance upon him. I love, because the Lord hath heard my supplications—His answering his desires, affected his soul with deepest gratitude, and engaged him to make the warmest returns of affection, and to persevere in waiting still upon him. Every answer to our prayers is a fresh obligation, and encouragement to pray without ceasing. That soul is happy that can with David truly say, I love the Lord. In prayer should our very parting breath expire, and then we shall go where all will be praise. He mentions the deep distress from which God delivered him. The sorrows of death compassed me—Such as dying men feel in their agony; the pains of hell, such as arise in the conscience from the sting of guilt, or of the grave, which brought me to its very gates, gat hold upon me, and seized me as their prey. I found trouble and misery—Trouble which none but God could assuage, and misery which he alone could remove. Blessed be God for Jesus Christ, who giveth the victory over the world, the flesh, and the devil, to all that believe that their Redeemer died to atone for their sins, and ever liveth to send salvation by his grace. David by experience found Gracious is the Lord—I have proved him so to my unspeakable comfort, pardoning my guilt, delivering my helpless soul. And righteous—Faithful to his promises. The Lord preserveth the simple—Those who place on him their sole dependance. I was brought low, to the very brink of ruin; and he helped me; my soul was delivered from death, temporal, eternal death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling into sin, and the pit of death and hell. And but for these compassions of our God, our souls had dropped into hell, where there is weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth. Well may we say, Our God is merciful. He bids his soul now rest in peace, under the guardian care of this gracious God. Return unto thy rest, O my soul—Whatever hath troubled thy repose, whether affliction, persecution, temptation, or corruption, since all thy burdens are now cast on the Lord, confidently expect, and quietly wait to see the salvation of God, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee in all his past dispensations, and therefore deserved to be trusted for all that is to come. Learn, my soul, thus to reason, and trust still in God! He resolves to devote to God's service the life preserved by his mercy. I will walk before the Lord—Seeking to glorify him upon earth, by letting his light shine before men, and telling of his salvation.

V. 10—19. He declares his unshaken confidence in God. I believed the promises of his grace, of protection here, and glory hereafter, therefore have I spoken; to God in prayer, assured of being heard; to men with boldness, knowing the truth of what he declared. Faith inspires the heart with freedom of speech, and no danger can discourage the faithful minister from proclaiming the gospel truths, nor the faithful christian from the profession of them. (2 Cor. iv. 13.) In his greatest afflictions, even when an exile, and all despaired of ever seeing him return, he could trust God; and though all men concluded it was impossible he should ever come to the throne, he could rest on the promise of God. (Rom. iii. 4.) I will take the cup of salvation—The drink-offerings that should attend his sacrifice of thanksgiving, and call upon the name of the Lord, praying to him, and praising him for all his mercies, in public, in the presence of all the people, and the courts of the Lord's house, paying the vows he made in trouble, glorying in the profession of his deep obligations to the God of his mercies, and encouraging others to the like open professions of his service; nor should his lips only be employed in thanksgiving, his life should be for ever devoted to his service. O Lord, truly I am thy servant—in all fidelity and zeal; he repeats it to shew the heartiness of his surrender. I am thy servant: thou hast loosed my bonds—The bonds of sin, corruption, affliction. [d] Verse 171

† Heb. judgments of thy righteousness.

8 I

The gates of righteousness are required to be thrown open. The gate of heaven, now, through the Redeemer, is opened for himself and all believers: of which David's return to the temporal sanctuary, in answer to his prayer, after he had been so long an exile, was a type and figure. The Lord's humiliation and exaltation are foretold. The stone which the builders refused, is become the head stone of the corner—David, the outcast, is exalted to Israel's throne; and Jesus, though rejected by the Jewish rulers and people as the Messiah, and crucified on a tree, is become the head-stone of the corner; angels, principalities, and powers, are made subject unto him, and he is made head over all things to his church, uniting both Jew and Gentile in one glorious temple, and the everlasting object of his people's praise. This is the Lord's doing—The contrivance of his infinite wisdom and love, and executed by his Divine power, in order for the salvation of his people. And it is marvellous in our eyes—Angels with admiration behold the undertaking of an incarnate Saviour; and men, for whom this great salvation is wrought, are more called upon to wonder and adore. This is the day the Lord has made—The glorious day of gospel grace, wherein the sun of righteousness, rising from the grave, shines with bright beams of light and love. O Lord, send now prosperity—Let Jesus bow the hearts of his people, and be the conqueror of death, hell, and sin, and his kingdom be extended from pole to pole. Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord—Ordained of God to be the Mediator, appointed and enabled to execute the glorious work of redemption, and coming in the fulness of time to accomplish it. Thus (Luke xix. 38.) the people met him with praises; and thus with delight doth the church welcome him to his soul, in all the visits of his love and grace, and cry with affection, "Come in, my Lord, to me." We have blessed you out of the house of the Lord—We, the ministers of the gospel of Jesus, declare to you, who believe in and praise him, that ye are blessed of him. God is the Lord—The faithful, gracious, ever-living God, which hath shewed us light, and hath shined on the face of his anointed Jesus, and on us through him, with beams of mercy and grace; therefore are we bound to render the returns of gratitude. Bind the sacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar—The bodies of slain beasts, though once most needful, now the body of Jesus hath been once offered, but the spiritual sacrifices of prayer and praise are the well-pleasing oblation God now accepts; and the devoted heart, offered up as a living sacrifice. David concludes with declaring his confidence in God, and his thankfulness for such an interest in his favour, exhorting every faithful soul to join his grateful praises. Thou art my God—And therefore I will praise thee. O give thanks unto the Lord—So worthy to be praised, for he is good beyond all we can conceive. For his mercy endureth for ever—From eternity it was, and to eternity will endure; therefore praise the Lord, O my soul!

PSAL. CXIX.

This psalm seems to be a collection of David's pious and devout ejaculations, the short and sudden breathings and elevations of his soul to God, which he wrote down as they occurred, and towards the latter end of his time gathered them out of his day-book, where they lay scattered, added to them many like words, and digested them into this order. The composure of it is singular. It is divided into twenty-two parts, according to the number of the letters of the Hebrew alphabet, with which they are marked. This might prove of use to the memory, and young people would the easier learn it by heart, and retain it the better even in old age. The general scope and design of it is to magnify the law, and make it honourable; to set forth the excellency and usefulness of divine revelation, and to recommend it to us, by the psalmist's own example, who speaks by experience of the benefit of it, and of the good impressions made upon him by it; for which he praiseth God. There are ten several words by which divine revelation is called in this psalm; 1. God's law, because they are enacted by him as our sovereign. 2. His way, because they are the rule of our obedience. 3. His testimonies, because they are solemnly declared to the world, and attested beyond contradiction. 4. His commandments, because given with authority, and lodged with us as a trust. 5. His precepts, because prescribed to us, and not left indifferent. 6. His word, because it is the declaration of his mind, and Christ the eternal Word is all in all in it. 7. His judgments, because framed in infinite wisdom, and because by them we must both judge and be judged. 8. His righteousness, because it is all holy, just, and good, and the rule and standard of righteousness. 9. His statutes, because they are fixed and determined, and of perpetual obligation. 10. His truth or faithfulness, because the principles upon which the divine law is built, are eternal truths. The whole expresses the affection David bore to God's word, and is designed to stir up our affections towards it, who enjoy so much more of divine revelation than ever he was favoured with.

ALEPH. The First Part.

V. 1—8. Whilst happiness is the universal pursuit, we might wonder at the general disappointment, the reason is, we take our own judgments and the example of others, and not the word of God, for our guide. The psalmist here points out the way to happiness present and eternal. He describes the truly happy. They are undefiled in the way—Found in Christ the way to glory, washed in his blood from every spot of sin, perfect, compleat in righteousness, and sincere in their desire to please God in all things; and walk in the law of the Lord—Guided by it as their rule of duty. They keep his testimonies—His revealed will as a sacred deposit, solicitous to obey the commands, and observe the instituted ordinances, without daring to add thereto, or diminish therefrom. And seek him with their whole heart—In ceaseless prayer looking for strength and help from him; cleaving to him with undivided affection, and desiring daily to love him more, and serve him better. They also do no iniquity—The Divine nature, of which they have partaken, doth not commit sin:

More than human ſtrength is neceſſary to enable us to walk and pleaſe God, and therefore to him muſt our prayer be directed, that he may lead us in the way he commands, and write on our hearts the law he enjoins. Then ſhall I not be aſhamed—Of my hope towards God. When I have reſpect unto all thy commandments—As my directory, and without reſerve, deſire to have my will and ways conformed to them: For this is our rejoicing, the teſtimony of our conſcience, that in ſimplicity, and godly ſincerity, we have our converſation in the world. He reſolves to praiſe God with uprightneſs of heart, and purpoſes, through God's grace, to approve his fidelity unſhaken. I will keep thy ſtatutes—Such is my fixed deſire and deſign. O forſake me not utterly—If but a moment left of thee, I cannot ſtand if forſaken by thee, I muſt prove an apoſtate; but leave me not, Lord, and then I ſhall walk and not be weary, and run and not be faint. May my ſoul thus ever purpoſe and pray!

2. BETH. The Second Part.

V. 9—16. Youth is the time to ſerve the Lord, and happy they who ſeek him early. The queſtion is put, Wherewithal ſhall a young man cleanſe his way?—The way of all fleſh is corrupt and polluted, and young perſons expoſed to temptations that war againſt the ſoul, defile the conſcience, and plunge them into perdition and deſtruction; great need therefore have they to inquire how they may be preſerved from the pollutions of the world. The anſwer is given, By taking heed to thy word—This chart will enable him to ſteer clear of the rocks, on which others are ſhipwrecked. With my whole heart have I ſought thee—Thy word to teach, thy grace to guide me. Thy word have I hid within my heart—Mixed with faith, fixed in my memory, and treaſured up as the moſt valuable poſſeſſion, and the grand preſervative. That I might not ſin againſt thee—Having an anſwer ready to every temptation, and a conſtant warning from it of the evil, danger, and baſeneſs of ſin. Bleſſed art thou, O Lord—For all thou haſt done for me; infinitely bleſſed in thyſelf, thou doſt delight to bleſs thy people: Teach me thy ſtatutes—All I yet know is very imperfect, my own reſearches are weak and poor; thou, Lord, muſt teach me, or I ſhall never be truly wiſe unto ſalvation. With my lips—Telling of God's word, its doctrines and precepts; exhorting others to obedience, and ſpeaking his own experience of the excellence of the good ways of God. I have rejoiced—With a ſenſe of God's love, the unſearchable riches of Chriſt, the ineſtimable promiſes, and the joy ariſing from a faithful adherence to him. I will meditate in thy precepts—With them ſhall my thoughts be occupied riſing up and lying down; and inwardly digeſted, they ſhall not only be ſtored up in the memory, but afford the moſt ſweet refreſhment to my ſoul. And have reſpect unto thy ways—As the traveller, careful not to deviate from the right way. I will delight myſelf in thy ſtatutes—They have been my joy, and every day the more I know of them, the greater my delight. I will not forget thy word—I will keep it, to warn me of danger, to direct me when I doubt, to ſtrengthen me when I am tempted, to comfort me when I am dejected, to recover me when I am fallen, and to preſerve me when I ſtand. Reader, inquire into your experience, and ſee how far it correſponds with what is written for our learning.

3. GIMEL. The Third Part.

V. 17—24. We have here the pſalmiſt's prayer. Deal bountifully with thy ſervant—Every bleſſing we can hope for, comes from the mere bounty of God, who giveth liberally to thoſe who aſk him, and upbraideth not. That I may live—Our natural life is forfeited by ſin, our ſouls ſunk in ſpiritual death, and liable to eternal death; well may we therefore cry, That I may live; ſpiritually by the quickning power of Jeſus, eternally through the free gift of God,

God, and temporally as long as it shall be for God's glory; this being the only purpose for which a believer wishes to be here. That I may keep thy word, faithfully myself, zealous to spread the knowledge of it, and that I may do so. Open thou mine eyes—We are by nature blind to spiritual objects; the wonders of God's word are far beyond the keenest eye of unenlightned reason, (1 Cor. xi. 14.) till Jesus opens our understandings, we cannot understand the scriptures aright, (Luke xxiv. 4, 5.) but in his light we shall see light. Lord, may we see daily more clearly these things that are written, that we may believe that Jesus is the Christ, and by believing have spiritual life through him. (John xx. 31.) I am a stranger upon earth—My abode is short, having here no abiding city, therefore hide not thy commandments from me, but shew me how to act in this land of my pilgrimage, guide me safely through it, and teach me the road to that eternal home whither I desire to go. It is a reflection we should often make, that we are strangers and pilgrims on earth, that we may never think of taking up our rest in this strange and polluted land. David professes his eager longings after God's word, to know it more fully, to obey it more zealously at all times; it was not a sudden fit of devotion, but his habitual temper. O, that we may imitate his example! He gives the character, and denounces the condemnation of the wicked. They are proud, rejecting God's government, despising his law, and contemning his threatnings; or they are vainly puffed up with the conceit of their own goodness and excellency above other men, of all sins in God's sight the most abominable. They err from thy commandments—Whether openly profane, or proudly self-righteous, they alike fatally err, and the wrath of God abideth on them. He begs to be preserved from the reproach and revilings of men. Princes did sit and speak against me—The great men of Saul's court against David, and the rulers against Christ. (1 Cor. xi. 8.) And thus oh many against the poor and despised followers of Jesus; but may we ever be enabled to say with him, thy servant did meditate in thy statutes; inattentive to their revilings, undisturbed in his meditations, and steadily persevering in the path of duty. Thy testimonies are my delight—In them I find a joy the world can neither give nor take away: He consulted not with flesh and blood, but with better advisers, the Scriptures of truth; and we are then sure we are right, when God's word is our guide.

7 DALETH. The Fourth Part.

V. 25—32. My soul cleaveth to the dust—Sunk under disease of body, or dejection of mind, and ready to drop into the grave; or, feeling the vile affections of a fallen nature, attached to some earthly good, light, vain, and unsatisfactory, as the dust the wind scattereth. Quicken thou me—Raise up and enliven my heart by thy holy Spirit, that in warm affections it may ascend to thee, and leave this earth, and all things in it, far behind. I have declared my ways—Either his sinful ways, which he lamented; or his distresses, which he spread before the Lord; or the holy purposes of his heart, which in prayer he had uttered to him. And thou hearedst me—Pardoning, pitying, relieving, confirming, strengthening me. The believer hath ever one to go to, who is as able to relieve all his wants, as he is ever ready to hear his prayer. What an unspeakable comfort! Teach me thy statutes—How I may walk and please thee, in gratitude for the mercy I have received. Make me to understand—I want no higher teaching than thy word, opened by thy spirit. So shall I talk of thy wondrous works—Thus instructed, I shall be able to speak of them with understanding, with delight. We shall then speak of the things of God with effect, when we speak from what we have known in our own souls. My soul melteth—Through the pressures of affliction, temptation, desertion, or corruption; and feeling his own weakness, he turns his eyes to one mighty to save. Strengthen thou me, according to thy word—With such might in the inner man, that I may be able to conflict with, and overcome the trials I meet; and this, according to the promises which thou hast given me, to engage my dependance, and be my support. Remove from me the way of falsehood—Keep me from all errors in principle and practice, that I may not deviate from the truth. Grant me thy law graciously—Which is the great preservative; and matter of infinite favour it is, that this blessed word is so fully made known to us. Inexcusable will all be who go down to eternal death, wilfully neglecting the knowledge of the way to life, with Bibles in their hands. I have chosen the way of truth—Christ, who is eminently the way and the truth; renouncing every other. Thy judgments have I laid before me—As the pattern after which I fain would copy. I have stuck to thy testimonies—With unshaken steadiness, in spite of every effort of temptation to make me quit this hold. O Lord, put me not to shame—Let me never be ashamed of my confidence, as disappointed of my hope. I will run the way of thy commandments—With cheerfulness, diligence, and delight, when thou shalt enlarge my heart—For from him all the ability is derived: His love can alone give wings to our soul, and his quickning Spirit make our feet to move swift and steady in the ways of his holy will to future glory.

ה HE. The Fifth Part.

V. 33—40. Wise and gracious as David was, he was sensible his attainments, both in knowledge and grace, were very low; and he earnestly longed to increase in both with the increase of God. He prays to be taught God's way, and blest with spiritual understanding. To be inclined and drawn with the cords of love, and made to go in the way of God's commandments; for unless a gracious violence were used with our stubborn hearts, we should neither be willing nor able to walk before God. I will keep thy law—In the strength of the grace thou dost minister, unto the end, constantly and perseveringly; and with my whole heart, cordially, sincerely, and universally. When our duty becomes our delight, then our soul truly prospers. He prays against covetousness, one of the most rooted and most dangerous of all evils; the love of gold, and the love of God, being utterly incompatible, and no man capable of serving two masters. Vanity—The vain pomp and glory of the world; the honours, profits, and pleasures. He desires he may be not only kept from the love of them in his heart, but removed from the beholding them; for they who would abstain from evil, must turn away their eyes from the temptation; for by looking, desire is kindled. Reproach, that God would turn it away. He feared it, for sometimes he had given sad occasion for it; and, among his bitterest burdens, felt the dishonour he had brought upon God thereby; and he feared lest he should again return unto folly,

1 VAU. The Sixth Part.

V. 41—48. Let thy mercies come unto me—The ſure mercies of David, comprehending every bleſſing of pardon, grace, comfort, glory. Even thy ſalvation—the fulneſs and perfection of it. According to thy word—Which hath promiſed it. Take not the word out of my mouth—He deſired ever to feed on its contents. The graces he exerciſed. Faith. So ſhall I have wherewith to anſwer, for I truſt in thy word—In the word of promiſe, which being ſure in its accompliſhment, he doubted not but he ſhould be able to anſwer the cavils of thoſe who ſuggeſted there was no help for him in his God. Hope. I have hoped in thy judgments—In God according to his word, amidſt every diſcouragement. Love. I have loved thy commandments; not only looked on them as my duty, but delighted in them as my richeſt treaſure. My ſoul, is ſuch thy ſtate! The practice he propoſed to himſelf, and which it is the happineſs of all to follow. I will walk at liberty—With readineſs and delight, delivered by thy grace from the bondage of corruption, and engaged in that bleſſed ſervice which is perfect freedom. I will ſpeak of thy teſtimonies before kings; and will not be aſhamed—God's word is the beſt ſubject of converſation; and it is our duty to all we have acceſs to, to make known to them by ſome means, what would make them happy.

1 ZAIN. The Seventh Part.

V. 49—56. Remember the word upon which thou haſt cauſed me to hope—Not that God ever can or doth forget, but he will be inquired of by us, and is well pleaſed to have his promiſes urged by us in prayer. For thy word hath quickened me—Thy Spirit applying the truths of thy word called me at firſt from death to life, and ever ſince it hath revived my heart. The proud have had me greatly in deriſion—For no eminence of ſtation, or purity of manners, can preſerve us from the revilings of men. They who live according to God's word, may expect the ridicule of ſcorners, who think contempt of real piety to be a mark of wit and wiſdom. Yet have I not declined from thy law—None of theſe things ever moved him a ſtep out of the way of duty: He knew the value of it too well to be laughed out of his religion. Do they love Chriſt and his ways, who cannot bear for him the ſmile of contempt, or the ſcoff of folly? I remembered thy judgments of old, O Lord—Thoſe executed on the proud, and the interpoſitions of his providence in behalf of his people. And have comforted myſelf—Both in the conſciouſneſs of his ſimplicity, and God's regard, which infinitely overpaid the world's ſcorn. He expreſſes his dread on foreſeeing the deſtruction of the ungodly, ſo terrible would it prove. Little as the wicked think of their danger, and trivial as they count their offences againſt God's law, a faithful ſoul trembles for them, ſhocked at their impiety, grieved for the miſchief they do, and with horror beholding the precipice of eternal ruin, to the brink of which they are ruſhing. Thy ſtatutes have been my ſongs in the days of my pilgrimage—This world is the ſtrange land, through which the faithful travel, and from God's word encourage each other in the way. I have remembered thy name, O Lord, in the night—When waking on his bed, his heart went up to heaven, and ſtill maintained communion with God. And have kept thy law—In ſimplicity and godly ſincerity. This was given unto me—It being wholly from God's grace that we are able to lift up our hearts to him and to obey him, for we have nothing we have not received, and can tender to him but of his own.

1 CHETH. The Eighth Part.

V. 59—64. Thou art my portion, O Lord—Not wealth, not honours, not pleaſures; theſe are huſks, incapable of filling the boundleſs deſires of his ſoul, which God alone with his love and favour can ſatisfy. I have ſaid, that I would keep thy words—Thy grace enabling me. All who have Chriſt for their portion to enjoy, cannot but yield themſelves to him as their maſter to ſerve him. ‡

intreated thy favour—The light of thy countenance, which is better than life itſelf. Be merciful unto me—Bleſſed be his name, there is, through Jeſus, mercy for the moſt miſerable, and help for the deſperate; and this according to thy word—The promiſes of God. I thought on my ways—Reflected on the paſt, conſidered the path of preſent duty. And turned my feet unto thy teſtimonies—He rectified his walk, and with full purpoſe of heart, through grace, reſolved to make ſtrait paths for his feet, and that inſtantly, knowing that they who delay to comply with convictions, are in danger of being undone for ever. At midnight I give thanks unto thee—He at midnight aroſe for the happy work of praiſe. I am a companion of all them that fear thee—He loved them for what he ſaw of God in them, delighted in their converſe, joined with them in religious exerciſes, communicated his own experience, inquired theirs, nor withheld from them the hand of fellowſhip, or the heart of affection; grace, like the grave, in a meaſure making diſtinctions of rank void among thoſe who are one in Chriſt Jeſus.

ד Teth. The Ninth Part.

V. 65—72. Thou haſt dealt well with thy ſervant—His promiſes never fail; and they who truſt them will own, that God doth all things well; not only above what we deſerve, but exceeding all our deſires. His prayer and plea. I have believed thy commandments—Receiving them not as the word of man, but as they are indeed the word of God; and therefore he deſired to have a deeper and more experimental acquaintance with them, which only God can teach. Before I was afflicted, I went aſtray—Eaſe, affluence, and proſperity, are apt to ſteal away the heart from God, as things that ſolicit our ſenſes. This David found to his coſt; but God viſits iniquities with the rod of paternal tenderneſs! How deeply are we indebted for it! However grievous for the time, we ſhall own it the beſt of bleſſings in diſguiſe, when its effects are anſwered, and we can, by grace reſtored, ſay with the pſalmiſt, But now have I kept thy law—Humbled into the duſt, and brought back to the boſom of that Father of Mercies, from whom we had departed. Thou art good—In thyſelf, and the fountain of goodneſs to thy creatures; and doeſt good to all, even to the evil and unthankful: ſo boundleſs is thy kindneſs. Teach me thy ſtatutes—That in this experience of thy goodneſs I may have freſh cauſe to praiſe thee. The proud have forged a lie againſt me—And againſt a lying tongue the pureſt innocence is no protection. But I will keep thy precepts—Not diſcouraged from the path of duty; not vindicating himſelf from their calumnies, ſo much as living them down; whilſt the holineſs and unblameableneſs of his conduct might be a confutation of their falſhood, who ſpake evil of his good converſation in Chriſt. Their heart is as fat—Wallowing in wealth and luxury, and by indulgence of every appetite ſtupifying their conſcience and their ſenſes. But I delight in thy law—Know no pleaſure equal to communion with thee; and find greater ſatisfaction in denying myſelf, than they in the lawleſs indulgence of their wiſhes. To deny thyſelf and to take up thy croſs in the way to walk with God, and to be bleſſed of him for ever. In the ſchool of affliction he had learnt wiſdom, and the diſcipline he had there undergone, was more than amply repaid in the benefits he received from an increaſed acquaintance with God, his word, his grace, his providences. The law of thy mouth is better unto me than thouſands of gold and ſilver—Vaſt poſſeſſions he enjoyed, vaſt riches he had acquired; but one page of God's book was better to him than theſe ſhining millions; one promiſe more valuable than the wealth of all the eaſt. Faith, that realized to him an eternal world, and the glories there, made him count every thing beſides comparatively to be dung and loſs. Who can tell the bleſſedneſs of ſuch an heaven-born mind, but they to whom God hath given it!

י Jod. The Tenth Part.

V. 73—80. Thy hands have made me—The formation of our bodies being as much the work of Divine power, as the making the firſt man out of the duſt. Give me underſtanding, that I may learn thy commandments—It is not ſo much our being, as our well-being, which is matter of praiſe. A creature apoſtate from God by nature, but by Divine Grace renewed in the ſpirit of his mind, and made capable of the enjoyment of him for ever. They that fear thee, thee, will be glad when they ſee me—In my proſperity, as if it was their own, and as members of the ſame body rejoicing with me, Becauſe I have hoped in thy word—Which hath not failed; and this they ſee, and are encouraged to truſt on the ſame promiſes. He owns, whatever afflictions he ſuffered, they were no more than he deſerved; and that God therein had the moſt gracious deſigns towards him. I know, O Lord, that thy judgments are right—All the commands of thy word, and all the diſpenſations of thy providence, particularly the afflictive ones he had undergone. And that thou in very faithfulneſs haſt afflicted me—In thy love and favour. Let thy tender mercies come unto me, that I may live—Only for mercy can a ſinner plead; only on mercy can his hope be ſtayed; and there is mercy with God, for all who ſeek it in Jeſus Chriſt. They ſhall live the life of grace on earth, and come to the eternal life of glory in heaven. He prays for the confuſion of his enemies, and the company of his friends. They dealt perverſly with me—By lies ſought to blacken his character. For the company of his friends—Their character is excellent; they fear thee, with filial reverential fear of his word and judgments, and have known thy teſtimonies, wiſe unto ſalvation; and therefore he wiſhes that they would turn unto him. Perhaps, on his unfaithfulneſs they had ſhunned his acquaintance, to teſtify their abhorrence of his ſin; but now, on his repentance, he hoped with God's returning favour again to enjoy their ſociety. Though a good man may well abhor the ſin, and be grieved for the diſhonour brought upon God by his brother, he muſt not be implacable, but receive and comfort thoſe whoſe ſpirits are wounded, leſt they be ſwallowed up with ſorrow, and ſink into deſpair. He prays, Let my heart be ſound, or perfect, ſincere in thy ſtatutes—In obedience to God's commands. That I be not aſhamed—For when we are unfaithful, we are aſhamed to look men in the face, aſhamed to appear before God, and ſhocked at ourſelves; whilſt conſcious ſimplicity enables us to approach a throne of grace boldly, and our faces know no ſhame.

ד Caph. The Eleventh Part.

V. 81—88. My ſoul fainteth for thy ſalvation—When ready to ſink under the preſſures of affliction, or looking for the coming of his grace. But I hope in thy word—To be delivered from all my dangers, and to ſee the promiſe accompliſhed in the fulneſs of time. Mine eyes fail for thy word—Weary with ſtraining, to deſery the approach of the incarnate word, ſaying, when wilt thou comfort me?—Thus diſcouraged, tempted, and diſtreſſed was he. For I am become like a bottle in the ſmoke—Which being made of the ſkins of beaſts, grew ſhrivelled; and ſo emaciated and wrinkled was his once ruddy viſage grown, worn down with the anguiſh and ſorrow which preyed upon him within; yet notwithſtanding all he ſuffered, I do not forget thy ſtatutes—But though thou ſlay me, yet will I truſt in thee. A ſickly body, and a mind ſorely haraſſed with temptations and afflictions, are often the lot of God's deareſt children. We are apt to count every moment of trial long, and to be impatient of relief; but if we quietly wait and humbly hope for it, we ſhall ſee the ſalvation of God. How many are the days of thy ſervant?—Very few; and muſt they be all ſpent in the furnace of affliction? Help thou me—All other help is vain, on thy everlaſting arms I hang; Lord, ſave; I periſh. Quicken me after thy loving kindneſs—Let me experience the enlivening influence of thy grace, and that ſhall ſtrengthen me under all my difficulties. So ſhall I keep the teſtimonies of thy mouth—Though in myſelf weaker than the bruiſed reed, yet able to do all things, thou ſtrengthening me. All is of grace: It is as much an act of God's unmerited favour to quicken our ſouls for the performance of duty, as to pardon our ſins.

ל Lamed. The Twelfth Part.

V. 89—96. For ever—From everlaſting to everlaſting, the ſame unchangeable Jehovah, and thy word ſtands immutable, and the execution of it ſure. Thy faithfulneſs is unto all generations—Thy promiſes never fail, are like Jeſus, their author, the ſame yeſterday, to-day, and for ever; and every believer to the lateſt ages ſhall experience their ſtability. Thou haſt eſtabliſhed the earth, and it abideth—Supported and preſerved by the hand that formed it. They continue this day—The heavens and the earth, with all the vaſt orbs that roll in the immenſity of ſpace. According to thine ordinances—Obſerving with exacteſt regularity the track marked out for them, and running with uninterrupted perſeverance their appointed courſe. For all are thy ſervants—The creatures of thy hands, and obedient to thy will. Unleſs thy law had been my delight, I ſhould then have periſhed in mine affliction—The ſtorm ran high, he was ready to deſpair of life, and in his ſpirit dejected, but in God's word a well of living waters ſprung up. Abundant reaſon hath he therefore to ſay, I will never forget thy precepts—The powerful word of the goſpel, a ſavour of life unto life, through the miniſtration of the ſpirit. He pleads the intereſt God had in him, as a reaſon why he ſhould ſhew him his ſalvation. I am thine—Thine by creation, thine by redemption. Save me—From every evil of ſin, or ſuffering. The wicked laid ſnares to entangle him, and purpoſed to kill the body; or more terribly, by ſeducing him into ſin, to ruin his ſoul. But I will conſider thy teſtimonies—Adhering to them, notwithſtanding all oppoſition. I have ſeen an end of all perfection—All the greatneſs, glory, and wiſdom of the world is limited, and paſſing away, and all the perfection that man can arrive at is infinitely ſhort of the purity of God's law. But thy commandments are exceeding broad—And adequate to which, no works and righteouſneſs merely human were ever found: Only by Jeſus Chriſt was it ever fully obſerved, and by grace received through faith in him alone can we be compleat and perfect, lacking nothing, which this law requires. May my ſoul be found in him!

ד MEM. The Thirteenth Part.

V. 97—103. David had often ſpoken of his delight in God's word, but he now in a rapture breaks forth, O how I love thy law—More than I am able to expreſs; ſo rich are the promiſes contained in it, ſo excellent the rule preſcribed by it. It is my meditation all the day—And nothing could be a ſtronger proof how greatly he delighted in it. He had more underſtanding than his teachers—Thoſe who ſat in Moſes' ſeat; the Scribes and Phariſees. He underſtood more than the ancients—And all this through God's commandments being ever with him; his meditation on them was frequent, and his adherence to them faithful and ſincere. And is not the practice of what we know the ſpeedieſt way to the higheſt attainments of ſpiritual wiſdom? The written word of God contains the treaſures of knowledge and a ſure guide to glory. The volumes of philoſophers, the decrees of councils, the deciſions of the fathers, or traditions of the church may deceive; but the word of God is the voice of truth itſelf. Thou haſt taught me—And none but God can teach effectually, ſo as to make wiſe unto ſalvation. How ſweet are thy words—Every promiſe was as the flowers of ſpring, which afford ſweetneſs to the induſtrious bee. And if we have but the pſalmiſt's ſpirit, we ſhall find the ſame delight in God's word, and confirm his experience by our own.

נ NUN. The Fourteenth Part.

V. 105—112. God's word is a lamp unto our feet, and a light unto our path. The law diſcovers the perfection of righteouſneſs God requires, convinces us of ſin, and opens the corruption and deceitfulneſs of our hearts. The goſpel holds forth Jeſus, the ſun of righteouſneſs; reveals the love of God manifeſted to ſinners in their Redeemer; points to him the way, the truth, and the life; and ſhews us how by grace received through faith to walk in him, ſo as to reach the eternal kingdom. I have ſworn—The promiſes, and reſolutions made in our own ſtrength, are vain; but the engagements we enter into, ſupported by the Lord's power, and under a ſenſe of our own weakneſs, we ſhall be enabled to perform. I am afflicted—In body, under diſeaſe; in circumſtances, through oppreſſion; or in ſoul, under temptation or deſertion. Quicken me, O Lord, according to thy word—But for the ſupports of which, I muſt periſh in my trouble. Accept, I beſeech thee, the free-will-offerings of my mouth—The ſpiritual ſacrifices of a grateful heart. And teach me thy judgments—For without divine teaching, we can offer no acceptable ſervice. My ſoul is continually in my hand—In jeopardy, ready to be killed. Yet do I not forget thy law—Neither intimidated out of his profeſſions, nor diverted from the path of duty, nor through anxious care for his ſafety forgetful of God's law; nor by any ſinful contrivances to extricate himſelf from his difficulties. Thy teſtimonies have I taken—The moſt valuable poſſeſſions are thoſe which are held by promiſe from God. They are the preſent rejoicing of my heart—Affording a ſatisfaction infinitely beyond what all the things on earth can give, and not ceaſing with our preſent life, but abiding to eternity. I have inclined my heart—Yielded to thy grace; and he truſted he who had begun, would perfect what was lacking, and ſtrengthen him to perſevere even to the end.

ס SAMECH. The Fifteenth Part.

V. 113—120. We have in theſe verſes David's hatred of ſin, and love of God's law. He hated the very thoughts of evil. Will they long walk in God's ways, who watch not over their thoughts, nor pray for delivering grace before thoughts are quickned into deſire, and perfected in ſaying or doing evil? Thou art my hiding-place—Whither I flee, when purſued by the malice of earth or hell, and find a ſure retreat. And my ſhield—To quench all the fiery darts of the wicked one. I hope in thy word—And having this anchor of my ſoul ſure and ſtedfaſt, am enabled to ride out every ſtorm. He prays, Uphold me—As one ſinking, unleſs the everlaſting arms were under him: He grounds his prayer upon the promiſe,

God will tread them down in his wrath, and will put them away like dross—Proved vile and separated for destruction.

ע Ain. The Sixteenth Part.

V. 121—128. David appeals to God for his integrity, and begs him to be his protector from wrong. The more we are conscious of our own weakness, and flee to God for help, the surer shall we stand. Jesus is his people's surety; and his grace their all-sufficient strength. Mine eyes fail—For the fulfilment of the promise which assured him of salvation. Deal with thy servant according unto thy mercy—For that is the only thing we can rest our hopes upon. And teach me thy statutes—Direct me in my doubts, support me under my discouragements. I am thy servant—And desire to approve my fidelity, if I knew the way; therefore give me understanding, that I may know thy testimonies—And obey them. It is time for thee, O Lord, to work—To stop the torrent of ungodliness, and silence the blasphemies of the profane. For they have made void thy law—Impiously casting off the cords, and bidding defiance to the Almighty; or proudly setting up a righteousness of their own. Do not they who trust on their own works for justification, as much make void the law, as those who daringly cast off every restraint, and indulge every lawless appetite? All God's precepts he obeyed without hesitation, and thought none so little as to be forgotten or slighted. And he hated every false way—Whether false doctrine, false worship, or false practices, he utterly abhorred them.

ד Pe. The Seventeenth Part.

V. 129—136. They are wonderful—Contain astonishing discoveries of invisible things, of the mystery of God and of Christ, of grace, of the way of godliness, and of the joys and miseries of the eternal world. Therefore doth my soul keep them—Locked up in my heart as the richest treasure. Doing the work which God's word enjoins, can only shew our real esteem for it. The entrance of thy words giveth light—The first three chapters of the Bible teach us more of God's works, and man's true condition, what he was, and what he is, than all the books in the world; and when by the Spirit of God our understandings are enlightened, we immediately, on the very entrance of divine light, know more of God's grace and love, than all human teaching ever could inform us. It giveth understanding to the simple—Makes even fools in the eyes of men wise unto salvation; and those who come to it with simplicity, and a child-like spirit, find from every perusal, increasing understanding in the things of God. I opened my mouth, and panted—So intense were his desires, so fervent the breathings of his soul after God, and his holy ways, and so eagerly he longed for the courts of his house, and the ordinances of his worship. O for this sacred fervor! Look upon me—A sinful man; and be merciful unto me—Forgive my transgressions, and let me not meet the face of an angry, but a reconciled and pardoning God. As thou usest to do unto those that love thy name—Such looks of kind regard, such favours and mercies bestow upon me, for I am of that number, and hope to share with them in their blessedness. If we look to God through Jesus Christ to be saved alone by him, we can ask for nothing a God of love will not bestow. Let not any iniquity, not the least known and allowed sin, have dominion over me, that I should obey it in the lusts thereof. Nothing is so terrible in the eye of an awakened conscience, as to be brought again under the bondage of corruption, and the power of sin. Deliver me from the oppression of man—Whose power he feared, and whose malice he had experienced. So will I keep thy precepts—

If God smiles, no matter who frowns upon us. When we are found in the path of duty, God will meet us with the visits of his love. Rivers of waters run down mine eyes—Every believer is a mourner in Zion; not only for his own sins, but he weeps over those that may not drop a tear for themselves.

ץ Tzade. The Eighteenth Part.

V. 137—144. Righteous art thou, O Lord—Essentially so in himself, and in all his dispensations. And upright are thy judgments—The afflictive visitations he sends on his own people, or the vengeance he executes on his enemies, all which are done with the highest equity. The testimonies that thou hast commanded, are righteous, and very faithful—His precepts flowing from the rectitude of his nature, most fit for him to enjoin, for us to obey; and all his promises are Yea and Amen in Christ Jesus, sure, eternally sure, to every believer. My zeal hath consumed me—He could not be an unconcerned spectator, and calmly behold God's authority disregarded, his word despised. It is a good thing to be ever zealously affected in the cause of God, which ever includes the real good of mankind. Thy word is pure—Without any human mixture. And though a passage may be spoken of, in one sense very properly, as the words of the prophet or the apostle in whose writings it is found; yet all praise and glory being to be given to GOD alone, it appears worthy of their care who have occasion frequently to speak of the truths of revelation, that no part of those writings, which the ALMIGHTY BEING hath sealed with his own Divine authority, should ever be mentioned in such a manner, as to convey any lower notion of the dignity of the Scriptures: Probably it may have been an effect of the want of caution in this, that some have been led to pay less regard to some part of the sacred writings than they would have done, had they ever been taught to think holy men of old wrote the whole Scriptures as they were moved by the Holy Ghost; and that to look upon what was wrote by one prophet or apostle with any degree of preference to that which another was the penman of, was to connect the authority of the Scriptures with the personal characters of men; and the least degree in which they did this, was to fall into an inexpressibly higher mistake, than a person would do to speak of writings that stand upon the authority of the head of a state, by the name of the particular person who was but the penman, and wrote only what was commanded him by the authority to which he esteemed himself nothing more than a servant, and thought himself highly honoured in being employed barely as the messenger or writer of every sentence he spoke or wrote. God's word is a pure word—And to consider and speak of the whole system and of every part of it, as his revealed will, as his word, as the truth as it is in himself, is doubtless that which ought always to be done. Thy servant loveth it—Thy written word. It makes wise unto salvation, by presenting to our view the holy Jesus, who, by the everlasting Spirit, is made unto all that look for his appearing in them—righteousness, sanctification, present and everlasting redemption. I am small and despised—Little in my own eyes, and suffering much contempt and scorn from men: The portion of the faithful here below. Yet do not I forget thy precepts—Nothing moved him from his stedfast adherence to God's word and ways. Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness—God is the same in all his perfections for ever; and that righteousness, which is implanted in the souls of them that believe in his Son, is to everlasting ages the same. And thy law is the truth—Like himself, who is the God of truth, one jot or tittle of whose word can never fail, until the whole be fulfilled. Trouble—Outward afflictions and inward grief seemed to seize him as their prey. The disciple is not above his Lord; all that believe in him, walking in his steps, will know in some degree or other what it is to be baptized into his sufferings, and taste of his bitter cup; and thereby be prepared to receive the higher happiness at his right hand for evermore? Yet thy commandments are my delights—The end of them is charity, they lead to Christ in the believing mind, and to his presence in future glory. He adds his fervent prayer, Give me understanding and I shall live—They who know the Lord Jesus, and live to and for God here, will shortly live with him for ever in glory. For this is eternal life, to know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.

ק Koph. The Nineteenth Part.

V. 145—152. David's prayer was earnest, and the object was salvation from the guilt, the power, the punishment of sin, and from the oppression, malice, and snares of his enemies: We may be assured our prayers are heard and answered, when our hearts are quickned to greater diligence in walking before God. Early and late his mind was occupied in God's word; before the dawn of day he was upon his knees, and in the night awake upon his bed; his heart went up to God, and his word was the pleasing subject of his meditations, and the reviving hope of his soul. When we begin the morning with God, we shall be enabled to see him at our right hand all the day long. The more we read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest God's word, the more confirmed will be our faith, and the more enlivened our hope. Hear my voice according unto thy loving kindness—For not our deserts, but his grace can alone embolden our requests. O Lord, quicken—Revive my soul from its deadness and lifelessness. They draw nigh that follow after mischief—Their restless hearts are ever bent on evil, and they pressed hard upon him, ready to destroy him; restrained by no fear of God, they are far from thy law—Casting off all obedience to it, but however sore thrust at, David had a friend near, and able to help help him. Thou art near, O Lord—Ever at my right hand to save me. And all thy commandments are truth—The fulfilment of God's word his enemies sought in vain to defeat. But thy testimonies thou hast founded them for ever—They are of eternal, of perpetual obligation; one tittle of the promise can never fail until the whole be fulfilled. We may meet with much enmity in the world, and God may permit the danger to be very threatning, but it is to drive us closer to his blessed self, and engage our dependance more entirely upon him. In every trial he is near, and they who trust him, shall find his promises for ever sure: He never hath, never will, never can disappoint his people's hopes, for he cannot deny himself.

ר Resh. The Twentieth Part.

V. 153—160. Deliver me—For thou art able to save to the uttermost. Plead my cause—As the avenger of my wrongs, and the advocate of all that believe in thee. However for a while the enemies of Christ and his people may be allowed to prevail, he will arise shortly to plead his own cause. Salvation is far from the wicked—Continuing impenitent; Christ, respecting them, hath died in vain. For they seek not thy statutes—They neither know, nor desire to know them. They who find delight in God's word, may by that know they are blessed with his grace, who gave it; and they who lightly esteem his word may justly fear the gracious Giver of it is not precious to them. Great are thy tender mercies—In Christ Jesus pardon, grace, eternal life flowing from boundless love. Surely the more we contemplate the tender mercies of our God, the more shall we be overwhelmed with wonder, love, and praise. I beheld the transgressors—With pity, and was grieved for them—That they were so insensible of the miseries they were bringing upon themselves: for the dishonour done to God by their rebellious conduct. Because they kept not thy word—Thus did his heart bleed for human misery. Consider how I love thy precepts—How ardently, and therefore could not but grieve to see them violated. Quicken me, O Lord, according to thy loving kindness—That I may be enabled to prove my love to them, by the diligence used in observing them. The keeping God's commandments is the only solid proof of loving them.

ש Schin. The Twenty-first Part.

V. 161—168. Princes have persecuted me without a cause—Thus was the Son of David also persecuted by the Jewish rulers; and thus have his real followers been, and to this hour are, though they are the quiet of the land. But my heart standeth in awe of thy word—Unmoved with their persecution, and taught alone to fear him, who, when he hath killed, can cast both soul and body into hell. I rejoice in thy word, as one that findeth great spoil—In this field are hid the inestimable treasures of grace, pardon, peace, righteousness, salvation; and he who findeth these, hath indeed everlasting cause for joy. Seven times a day do I praise thee—Frequently, every day, not only on his knees, but at his meals, in his business. Because of thy righteous judgments—We never want matter for God's praises. He declares his detestation of lying or falsehood. There is but one thing we are permitted to hate, and that is sin, and there we need not fear excess. Thy law do I love—In opposition to all doctrines of lies, and practices of falsehood. Great peace have they which love thy law—Peace with God, peace in their conscience, peace which the world can neither give nor take away. And nothing shall offend them—Their heaviest afflictions shall work for good; the unfaithfulness of others shall not stagger them, and as they would not willingly offend themselves, neither are they ready to take offence against their brethren, or rigid censurers of their conduct. Lord, I have hoped for thy salvation—Temporal, spiritual, eternal; and this hope hath been, and continues to be, the anchor of my soul. And done thy commandments—With simplicity and godly sincerity. Hope in God's mercy and grace through the Mediator, strengthens the soul to run the way of his commandments. My soul hath kept thy testimonies—Embraced the doctrines, obeyed the precepts, and I love them exceedingly—Out of a pure heart, fervently. I have kept thy precepts and thy testimonies—And this I should not dare to repeat, if conscious of known guile in sentiment or practice. For all my ways are before thee—Thine eye is upon me, thou knowest the secrets of my heart, thou knowest that I love and delight in thee, and desire to please thee in all things.

ת Tau. The Twenty-second Part.

V. 169—176. Let my cry come near before thee, O Lord—A poor supplicant at the footstool of thy grace, unworthy of thy notice, yet perishing without thy kind regard. Give me understanding according to thy word—To know thy will, that I may obey it. Let my supplication come before thee: deliver me according to thy word—Of promise, which emboldened his prayer, and which he pleaded as the ground of his confidence in God. What we ask according to God's word, believing, we shall receive. (Mark xi. 24.) My lips shall utter thy praise—From a heart overflowing with gratitude. When thou hast taught me thy statutes—Which will, the more I know them, enlarge my soul with love, and fill my lips with thanksgiving. My tongue shall speak of thy word—Commending from experience its excellence to others, and eager to spread the knowledge of it on every side. For all thy commandments are righteousness—Perfectly righteous in their very nature. Let thine hand help me—For without thy help I cannot help myself, and all human help is vain. When we see and feel ourselves most weak and helpless, God's strength will be made perfect in our weakness. I have chosen thy precepts—As my heritage for ever, approve them as most excellent, and wish to conform to them without reserve. I have longed for thy salvation—To be saved from thy wrath due to my sins, and from my sinful nature, by grace received through faith in the promised Messiah. Let my soul live—My natural life be prolonged, and my spirit enlivened by divine grace to live to thy glory here, and hereafter to thy everlasting praise. Let thy judgments help me—Teach me matter for my songs, and direct me in the acceptable manner. Life is only truly desirable, that it may be employed in God's service. I have gone astray like a lost sheep—An animal the easiest to err, the last to find his way back again; such is the fit emblem of the sinner's folly, so easily turned aside, so unable to return to God from whom he hath departed. Seek thy servant—Restore me again to the joys of salvation, for I do not forget thy commandments—I have still respect to them, and desire thy grace to be enabled to walk in them as the only ways of pleasantness, and of peace.

PSAL. CXX.

V. 1—7. David was now an exile from his native country, fleeing from the malice of his enemies. He complains of his sad estate, which in prayer he spreads before God. In my distress—A stranger reproached, belied, betrayed. Deliver my soul, O Lord, from lying lips—Thus was the Lord Jesus persecuted, reviled, and false witnesses laid to his charge things that he knew not of. Let it not seem a strange thing if your characters, for his name's sake, suffer under the falsest and most cruel aspersions; but the day of detection for lying lips will come. He heard me—And disappointed the malice of his enemies; with him we may ever contentedly leave ourselves and all that concerns us. What shall be done unto thee, thou false tongue—Did sinners for a moment consider the end of their ways, terrors would take hold of them. Sharp arrows—Everlasting burnings are destined for all who love or make a lie. (Rev. xxii. 15.) Wo is me that I dwell in the tents of Kedar—Among rude and idolatrous nations. My soul hath long dwelt with him that hateth peace—Enemies to the God of peace, and to his religion, the only true path of peace. I am for peace—A man of peace, pursuing it by every means, ready to bear and forbear any thing for the sake of it. But when I speak, they are for war—Reject every kind overture, and implacable in their malice. Every believer in Jesus is a man of peace; envy, dispute, and strife, are all from hell. Though the one continues inveterate, that must not restrain the other from the exercise of Divine charity.

PSAL. CXXI.

This psalm directs and encourageth us to repose ourselves and our confidence in God, and by faith to put ourselves under his protection, and commit ourselves to his care.

V. 1—8. Above the hills—The place of God's tabernacle, or to the heavenly hills, the place where his honour dwelleth. From whence cometh my help; my help cometh from the Lord—His grace, my inward support, and his power will preserve me. God is my sure refuge, with God nothing is impossible. He will not suffer thy foot to be moved—Though earth, hell, and sin assail the believer's soul, God's grace is sufficient to keep our souls. Behold, he that keepeth Israel, his redeemed people, shall neither slumber nor sleep—But ever attentive to their concerns, and careful for their good, shall preserve them from the power of evil. The Lord is thy keeper—The Lord Jesus, whose infinite love engages him to watch with tenderest care over all that look to him, and his power Almighty enables him to lead and guide them safe to his eternal kingdom. The Lord is thy shade—As the thick cloud which shelters from the scorching beams of day, so God will cover them with his wings from danger, and refresh them, as under the shadow of a great rock in a weary land, and ever near to flee unto, even upon thy right hand—A very present help in trouble. Thus hid in God, the sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night—The fiercest blasts of persecution shall not scorch us up, as the seed on the rock, nor the cold and nipping frosts, or inclement dews of temptation blast, or cause us to wither. The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil—And satan shall not be able finally to prevail against thee. He shall preserve thy soul—Thy life from death; or if he gives the enemy power over the body, the soul shall be precious in his sight, and the glorious crown shall amply recompence all the pains this flesh can suffer. The Lord shall preserve thee from this time for evermore—Our guard through life, our guide to death, in death our stay, and after death our everlasting portion.

2 If it had not been the Lord who was on our side, when men rose up against us:

P S A L. CXXII.

V. 1—5. The house of the Lord—The earthly sanctuary, typical of the church of God. Our feet shall stand within thy gates—And find there a happy rest after our travels; but how much more delightful when we shall enter the streets of the new Jerusalem, and find the eternal rest which there remaineth for the people of God. Jerusalem is builded compact together—By art and nature strongly defended. Thus is the church of God built on the rock of ages, the members closely united in love, and protected by the arms of omnipotence. Whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord—Obedient to his commands, and thrice a year appearing before him at the temple. To the testimony of Israel—To the ark, the symbol of the divine presence, to consult his mind and will, and to give thanks unto the name of the Lord—Offering their sacrifices and praises before him. For there are set thrones of judgment—The courts of Judicature, and the royal residence of Israel's kings, the thrones of the house of David—In the gospel-church, Jesus places his word, and promises his spirit, as the ark of the testimony; there he erects his throne also, reigning as king in the hearts of all that believe in him.

V. 6—9. David calls upon every faithful Israelite, To pray for the peace of Jerusalem—For the prosperity of all who dwelt therein, and for all that resorted thither. We are bound to pray for our place and nation, for in the peace thereof we shall have peace. The prosperity and peace of all that fear God will be the first concern and prayer of all that believe in the churches living head. They will ever by their prayers and by their labours, endeavour to imitate the example given them by the Prince of Peace, in promoting the peace and welfare of all mankind. They shall prosper that love thee—Their souls shall be refreshed with the graces they beg for others, and spiritually they shall increase with the increase of God. Peace be within thy walls—The peace of God, mutual peace and love, which no dispute, discord, or divisions may ever interrupt: And prosperity within thy palaces—For it will then go well with the church of God, when they, who are most exalted, abound in grace, and in consequence of doing so, in every good word and work. My brethren—The worshippers of God by faith in the Redeemer, high or low, rich or poor; David counted them as brethren, delighted in their company, and sought their happiness. Because—God's glory was his first pursuit, the enlargement of his church his great desire, and therefore he could not but pray for it, and labour to promote it.

P S A L. CXXIII.

V. 1—4. Unto thee that dwellest in the heavens—The place of his glorious abode, whither our prayer must be directed, and where with the eye of faith we must behold him, ready to hear and answer us. Until that he have mercy upon us—Which he will shew to all those who wait on him as their only refuge. Have mercy upon us, O Lord—On this alone we must found our hope, and it is repeated to shew the fervent importunity of the spirit of prayer. For we are exceedingly filled with contempt—The common lot of all that will live godly in Christ Jesus. Those that are at ease—Live careless and secure about futurity. How great will that change be when the despised followers of Jesus shall be exalted to the throne of glory, and proud sensualists covered with everlasting shame and contempt.

P S A L. CXXIV.

V. 1—8. The greater the danger is to which we are exposed, the greater doth the power and grace of God appear in our rescue, and the more are we indebted to him in love and praise. Then—In that day of trial. If it had not been the Lord, who was on our side—For our strength and friend, faithful to stand by us. The Lord hath not given us as a prey—Power and policy in vain unite to destroy the soul which God will save. Our help is in the name of the Lord—We have no other able or willing to save us, but he who made heaven and earth, and he can save to the uttermost, and preserve the work of his own hands.

V. 1—6. Great was the joy when, looſed from the Babyloniſh yoke, the captive Jews returned to Zion; greater will it be, when from their preſent diſperſion they ſhall turn unto the Lord; but greateſt will be the joy of God's Iſrael, when, by the redemption of Jeſus finally and eternally delivered from the bondage of corruption and the grave, they ſhall meet at the heavenly hill, and all become one fold, under one ſhepherd. The pleaſing ſurprize which ſeized them, on hearing liberty proclaimed by Cyrus, the inſtrument God employed to execute his purpoſes, ſcarce could they believe the glad tidings true; and like men awaking from ſome pleaſing dream, heſitated whether it were fancy or reality; but ſoon convinced that God had remembered them, and turned their captivity, with ſongs of exultation they hailed the happy day. Thus when the awakened conſcience, that poring over its guilt and miſery hath been ready to ſink into deſpair, hears the good news of pardon, grace, and glory for the vileſt of ſinners, ſcarce can the heart receive the meſſage, it appears ſo much too great and good to be true, till, by faith, the ſoul triumphs in God our Saviour, and is filled with joy and peace in believing.

V. 1—5. The leſs we depend on our own deſigns, or lean to our own underſtanding, and the more we look up to God, and ſeek help and direction from him, the ſurer will be the proſperity of every work of our hands. And if in temporals, much more in ſpirituals are we bound to depend upon him; the wiſeſt and the beſt of men cannot ſquare one of the living ſtones to raiſe the church of God, unleſs his power and grace work effectually with them. If God be not regarded, he will diſappoint our hopes, and mar our labours. But where induſtry is employed in dependance upon him, ſo he giveth his beloved ſleep, no cares diſturb his repoſe, he ſleeps in peace, in the arms of the divine love, and riſes refreſhed and happy, to enjoy new mercies with the returning day.

XXVIII. Day. Morning Prayer.

¶ A song of degrees.

1004.

LORD, remember David, and all his afflictions:

a Psa. 65. 1 b Gen. 49. 24

2 How he sware unto the Lord, a and vowed unto b the mighty God of Jacob:

3 Surely I will not come into the tabernacle of my house, nor go up into my bed:

P S A L. CXXVIII.

V. 1—6. We have here the truly blessed character. He that feareth the Lord, and walketh in his ways, making the will of God the rule of duty, desiring to be obedient in all things, and fearing nothing so much as to offend him.

P S A L. CXXIX.

V. 2. They have not prevailed against me—Whatever persecutions the church hath suffered, it hath risen fairer for the floods which passed over it; and every faithful soul, though sore troubled and tempted, by experience is enabled to say, they have not prevailed against me.

V. 4. He hath cut asunder the cords of the wicked—Their treacherous devices.

P S A L. CXXX.

V. 1—8. This is reckoned among the seven penitential psalms, and it is an expressive description of the humbled sinner's return to God. Who shall stand—Thus desperate is the case of every sinner, and there is no difference; we are all in the same condemnation, unable either to bear the scrutiny of his law, or to endure the dreadful sentence of his judgment. But there is forgiveness with thee—God hath himself contrived and accomplished that method of saving sinners, in which, without impeachment of his justice, he might, to the uttermost, exercise his mercy: through the propitiation of Jesus, a ransom is found, and for his sake God will be merciful to our unrighteousness. That thou mayest be feared—Nothing steels the heart against God like despair; men then rush into sin, as the horse into the battle, regardless of the event; but a sense of his forgiving love engages the heart to fear the Lord, and bids us never again wilfully transgress against a God so gracious. I wait for the Lord—Unworthy of notice, yet hoping for his kind regard with heart-felt desires. And in his word do I hope—Emboldened by his promises. For with the Lord there is mercy—For every repenting sinner through Jesus Christ. And with him there is plenteous redemption—He being the author of salvation to all that obey him.

P S A L. CXXXI.

V. 1—3. Haughty—Naturally it is so in every man, but by Divine grace he had been brought to entertain humble apprehensions of himself. Nor mine eyes lofty—Looking down upon inferiors with disdain, or looking up to superiors with envy. Neither do I exercise myself in great matters—No ambitious designs filled his mind, nor did he affect to be wise above what is written, desiring to pry into the secrets of providence and grace, and no more sought the honours, wealth, and greatness of the world, than a child

4 I will [c] not give sleep to mine eyes, or slumber to mine eye-lids,

5 Until I find out a place for the Lord, ‡ an habitation for the mighty God of Jacob.

6 Lo, we heard of it [d] at Ephratah: [e] we found it [f] in the fields of the wood.

7 We will go into his tabernacles: [g] we will worship at his foot-stool.

8 [h] Arise, O Lord, into thy rest: thou, and [i] the ark of thy strength.

9 Let thy priests [k] be clothed with righteousness: and let thy saints shout for joy.

10 For thy servant David's sake, turn not away the face of thine anointed.

11 [l] The Lord hath sworn in truth unto David, he will not turn from it, [m] Of the fruit of ‖ thy body will I set upon thy throne.

12 If thy children will keep my covenant and my testimony, that I shall teach them; their children also shall sit upon thy throne for evermore.

13 [n] For the Lord hath chosen Zion: he hath desired it for his habitation.

14 [o] This is my rest for ever: here will I dwell, for I have desired it.

15 [p] I will * abundantly bless her provision: I will satisfy her poor with bread.

16 [q] I will also clothe her priests with salvation: [r] and her saints shall shout aloud for joy.

17 [s] There will I make the horn of David to bud: [t] I have ordained a † lamp for mine anointed.

18 His enemies will I clothe with shame: but upon himself shall his crown flourish.

PSAL. CXXXII.

V. 1—10. Lord—This may be regarded as the believer's prayer, who is anointed with an unction from the holy One; and for Jesus' sake, expects and prays for the light of God's countenance.

V. 11—18. Of the fruit of thy body—Not only Solomon, but the Lord Jesus, whose kingdom should be an everlasting kingdom. The condition on which David's posterity shall possess the throne of Israel, is their fidelity: Whilst they continue true to God he will shew them the faithfulness of his promise. Upon himself shall his crown flourish—All which, in the most eminent sense, is true, and applicable to that Son of David, who should be the horn of salvation to his people. (Luke i. 69.)

PSAL. CXXXIII.

V. 1—3. Brethren to dwell together in unity—For all God's children have one father, one inheritance, one interest, one pursuit, one home, and therefore should have one heart and one mind, united in the same worship, affectionate in their regards, bearing and forbearing, forgiving and forgetting, and only jealous who shall shew the most abundant meekness, charity, and kindness to each other. How good—God approves and delights in it. And how pleasant it is—Its own reward. It is like the precious ointment—Which was

Such an unction from the Holy One have they who have this brotherly love ſhed abroad in their hearts, without it all our doings in God's ſight are nothing worth, (1 Cor. xiii. 1, 2.) wherever this ſpirit dwells, there God's bleſſing abides. For there the Lord commanded the bleſſing—Every bleſſing the ſoul can need, and which at his command deſcends. Even life for evermore—That life of love which is the earneſt and the foretaſte of eternal bleſſedneſs.

PSAL. CXXXIV.

V. 1—3. The Lord out of Zion ſhall bleſs thee, returning in bleſſings upon themſelves the praiſes they offered up to him.

PSAL. CXXXV.

V. 1—4. He is good—In himſelf and to all his creatures, and all that know him will praiſe him for the riches of his grace manifeſted to their ſouls. It is pleaſant—No pleaſure can equal a ſenſe of the Divine love upon the ſoul, expreſſing itſelf in grateful acknowledgments to him who hath ſhed it abroad in our hearts. The Lord hath choſen Iſrael—All that believe in him, love him and obey him, are his choſen, and in whom he delights.

V. 5—14. I know that he is great—In his perfections, and all the wonders of his power, manifeſted in the works of creation and providence; but above all in the work of redemption, in this there is neither meaſure nor end of his greatneſs, it ſurpaſſes all created underſtanding. Our Lord is above all gods—Whether the idols of the heathen, the kings of the earth, or the mighty angels, none can compare with him, less than nothing and vanity before him; his power is universal, what he wills he doth in heaven or earth. For the Lord will judge his people—He will try them, rule over them, preserve, protect them, and will repent—If he chastises them for a while, he will change his method of procedure with them, and turn their mourning into joy.

V. 15—21. The psalmist here pours contempt on idols. He encourages the house of Israel to praise and trust in the living and true God, who deserved their highest thanksgivings, and was able to save them to the uttermost.

PSAL. CXXXVI.

V. 1—9. The scope of this psalm is the same with that of the foregoing, but there is something very singular in the composure of it; for the latter half of each verse is the same repeated throughout the psalm, for his mercy endureth for ever, and yet no vain repetition; all we enjoy in time, and hope for in eternity, flowing purely from this inexhausted source. How signally God owned the singing of this psalm we see, (2 Chron. v. 13.) and it should encourage us to repeat the praises of his everlasting mercy. We must praise God, as great and good in himself, as the creator of the world, as Israel's God and Saviour, as our Redeemer, as the great Benefactor of the whole creation, and God over all, blessed for evermore. His mercy endureth for ever—To all that hope in his salvation, truly fearing him. He alone doth great wonders—As in his works of creation, providence, and grace abundantly appears, and therefore claims from all continual adoration, love, and praise.

V. 21. And gave their land for an heritage—A better land is prepared for all that believe in him, love him, and obey him; where to eternity they will acknowledge that his mercy endureth for ever.

V. 23—26. The more we reflect, the more cause we shall find to praise God's everlasting mercy. He remembered us in our low estate—When sunk under guilt, corruption, misery, and ready to sink into the belly of hell, he left the glory which he had with the Father before the world began, to come and bear the punishment due to our offences from infinite justice, that he might raise us from our state of sin and death, and save us with an everlasting salvation. He giveth food to all flesh—The meanest partake of his care in common with the greatest of his creatures; he openeth his hand, and they are filled with good; for his mercy is over all his works. For all this are we most deeply obliged to give thanks unto the God of heaven; all other creatures on earth want the power to speak his praise; from man alone that tribute is expected, as the tongue of this lower world, and as the peculiar object of that mercy which endureth for ever.

PSALM CXXXVII.

V. 1—6. By the waters of Babylon—Far from the gates of Zion, under a heavy yoke, employed in servile labours near these streams. We sat down, we wept, when we remembered thee, O Zion—Her desolations pierced their hearts with anguish, whilst deep reflection on their sins, the cause of all, called forth bitter sorrows. And what will the bitterness of their sorrow be, who by sin finally fall into slavery to satan, to be insulted and tormented by him for ever?

PSALM CXXXVIII.

V. 1—5. He resolves to praise God, before the Gods, in the presence of kings or magistrates, with boldness, not ashamed to glory in his dependance upon God. I will worship towards thy holy temple—To the place of the ark did they always direct their faces, when assembled in the courts of the sanctuary, or worshipping in private. For the only prayers or praises which ascend with acceptance, are those which are offered with our eyes to him, who is the true tabernacle Jesus Christ, by whom we have access unto God. For thy loving kindness—Manifested in all the temporal and spiritual blessings he bestowed. And for thy truth—Having experienced thy faithfulness. For thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name—This may refer to Christ, the essential word, who is exalted above every name, and in whom God's name is magnified. In the day when I cried, thou answeredst me—Attentive to my prayer, and giving all I asked. And strengthenedst me with strength in my soul—That he was enabled to stand under the pressures of affliction and temptation, and to overcome all his enemies; for which inestimable mercies he owed the grateful return of praise.

V. 6—8. Though the Lord be high—In glory, exalted above all blessing and praise. Yet hath he respect unto the lowly—Vile in their own eyes, conscious of their sin, weakness, and wretchedness, and casting themselves wholly on the riches of God's grace in the Redeemer; these God regards with love, and delights to bless: But the proud—Who are puffed up with worldly advantages, or vain of their attainments in wisdom, or highly elated with the conceit of their own righteousness; such God knoweth afar off—Sees their inmost

V. 1—6. O Lord, thou hast known me—Every step and motion thou seest, and my rising thoughts are understood by thee, and every word in my tongue, whether uttered, or only formed ready for speech. Such knowledge is too wonderful for me—We cannot know ourselves in any measure as God doth. Since God sees our very thoughts, they should be under restraint; since God hears, not an idle word should drop from our tongues; since God is with us in company, or alone, on our beds, at our tables, in our business, and his eye on all our works and ways, how careful, how circumspect should we be who are to give an account of ourselves to him.

V. 7—16. Nothing can be conceived more sublime and affecting, than the description here given of God's universal presence. There is no escaping his eye by flight, or concealment by darkness. Should we attempt by flight to elude his search, whither shall we go?

V. 17—23. How precious are thy thoughts unto me, O God—Thoughts of mercy, peace, and grace, which David with great delight meditated upon. How great is the sum of them—So innumerable, that the sand of the sea might be easier counted, and so continual, that every morning increased the sum. When I awake, I am still with thee—Enjoy thy constant protection, and am happy in a sense of thy presence. Am not I grieved with those that rise up against thee—Grieved at the dishonour brought on God by their rebellion, grieved at the misery which they bring on themselves by their ſins. I hate them—Sincerely deteſt their evil ways. I count them mine enemies—They muſt be enemies to me, becauſe enemies to thee. The ways of ſinners we may hate, whilſt we have the trueſt love and pity to their ſouls. They who hate God, muſt hate his image, wherever it appears. Search, me, O God—For ſincerity ſtarts not at inquiry. Try me—For I deſire to conceal nothing from thee. And ſee if there be any wicked way in me—I wiſh allowedly to be found in none, but who can underſtand his errors? Diſcover it to me if I err, and ſhew me the evil, that it may be lamented and renounced. And lead me in the way everlaſting—Lead me in the paths of holineſs, to the kingdom of everlaſting glory; guided by thy word, upheld by thy ſpirit, and enabled to perſevere faithfully unto the end.

P S A L. CXL.

V. 1—7. The way to glory lies through much tribulation; thus David came to the throne of Iſrael, and we may expect to meet with our portion of temptation, to ſuffer for Chriſt, before we reign with him. In every believer's warfare, his recourſe is by prayer to God, for ſtrengthening and upholding grace, and by grace received through faith he is preſerved in every dangerous conflict; and though his ſpiritual foes thruſt ſore at him, that he ſhould fall, his head is covered, his ſoul preſerved, and all his foes at laſt ſhall be made his footſtool.

V. 8—13. However prevalent for a time the wicked may ſeem, their triumphing is but for a moment. I know that the Lord will maintain the cauſe of the afflicted—He had experienced this himſelf, and was ſure it would be ſtill the caſe, reſpecting his ſuffering ſervants, whoſe innocence he would vindicate, and whoſe quarrel he would eſpouſe. And the right of the poor—Becauſe ſuch are liable to be oppreſſed; but God is the poor man's friend, to do him that juſtice, which on earth may be denied him. Surely the righteous ſhall give thanks unto thy name—Acknowledging with gratitude his kind interpoſition on their behalf. And the upright ſhall dwell in thy preſence—As children under their father's care, protected and preſerved; as ſervants in their maſter's houſe, to wait his orders; or as ſaints around his throne in glory, to follow him with their everlaſting praiſes.

P S A L. CXLI.

V. 1—4. Make haſte unto me—As one ready to be overwhelmed, unleſs God appeared for his ſalvation. They who have a lively ſenſe of their wants and danger, will be importunate in their ſupplications. Let my prayer be as the evening ſacrifice—Which being offered on God's altar, were accepted before him. The incenſe of prayer muſt thus be offered on Chriſt our altar; and when, with our hands lifted up, our heart aſcends in a flame of holy love, then is it a ſacrifice of a ſweet ſmell, acceptable and well-pleaſing to God. Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth in prayer—That I may not unadviſedly utter what my heart doth not feel. In trials, that I may not drop a word of murmuring, complaint, or impatience; among men—That I may neither ſpeak falſely, fooliſhly, or paſſionately. Keep the door of my lips—Which need continually a divine reſtraint, and without it can never be effectually bridled.

XXX. Day.

Incline not my heart to any evil thing—Not that God ever tempts men to ſin, or inclines them to evil; but only leaves them to their own hearts, naturally inclined to evil; therefore we have need of his preventing and reſtraining grace to keep us, that we practiſe not wicked works with men that work iniquity—Who make it their buſineſs and delight to ſin, and draw in others; and unleſs the Lord preſerve us, we are in danger of falling into their ſnares. Let me not eat of their dainties—Feaſting at their tables, or partaking with them in their ſins.

V. 5—10. Though David heartily prays againſt the malignity of his enemies, yet he earneſtly deſires the rebukes of the faithful. Let the righteous ſmite me, it ſhall be a kindneſs—I ſhall eſteem it the beſt proof of real friendſhip. And let him reprove me, it ſhall be an excellent oil, which ſhall not break my head—But ſerve to heal the wounds of ſin; and, far from reſenting the correction, it would engage his affections and prayers in their behalf. For yet my prayer alſo ſhall be in their calamities—That God, in return for their kindneſs to him, may deliver them from their troubles. Kind reproof is the office of real friendſhip. To love reproof, and to be thankful for it, is among the ſureſt ſymptoms of a gracious ſpirit. That reproof will be moſt effectual, which comes from thoſe whoſe unſuſpected piety gives weight to their words, and whoſe tender manner of applying it, makes it more penetrating. They who pray to be right, and yet are diſpleaſed to be informed of what is wrong, may have reaſon to fear they do not ſincerely deſire what they pray for. Mine eyes are unto thee, O God the Lord—The mighty Saviour and hope of my ſoul. In thee is my truſt—In thee alone. Leave not my ſoul deſtitute—Forſaken of thee I muſt needs periſh. But keep me from the ſnare which they have laid for me—Though never ſo craftily concealed, preſerve me from the danger. Whilſt our eye is to God, our feet ſhall not ſlip. They whoſe minds are ſtayed upon him will be preſerved in perfect peace, becauſe they truſt in him.

PSAL. CXLII.

V. 1—7. I cried unto the Lord with my voice, and ſhewed him all my trouble—It was enough to ſpread it before the Lord, whoſe tender mercies knew how to pity him, and his power to relieve him. When my ſpirit was overwhelmed within me, then thou kneweſt my path—When reduced to the deepeſt diſtreſs, I ſtill fled to no wrong methods to extricate myſelf. God was his refuge, and portion—To him he directed his prayer, and if God be our refuge, we need fear no danger; if he be our portion, we need wiſh for nothing more in the land of the living.

PSAL. CXLIII.

V. 1—6. When we are in trouble, God permits us to pour our ſorrows into his boſom. The pſalmiſt pleads, as the ground of his hope, God's faithfulneſs to his promiſes. If we hope for God's acceptance of us, it muſt be not for any thing in us, but purely of grace for his dear Son's ſake, according to the promiſes of his word. In thy ſight ſhall no man living be juſtified—The moſt righteous man cannot bear the ſeverity of God's juſtice. They who beſt know their own hearts, will ever be the firſt to condemn themſelves, and cry for mercy at God's hand. They who feel their guilt, and fly to Jeſus Chriſt, ſhall be juſtified from all things. He complains of his afflicted ſtate. Perſecuted by his bitter foe; brought to the gates of the grave; compelled to hide himſelf in ſolitary caves, as if driven from the light, and already a companion of the dead, his ſpirit melancholy as his circumſtances; and his heart within him deſolate, dejected, and ready to ſink into deſpair. When our own diſtreſs is greateſt, God's power and grace ſhall be the more magnified in our deliverance. I remember the days of old—The wonders God had wrought for his church and people, and for himſelf alſo, in former days. My ſoul thirſteth after thee—They who are athirſt for God, his love, and favour, ſhall never be ſent from a throne of grace empty away.

V. 7—12. My ſpirit faileth—Swooning with the weight of his affliction, or with the sense of his sins. Hide not thy face from me—For the sense of God's displeasure to a soul that hath tasted that the Lord is gracious, is more bitter than death, and the hidings of his countenance the sorest affliction. Cause me to hear thy loving kindness—God hath kindness still in store for all that hope in his mercy. For in thee do I trust—And they who do so, can never perish. Teach me to do thy will—For we have neither understanding to know what it is, nor ability to follow it, till God instruct and guide us. For thou art my God—I give myself up to thee as my God and Redeemer. Thy spirit is good—It is not only the essential perfection of this Spirit to be good, but his office it is to sanctify our souls, and lead us in the right way, that we may come through the paths of holiness to the land of eternal purity and blessedness; and hitherto every gracious soul longs to come. Quicken me, O Lord—From my low and dejected state, and revive my fainting soul, for thy name's sake—For the glory of thy grace and faithfulness. For thy righteousness sake bring my soul out of trouble—Not only deliver my body from death, but my spirit from the temptations which beset my soul.

And they who look to God in Christ Jesus, shall have their passions as much under the dominion of his grace, as David had his kingdom subdued by the power of God. Lord, what is man—So low in his original, and now become so vile by sin, that thou takest knowledge of him? or the son of man, that thou makest account of him—Shewing such poor and wretched creatures such kindness and regard; especially sending his Son to be incarnate to redeem them. Man is like to vanity—An empty nothing, or a vapour. His days are as a shadow that passeth away—So swift, so transitory. O that men were wise, that they pondered these things, that they considered their latter end. If their moment be so short, and eternity depends on it, how diligently should they redeem each hour. There is a terrible day approaching, when vengeance will overtake the enemies of God. The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of the deepest waters of affliction; and they who call upon him will find him near to save them. Falsehood and lies may for a moment prosper, but in the end will issue in men's everlasting confusion.

V. 9—15. There be no complaining in our streets—They who now possess a conscious sense of the love of God their Saviour to them, have no cause to complain at any thing, so long as they remain faithful and are obedient to his grace. To them it is known that he doth all things well. They dare not complain. It would dishonour Him whom they live to please, and in whose will they delight. All that earth can give is but shadow, without God. He alone can make happy, and they who have God for their Lord, must needs be happy; for all things are theirs, and to eternity his unchangeable regard secures their unchangeable blessedness.

PSAL. CXLV.

V. 1—9. I will extol thee, my God, O King—The glorious Jehovah, the King Messiah. Every day—His tongue should not be silent; and not only through the years of time, but to the ages of eternity, he hoped to be engaged in this blessed employment. Great is the Lord—In all his divine perfections. And greatly to be praised—Though our highest expressions fall infinitely short of his greatness which is unsearchable, transcendently glorious is the honour of his majesty, whether considered as of the Father's glory; or as mediator exalted to be the head over all things, angels, principalities, and powers being made subject unto him. Gracious—To pardon all our sins. Full of compassion—To pity the ignorant and the tempted. Slow to anger—Notwithstanding manifold provocations. And of great mercy—Towards every soul that flies to him for succour. Good to all—Mankind, giving a measure of his grace to every man to enable him to deny all ungodliness, and to live soberly and righteously in this present world, looking unto Jesus the author and the finisher of his faith, till by grace he is transformed by the renewing of his mind, and made meet for endless glory. And in the way to this, God is good to all—In the things of time, making all things work together for the good of all that fear him, that hope in his mercy and that love him. His tender mercies over all his works—He loveth all that he hath made, and he willeth not the death of a sinner, but that all should come to the knowledge of him and be saved.

V. 10—21. His mighty acts—The miracles he hath wrought of old, and the wonders of his grace, converting the souls of sinful men, and enabling them to do his will on earth as it is done in heaven. On him the eyes of all wait, and all their wants, from the least to the greatest, are liberally supplied. And with especial care he watches over all that live in his fear, upholding those who fall into affliction or temptation, and raising up those that be bowed down under a sense of sin and groaning under their sorrows; near to all that call upon him in truth, really feeling his burdens, and sighing to be relieved; and those who fear and love him, have every desire granted that faith can ask, whether respecting the blessings of grace or glory, of time or eternity. But all the wicked will he destroy—With everlasting destruction. In all which the Lord is righteous in all his ways—And he will appear to be so at the last day, when all will be obliged to own the equity of his procedure, his saints adore him, and sinners be speechless before him.

PSAL. CXLVI.

V. 1—4. David could call God my God; and could not therefore but add, I will praise him whilst I have any being—Sensible of the vanity of all besides to save from sin and death, and from the wrath to come, and the insignificance of every creature, he bids us put no trust in any son of man, not even in the mightiest princes. Be they never so able to help us, never so willing, the greatest are dying worms, returning to the dust. Hope in man is delusory; hope in God knows no disappointment. Though in man there is no help, there is a Son of Man mighty to ſave; and bleſſed are they that put their truſt in him.

V. 5—10. What is the true happineſs of man? The queſtion is here reſolved. Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help—In all his trials, temptations, and afflictions. Whoſe hope is in the Lord his God—The never-failing refuge of all who fly to him for ſuccour; their Saviour in every diſtreſs, and to the uttermoſt will never leave nor forſake them. He keepeth truth for ever—He is the faithful and true witneſs; and truth itſelf muſt fail, before his word of promiſe can diſappoint us. He executeth judgment for the oppreſſed—Vindicates their injured innocence. He giveth food to the hungry—Not only the bread of earth to nouriſh their bodies, but himſelf, the bread of life, which cometh down from heaven, to nouriſh the immortal ſoul. The diſtreſſed have ever found him their ready friend. He looſes the priſoners, bound of ſatan with diſeaſe, or by death incloſed in their graves. He opens the eyes of the blind, and raiſes up thoſe that are bowed down with infirmity. Abundant inſtances of which appeared in the days of his fleſh. (Luke xiii. 11, 12. Matth. xi. 5. John ix. 32.) But greater works than theſe he doth. The priſoners of ſin are looſed by the preaching of his goſpel, applied by his grace, and the power of ſatan broken. The eyes of our mind, blinded by corruption, receive divine illumination; and the impotent faculties of our ſouls are delivered from the burden of ſin, of ſorrow, and are looſed by him; and with the diſcoveries of his love, the heads bowed down under a ſenſe of guilt, are lifted up in praiſe and joy. His love is upon the righteous, completely ſuch by virtue of their union with him, and as ſuch the objects of his high regard; and by his Spirit alſo renewed, and enabled to walk before him and pleaſe him. The deſtitute are relieved by him. The ſtrangers, the fatherleſs and widow, whoſe ſituation lays them open to oppreſſion, he preſerves. The ſtrangers of the Gentiles, the ſpiritually deſtitute, have found him a merciful God. The wicked will be deſtroyed by him. Their way he turneth upſide down—He will blaſt their deſigns, and break their power; and, if not prevented by a timely and penitent return to him, will turn them into hell, to receive the eternal puniſhment of their ſins. The kingdom of Chriſt ſhall endure for ever. He ſhall reign, even thy God, unto all generations—And ſuch reviving hope cannot but make their ſouls happy who know and love him, and engage their everlaſting praiſes.

P S A L. CXLVII.

V. 1—11. The Lord is our God; we have an intereſt in his favour: praiſe him, for it is good to do ſo, our bounden duty, and higheſt intereſt. It is pleaſant—Is its own reward. It is comely—Pleaſing to God, and moſt becoming us as his creatures. The Lord builds up Jeruſalem—Spiritually, he buildeth up and prepares the heavenly Jeruſalem for their abode, who by ſin had made themſelves out-caſts; and whom the world, on their returning to God, reject as the off-ſcouring of all things. He healeth the broken in heart—Whoſe ſouls by ſin were ſore troubled, and, ſhocked at the remembrance of paſt tranſgreſſions, were ready to lie down in deſpair, and periſh. Theſe he healeth, pouring in the oil of his blood, that cleanſeth from all ſin, and with the tender hand of his grace bindeth up their wounds, ſpeaking peace to their conſciences, and filling them with his divine conſolations. He calleth them all by their names—Appoints them their place, and they as ſervants are obedient to his orders. His ſervants are the ſtars in his right hand; he knoweth them, and in his book of life their names are written. The Lord liſteth up the meek—Who in their own eyes are little, and patiently endure the afflictions of providence, or the provocations of men. Theſe he comforts, and will exalt to the inheritance among the ſaints in light; but he caſteth the wicked down to the ground—With ſtrokes of heavy judgment and untimely death, and at laſt will caſt them down into everlaſting deſtruction. God delights not in the ſtrength of the horſe, or in any man's legs—The fineſt cavalry, or the firmeſt infantry, are vain things to ſave a man without God's bleſſing. But the Lord taketh pleaſure in them that fear him, and in thoſe that hope for his mercy—Filial fear and holy hope being the diſtinguiſhing characters of all that believe, and that mercy, on which in Chriſt they alone depend, ſhall never fail them.

prosperity under the divine protection. He hath strengthened the bars of thy gates—His salvation, his power, and faithfulness, stronger than walls and bulwarks, surround his people. He hath blessed thy children within thee—The spiritual seed of the church, enriched with all the spiritual blessings of grace freely given through Christ Jesus. He maketh peace in thy borders—Quieting all his Zion's enemies without, and bestowing abundance of peace within; spiritual peace in their souls, and great union and harmony among the faithful. And filleth thee with the finest of the wheat—All needful temporal good. He sendeth forth his commandment—And his will all things obey but sinful man, and who in disobeying the good and acceptable will of God, sins against that grace which was given him to profit withal, and which he wilfully resisted when he offended against the will of his Creator and Redeemer. His word runneth very swiftly—He speaks, and it is done. He giveth snow like wool—For whiteness, and conveys warmth to the earth on which it falls. He scattereth his hoar frost like ashes—The dew of night congealing, and covering, as ashes spread abroad, the plants and trees. He casteth forth his ice like morsels—In hail-stones. Who can stand before his cold—The intenseness of which would instantly destroy us, if God was pleased to expose us to its extremity. He sendeth out his word, and melteth them—Dissolving the ice and snow, and making the verdure and flowers of spring succeed to the cold and dreary scenes of winter. Like the frozen earth is the sinner's heart, when left of God, and so it continues till again his holy spirit breathes upon it; then softened into deep contrition, the penitential tears begin to flow, and soon the whole soul puts on a new aspect, filled with the blossoms of grace, and fruits of righteousness, which are, through Jesus Christ, to the praise and glory of God. He sheweth his word unto Israel—Israel was peculiarly distinguished by the oracles of God committed to them. He hath not dealt so with any nation—Therefore they of all others were bound to fear him, to believe in him, and obey him. The case is our own: This happy land enjoys the gospel-word to a degree which there is reason to believe no other nation does.

PSAL. CXLVIII.

V. 1—6. We in nothing more resemble angels, than when we sing the praises of our God. Praise him, ye heavens of heavens—The starry firmament, and all within that bright canopy, the radiant scene, where angels and the spirits of the just made perfect have their blest abode. And ye waters all must praise the name of the Lord—For by his power they were made, and by him they are upheld.

V. 7—14. From the celestial world the psalmist descends to this terrestrial globe, from which a tribute of praise should be offered by man for every creature, and for all God's works. Fire, hail, snow, vapour, stormy winds, all fulfil his word—Go forth, and are stayed at his command. High and low, rich and poor, young and old, must unite their praises. None so great as to be excused, none so low as to be despised. His name only is excellent—None like him, none to compare with. His glory is above the earth and heaven—Exalted far above all blessing and praise, none being able to express their endless obligations to him who made them. From his Israel he hath especial demands of gratitude. They are his people, exalted to the highest state of dignity, even to be called saints, and brought near unto him, in a covenant of grace through the Redeemer; admitted into a state of communion with him, and enjoying the distinguishing tokens of his favour; and therefore most justly doth he deserve to be their praise, the great and glorious object of it in time and in eternity.

PSAL. CXLIX.

V. 1—5. Let Israel rejoice in him that made him—The eternal Three, whose work it is not only to make the persons of men, but to create in righteousness and true holiness the spiritual Israel, which is the most enlarged matter of our joy. And let the children of Zion, the living members of Christ's church, be joyful in their King—Messiah, ever living to bless and make his people happy. Let them, these redeemed souls, praise his name in the sacred dance which on solemn occasions was used. Let them sing praises unto him with the timbrel and harp—As expressive of that sweeter melody they made unto God in their hearts, and without which the other were but prophanation. For the Lord taketh pleasure in his people—They are his in the Son of his love; he admits them into communion with himself, accepts their services, delights in their persons. He will beautify the meek with salvation—Who, lowly in their own eyes, are led to Jesus for salvation. These he beautifies with the graces of his spirit, and shortly will bring them perfected in holiness and happiness, where they shall shine as the stars in the firmament for ever and ever. Therefore let the saints, be joyful in glory—In hope of what they shall be. Let them sing aloud—Not ashamed of being heard, but triumphing in the salvation of God.

V. 6—9. A two-edged sword in their hand—Spiritually it may be interpreted of the sword of the spirit, (Eph. vi. 17. Heb. iv. 12.) which is sharp and piercing, convincing of sin, cutting down all human righteousness, and threatning eternal death to the soul. With this word in their mouths the apostles and preachers went forth, to fight against heathen idolatry and superstition, and to rebuke the people for their abominations: And the powerful effects of it soon appeared in the demolition of the idols and their temples, and the conversion of the Gentiles to God, who turned at their reproof. And the truths of the Scriptures are still to be used against all that is evil by whomsoever committed, to the end that the kingdom of the Prince of Peace may be spread and established in the earth, in opposition to satan's kingdom—all that is unholy, unjust, and wicked among men. To execute upon them the judgment written—On the nations of Canaan, and upon all the enemies of Christ. This honour have all the saints—All the blessings in this psalm recited are theirs; they shall be glorious in the eyes of God, and rejoice in his salvation.

PSALM CL.

V. 1—6. In his sanctuary—Or, in his holy One, Christ Jesus, for whom, and through whom, all the sacrifices of his people's praises ascend, and are accepted before God; and in the firmament of his power—Above, where angels ceaseless adore him, and where all that love his appearing will shortly join them in this happy service, who by his grace are renewed in his image, and possess that holiness without which no man shall see the Lord.
